STATE OF THE JUDICIARY REPORT

During the past ten years, court reform has become the byword of the judicial system both in Virginia and throughout the United States. Efforts to modernize the judicial process so as to make it more effective have been numerous. When reviewing court reform, most issues can be consolidated into four major components: a unified court structure, state financing for courts, an intermediate appellate court, and adequate compensation for judges and non-judicial personnel. In presenting the fourth annual State of the Judiciary Report, it is appropriate to relate the achievements and status of the courts during 1978 to these major areas of court reform.

Unified Court System

On December 10, 1973, the Virginia Court System Study Commission reported to the Governor and the General Assembly of Virginia its recommendations for reorganization of the Virginia courts. From that time, Virginia has been evolving rapidly toward a unified model of court organization. In order to evaluate the effectiveness of the Virginia courts as constituted in the resulting 1973 reorganization, the Judicial Council during 1978 commissioned the National Center for State Courts to conduct a major court system study. In addition to the evaluation, this study is charged with developing a blueprint for the future of the Virginia courts. The Council appointed an Ad Hoc Advisory Committee composed of distinguished judges and legislators to assist the National Center on this project.

While the final report of this study is not due until mid-1979, the initial observations are that Virginia's courts are much improved and extremely healthy. Court delay, which is the overriding concern in many court systems, is still not a major factor in Virginia. Notwithstanding the recognized improvements made since the reorganization, the study is pursuing alternatives aimed at further refinement of the judicial system.

Specifically the magistrate system is receiving close scrutiny. Even though the current magistrate system is a measurable improvement over the predecessor justice of the peace system, the present system lacks adequate administrative controls and sufficient training for magistrates. Proposals aimed at continuing the improvement of the magistrate system will be considered by the Judicial Council during 1979. Other areas being reviewed are the utilization of substitute judges in district courts, the administrative policy-making structure for the courts, the possible unification of the circuit courts and the appellate capacity of the court system. When completed, the recommendations from this study will identify clearly the remaining actions necessary to complete the court reform begun by the 1973 reorganization.

While the Court Organization Study is concerned with the broader questions of court structure, many other on-going projects are aimed at advancing the unification of Virginia's courts. One such project is the Computer Utilization Study. Instituted during late 1978, this project has identified and evaluated the extent of current automation within the courts statewide. The final product of this study will be a systems plan for computerization within the Virginia Judicial System. This plan will specify those administrative functions within the courts which are most suitable for automation and will provide a cost/benefit analysis of the feasibility of automation in the various sizes and types of courts. In addition, this plan will provide guidelines to facilitate the long range goal of developing a modern management information system.

Uniformity of practice and procedure is another vital element of a unified court system. The Judicial Council continues to plan an active role in recommending improvements in the Rules of Court to the Supreme Court. In an effort to achieve greater uniformity of practice throughout the entire court system, the Committee on

District Courts during 1978 completed work on a set of uniform Rules for the District Courts. While these Rules will be reviewed by the Judicial Council, the bench, and the bar prior to submission to the Supreme Court, this project is indicative of the constant effort to improve the operation of every court in Virignia.

Other areas in which great strides are being made to improve the district courts include the development of uniform forms for these courts, the publication of a District Court Procedures Manual and an intensified effort by the administrative office of the courts to provide greater technical assistance on a daily basis in the local courts.

While the circuit courts of our Commonwealth are more formal in structure and more stable in nature, they also have been involved in numerous projects to create greater uniformity. The four-year study for the development of a comprehensive set of civil and criminal model jury instructions is nearing conclusion. These instructions should be published by mid-1979 and should be an invaluable resource to both the bench and bar in their joint venture to improve the effectiveness of the administration of justice in Virginia. Of equal significance during 1978 was the development by the Judicial Conference of Virginia of a course of action aimed at improving the sentencing process. Not only has the conference outlined a course of continuing education for judges on sentencing, but the conference also specified the principle objectives and criteria that should be considered by a judge in determining an appropriate sentence. This, together with the establishment of a permanent committee of the Conference to make a continuous study of sentencing, indicates the sincere commitment of the judiciary to attain a high level of competency in exercising this critical function.

The planning capability inaugurated in 1977 gained further impetus during 1978. The multi-year Comprehensive Judicial Plan was amended to provide a clear indication of the direction of Virginia's courts through 1980. Many of the projects originally included in the plan have been accomplished, and this is a tribute to the involvement of the judiciary in the planning process. The continued development of such planning is a requirement if the courts are to stay abreast of trends in court administration.

State Financing

The responsibility for the financial support of the court system is appropriately a function of state government. With the exception of the circuit court clerks' offices and all facilities and equipment, a unified judicial branch budget now exists in Virginia. This principle was strengthened further during 1978 by repeal of the requirement that the localities make a contribution toward the support of the district court system. Both this provision and the elimination of any local contribution to the salaries of circuit court judges are effective in July 1980. At the same time all court fees will be directed to the state's general fund. These changes provide a much more logical financing structure for the state courts.

Also during 1978 the administrative office of the courts assumed responsibility for the criminal fund. This appropriation provides for the payment of court-appointed counsel, witnesses, jurors, and similar expenditures. Having the judicial system responsible for these funds, together with the development of an automated budget tracking system, will allow much greater fiscal management of the resources available to the judicial system.

While the extraordinary growth in judicial business has produced an increased need for funds, the unified budgeting process has made possible greater accountability and information about the financing of court operations. During 1978-80, the state budget for the judicial system is $68,891,810. As large as it is, this figure is miniscule when compared to the spending of state government as a whole. Furthermore, the trend is that the courts continue to produce more revenue than is required to operate them.

In developing the blueprint for the future of the Virginia judicial system, it is apparent that more resources must be committed to the courts. The courts can no longer overlook the development of needed improvements. Wise investment of funds in court improvements now will preclude crisis reactions in the future and will insure that the mission of the system is accomplished to best serve the citizens of Virginia.

Intermediate Appellate Court

In 1973, the Court System Commission recommended that an intermediate appellate court be established, however, the proposal was not enacted by the General Assembly. Since this proposal, the only substantial relief given the Court has been the addition of staff attorneys and the recently granted authority of retired justices to serve as senior justices. While these measures have provided assistance, they must be regarded as limited in the amount of relief they can provide.

The Supreme Court of Virginia has by far the greatest number of cases and the highest caseload per judge of the twenty-two supreme courts without intermediate courts. In addition, Virginia has the largest population of any state without an intermediate court. The number of appeals filed has increased fourfold in the past two decades. The Court nevertheless remains fairly current in criminal cases through use of time saving procedures, however, civil cases require approximately fourteen months from date of trial to the issuance of an opinion by the Supreme Court. Can the court continue to stay reasonably current and still perform the traditional roles of an appellate court?

All appellate courts perform two distinguishable functions. One is to examine the results reached in lower courts to assure conformity to existing law; the other is to redefine and develop the body of law. These functions must be kept in rough balance or the court system will falter. In my opinion, the Supreme Court has reached the point of saturation. All of the justices have a great concern that they do not have time enough to research issues and prepare opinions adequately in order to perform the Court's role in developing the law.

For these reasons, I am reiterating my support for the creation of an intermediate appellate court to hear in the first instance all appeals from the circuit courts. The creation of such a court should provide the appropriate appellate capacity necessary to augment the improved trial structure established in 1973.

Compensation

Judges should receive salary and related compensation appropriate to their official responsibilities. The salary structure should be adequate to assure that highly qualified people can be attracted to the bench and can continue to serve without undergoing economic hardship. While judicial salaries have improved during recent years, reevaluation of compensation levels due to changing economic conditions must follow periodically. Judicial salaries should never again be allowed to lag significantly behind the salary levels of equivalent professional positions.

The judicial retirement system is an integral part of the compensation package for Virginia judges. Since judges have different career patterns in public service than other employees of government, a judicial retirement system cannot be established on an actuarially sound basis unless the state contribution is high. Notwithstanding this requirement, our current judicial retirement system acknowledges the special circumstances of the judicial office. Various study commissions are at work reviewing the need to make more equitable and fiscally sound the entire retirement program for all state employees. While these efforts are to be commended, no actions should be taken which will affect the ability of persons elected to the bench at advanced ages to achieve maximum retirement benefits by the normal retirement age.

It is equally important to maintain a well-informed judiciary through continuing education programs. During 1978, Virginia has continued to be a nationwide leader in providing such education to all segments of the judicial system. Particularly worthy of note is the Evening College for judges which commenced during the fall semester of 1978. Judges from every level of the trial bench returned to the law school classrooms to participate in semester long courses on topics of importance to their everyday duties. These programs were offered one night each week at Virginia law schools and required a significant investment of the judge's personal time. Once again the dedication of our judiciary is evidenced by its attendance at these courses.

In addition to the existing educational programs, several new courses were implemented during 1978. These programs include: training for circuit court clerks, mandatory training for district clerks, formal orientation programs for judges, clerks, and magistrates, as well as tours of correctional and mental health facilities throughout the state. Similarly, a pilot project providing a law clerk research pool for circuit court judges was begun in 1978. Those judges who have used the services of this project have been pleased with the work product and have indicated that such a program allows for a more effective utilization of judicial time.

The Future

During 1978, the commenced caseloads rose throughout the court system. On the circuit court level, the total commenced caseload rose to 125,058 or 6.5% higher than 1977. The district court system reported a total of 1,596,654 general district court cases and 176,052 juvenile and domestic relations district court cases. The figures represent increases of 7.8% and 8.4%, respectively. The future will likely present even higher caseloads. Projections suggest that circuit court cases will rise at a rate of 5.1% per year while district court cases will increase by 4.8% per annum.

What do these increases in workload mean for the court system? Increases in workload will require the court system to become even more productive. Personnel are expensive, thus the increase in the number of new positions in the court system must be reduced through increased efficiency. The court system must be flexible and able to adapt to a changing society. The court system must plan better by taking a more active role in shaping its destiny. Better professional management will enable our courts to absorb increased workloads and to adjudicate disputes in a just and economical fashion. Our court system in 1978 in healthy, but we believe as Thomas Edison did when he said, "At any given time there is a better way, the challenge is to find it." We have accepted this challenge and will unswervingly seek improvement in order to retain the respect of the citizen of Virginia.

SUPREME COURT OF VIRGINIA

In August 1979, the Virginia Supreme Court will commemorate a long and illustrious history which began in seventeenth century Jamestown. In the Virginia colony's original Charter of 1606, King James I provided for the Governor and his Council to undertake any necessary judicial proceedings. A judiciary was created in 1623 by the House of Burgesses consisting of monthly or county courts, composed of persons appointed by the governor with the advice of his Council. Originally, these persons were called commissioners and later justices. The Governor's Council, with any five constituting a quorum, formed the appellate court. They heard appeals from the county courts, sitting on the first day of March, June, September, and December. Hence the first appeals court was known as the Quarter Court.

By 1661, the number of terms was reduced to three and the Quarter Court became the General Court with original and appellate jurisdiction in both civil and criminal matters. Prior to 1696, a General Court decision could be appealed to the Grand Assembly, but after that date the right of appeal was taken away, leaving the General Court as a court of last resort for Virginia colonists except in those rare circumstances when an appeal could be made to the King in England. Members of the General Court were appointed by the King on the basis of social standing, property, and the proximity of their estates to the Williamsburg capital. Though the judges were generally most capable, the majority possessed no formal legal training. They relied on their own judgment rather than their knowledge of legal precedent. By 1684, the Genreal Court met only twice a year in April and October and continued to operate in this manner until the American Revolution.

At the close of the war, according to Hening's Statute's at Large of Virginia (1775-78), the court was reorganized by an October 1778 act of the new General Assembly. This Court of Appeals was to be composed of judges from the other three existing courts: the Admiralty, the General, and the Chancery. This act prescribed the oath, terms, jurisdiction, etc. In may 1779, the legislature passed another act constituting the Court of Appeals, repeating for the most part the earlier act and stating, "So much of a former act, as comes within the preview of this act, is hereby repealed."

Under this act, Edmund Pendleton, George Wythe, John Blair, Benjamin Waller, Richard Cary, and William R. W. Curle convened in Williamsburg on Monday, August 30, 1779, for the purpose of organizing the first Court of Appeals. The judges were not issued new commissions as the legislature had determined that their commissions for seats in the lower courts were sufficient. George Wythe and John Blair administered the prescribed oath of office to Edmund Pendleton, the President. Pendleton then administered the oath to the other five judges. The Clerk of Court, the Cryer, and the Bailiff (Tipstaff) were also appointed and their respective oaths administered.

Interrupted by the British invasion of Virginia at the end of the Revolution, the Court adjourned until December 16, 1779. On this date, the Court heard its first actual case involving claims to land under survey. Thereafter the Court convened on the tenth day of April and met continuously for twenty-four secular days unless they were able to complete their business sooner.

Among the Court's first members were several distinguished legal scholars and jurists as well as leaders of the Revolutionary period. Until 1788, the judges did not render written opinions or give reasons for their decisions. Pendleton felt that the policy of no written opinions preserved a semblance of unity for the court and lent more credence to their decisions. The cases decided by the first court of Appeals at its August 1779 term through 1788 were reported by Daniel Call. Since the endeavor was undertaken as a private enterprise, the decisions were not published until 1833.

The seven justices of today's Supreme Court meet the first Monday in October and thereafter every seventh Monday until completion of the June docket. A regular session lasts five weekdays with a short session of three days being held in late August or early September. The Court possesses both original and appellate jurisdiction. Original jurisdiction may be invoked only by way of petitions for mandamus, prohibition, and habeas corpus. The appellate jurisdiction is invoked by appeal or writ of error attacking the judgement of the trial court. The Virginia Supreme Court's caseload is very large and exceeds that of comparable courts. The Court ranks the highest in number of filings and dispositions of any other state court without an intermediate court. The second highest is the District of Columbia which handles twenty percent of fewer appeals with two more judges. The Virginia Court also has more appeals per judge than other courts. The review of petitions for appeals is handled by the Supreme Court's Chief Staff Attorney whose staff of law clerks prepare legal memoranda to assist the Court in determining which cases should be argued before the full Court.

In addition to its appellate functions of examining results reached in lower courts and of redefining and developing the body of state law, the Supreme Court is also responsible for the general supervision of the entire Virginia Judicial System. The Court is assisted in its administrative function by the Office of the Executive Secretary which was established in 1952 as one of the first state court administrator's offices. The Supreme Court is also authorized to make rules of procedure and practice and to advise as to changes in the organization of the lower courts.

SUPREME COURT ACTIVITY FOR 1978

The number of petitions filed with the Supreme Court of Virginia was 1,846 during 1978. This represented a decrease of 4.6% over the petitions filed in 1977. The workload of the Court had experienced a sharp rise in the previous three years. Petitions filed increased by 53.8% during that period. The Court acted upon 1,692 petitions in 1977, which was 11.2% higher than the 1,521 acted upon in 1976. Chart I shows the number of petitions filed and acted upon during the period from 1970 to 1978.

The petitions acted upon included a total of 1,620 appeals. This was a 13.2% increase over the 1,431 appeals considered in 1976. There were 614 civil appeals, 925 criminal appeals, and 81 habeas corpus. The number of civil appeals increased by 35 over 1977's total of 614. Criminal appeals have increased 109 from 1977. The number of habeas corpus appeals increased by 45. Civil appeals have risen during the period from 1970 to 1978 by 98.7% while criminal appeals have increased 115.6%. The number of civil and criminal appeals acted upon from 1969 through 1978 are graphically represented in Chart II.

Original jurisdiction cases totaled 271 in 1977, which was a 3.8% increase over the previous year. Writs of habeas corpus and writs of mandamus increased by six and three, respectively. Writs of prohibition increased by one. There were 47 petitions withdrawn in 1978. The decline of 11 over 1977 was a 19% change.

The Supreme Court had 612 petitions pending at the end of 1977 and 583 pending at the end of 1978. The Chief Justice and Justices had 131 (22.5%) the legal staff had 317 (54.4%), and the clerk's Office had 135 (23.2%). Of the 135 petitions in the Clerk's Office, 65 were awaiting brief from the opposition, four were awaiting additional information from the trial courts, 32 were waiting for an answer and 34 were in various stages of preparation. Only 454 petitions were actually awaiting decision. The 454 represent 24.0% of the total petitions acted upon during 1978. This represents a slight decrease from the 525 pending in 1977.

The Supreme Court sampled processing time in January 1977. The average time to answer a petition was 114 days for criminal cases and 151 days for civil cases. These averages compare with the 109-day average in 1973-74. The average time span from first filing to announcement of decision was 306 days for criminal cases and 310 days for civil cases. The Court allows 40 days for transcription and opening brief, 25 days for the brief in opposition, and 14 days for the reply brief. The average time for the sample was 89 days. The time allowed for filing a petition is four months[1] and averages 121 days. If the time required for filing all briefs and the time required to act on the petition are excluded, the Court reaches its final decision on the average in 103 days for criminal cases and 70 days for civil cases. This compares favorably with the 133 days reported for all cases in 1973-74.

Since the Court acted upon 1,891 petitions in 1978, it can be inferred that the 454 pending petitions would take approximately 2.9 months to complete and therefore, a new petition would normally be acted upon in 86 days. The change in this figure from 1975 (88) to 1976 (92) to 1977 (110) to 1978 (86) reflects the changing workload of the Supreme Court.

The Court granted 237 petitions in 1977 and 274 in 1978. Of the cases disposed of during the same period, 149 were through written opinions and 81 through orders. Of the cases decided by written opinions, 76 affirmed the judgment of the lower courts and 73 reversed in total or in part the lower court's decision.

Many of the activities of the Court are enumerated on the tables that follow. Included are detailed statistics for 1978.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF VIRGINIA CIRCUIT COURT SYSTEM

Introduction

The I'Anson Commission made specific recommendations in 1971 regarding the Commonwealth's courts of record. The 1973 Virginia General Assembly reorganized and restructured the Circuit Court as the trial court of general jurisdiction in the Commonwealth. The Circuit Court has exclusive original criminal jurisdiction in all cases involving a possible sentence to the State Penitentiary. Its exclusive jurisdiction extends to all civil controversies where the claim exceeds $5,000. It exercises concurrent civil jurisdiction with the District Court when the claim is between $1,000 and $5,000. The lower limit was increased from $500 by the 1978 Legislature. Circuit Courts have jurisdiction of proceedings by quo warranto and to issue writs of mandamus, prohibition, and certiorari to all inferior tribunals. They also issue writs of mandamus in all matters or proceedings arising from or pertaining to the actions of the board of supervisors or other governing body of any county. The appellate jurisdiction extends to all cases, civil and criminal, in which appeal may, as provided by law, be taken from the judgment of any inferior tribunal.

The Judicial Council revised and enlarged the Circuit Courts as part of the reorganization. The General Assembly established thirty-one judicial circuits. The Thirteenth Judicial Circuit (Richmond City) was subdivided into two divisions by statute. The number of judges authorized per circuit was set by statute. Legislation provided for 107 Circuit Court judges in 1978. The number of judges per circuit ranged from a minimum of two in twelve circuits to a maximum of nine in the Fourth Circuit (Norfolk City). In each circuit, a chief judge is selected by peer vote for a two year term. The chief judge of a circuit is authorized to assign the work of the circuit between judges, and, in doing so, may consider the nature and categories of cases to be assigned.

Additional Judgeships

The Judicial Council is charged with the duty of studying the need for additional circuit court judges. In 1975 the Judicial Council altered its procedures for determining the need for additional circuit court judges and for changes in circuit lines. Prior to this change, cases commenced and population were the primary guidelines. Recognizing the inadequacies of total reliance of these criteria, the Council adopted a dual analysis mechanism.

As the administrative office for the judicial system, the Office of the Executive Secretary was advised that in addition to providing a thorough statistical evaluation of the judicial workload, visits should be conducted to each circuit requesting an additional judge. Court dockets should be reviewed and judges, clerks, commonwealth attorneys, members of the bar, and other such individuals having a knowledge of the court system in that circuit should be interviewed. The Council concluded that additional judges should be authorized in a circuit whenever all procedures short of adding a judge have been exhausted; whenever the administrative efficiency of the court was at a high level; and whenever the existing judges were working to maximum capacity and yet were still unable to handle the caseload in the expeditious fashion desired by the bar and general public. The only way to assure the sound, effective, and speedy administration of justice was to insure that sufficient judicial resources are available.

Three additional judgeships were created by the 1977 Session of the General Assembly. The creation of new circuit court judgeships was accomplished for the Fifth, Fourteenth, and Twenty-Third Judicial Circuits. Judges Williams (5th), Wallace (14th), and Trabue (23rd) were appointed to the bench on July 1, 1977. In addition, Prince William County was separated from the Nineteenth Circuit and District and established as an independent circuit and district effective July 1, 1977.

During 1978 the Council received two requests for additional circuit court judgeships. One request was made by the Nineteenth Judicial Circuit, while the other was submitted by the Thirty-First Judicial Circuit. The Judicial Council received a comprehensive report of the workload of the judges in the Nineteenth Circuit, both as to statistical data and as to the more subjective personal views of the individuals involved.

Based upon the Council's recommendation, the General Assembly approved the creation of an additional circuit court judgeship in the Nineteenth Judicial Circuit effective July 1, 1979. F. Bruce Bach will transfer from the General District Court to fill the vacancy. As to the request from the Thirty-First Judicial Circuit, the Council recommended that no action be taken on that request until further study could be conducted during 1979.

Caseload Analysis

Chapter 544 of the 1973 Virginia Acts of Assembly, which was approved on March 20, 1973, provided for the enactment into law of a number of amendments to the Code of Virginia, specifically, the amendment and reenactment of sections 8-142, 8-373, 8-377, 14.1-33, 14.1-144.1, 15.1-19, 15.1-1030, 17-7, 17-7.1, 17-26, 17-103, 17-111.1, 17-120, 17-122, 17-123, 17-129, 17-226, 26-8, 26-9, 26-10, 26-10.1, 26-12, and 46.1-367; the addition of sections numbered 117-116.1 through 17-116.4, 17-119.1:1, 17-119.1:2, 17-122.1, and 17-127.21; and the repeal of sections numbered 8-208.1, 15.1-1014, 15.1-1015, 17-111, 17-119, 17-119.1, 17-127, 17-127.1 through 17-127.20, Chapters 5, 6, 7, 8, 8.1, and 8.2 of Title 17, containing sections numbered 17-135 through 17-221.29, section 19.2-161, Article 3 of Chapter 9 of Title 19.1, containing sections numbered 19.1-194 through 19.1-219, and section 26-11. These changes allowed for the continuance of the circuit as an administrative unit and provided for the consolidation of all city courts into the circuits, the elimination of specialized courts, and the revision and enlargement of the circuits to the extent that no circuit presently operates with fewer than two judges. Although several of these sections have undergone further amendment since 1973, their effects on the structure of the court system, just described, have remained basically unchanged. The recommendation in the commentary that "(t)he details of consolidation of clerks' offices, choosing a chief clerk, and so forth, should be left to the judges of the resulting circuit . . ." was adopted in Section 17-116.1(c). The recommendation that the Judicial Council be authorized and directed to determine the alignment of the circuits was not adopted. Rather, the alignment was determined by the General Assembly in Section 17-119.1:1. While numerous statutory changes were made in order to eliminate reference to "city courts of record," this language remains in Section 15.1-19.

Section 17-222 provided for the enlargement of the Judicial Council so that its membership consists of five circuit court judges, one general district court judge, one juvenile and domestic relations district court judge, two attorneys qualified to practice in the Supreme Court, and the chairman of the Committees for Courts of Justice of the Senate and the House of Delegates.

During 1978, the circuit courts commenced 125,058 new cases, which was 6.6% higher than the 117,351 commenced cases of 1977. The rate of growth between 1976 and 1977 was 9.9%. From 1970 through 1978, the caseload of the circuit courts increased by approximately fifty-eight percent. No judges were added during 1978. The 1,169 commenced cases per judge was also 6.6% higher than the previous year. This was the tenth straight annual increase in the average cases commenced per judge for the circuit courts.

The circuit courts terminated 115,244 cases during the year. This was 3,551 more than concluded in 1977 and represented an increase of 3.2%. The 1,077 concluded cases per judge was 33 higher than the 1977 average. A comparison of cases commenced and cases concluded was graphically displayed in Chart II.

Caseload Composition

The composition of the 1978 commenced caseload was 22.3% law, 35.2% equity, 23.5% felony, 18.6% misdemeanor, and 0.4% habeas corpus/post conviction. In 1977, the cases were distributed as 21.7% law, 36% equity, 23.5% felony, and 18.3% misdemeanor. The total number of cases in each category (law, equity, felony, and misdemeanor cases) increased. This reversed a trend for law, which had decreased during the preceeding year. Chart III provides a graph of the four categories of new cases from 1968 through 1977 and includes habeas corpus for 1977.

The increase in law cases was 9.7% while the increases in equity, felony, and misdemeanor cases were 4.3%, 5.7%, and 8.3%, respectively. Felony cases increased by 1,592 cases or 20.7% of the total increase in new cases. Felonies per hundred persons rose from .47 in 1976 to .55 in 1977, and to .57 in 1978. Equity cases increased by 1,821 and accounted for 23.6% of the additional caseload. Chart IV provides percentage distribution charts of cases commenced, concluded, and pending.

The most significant change through the past four years in the composition of the commenced caseload was the gradual shift of civil to criminal cases. The 1975 composition was 60.2% civil and 39.8% criminal. In 1976 the distribution was 59.9% civil, 40.1% criminal. Even though equity cases rose sharply in 1977, the composition was 57.7% civil and 42.0% criminal. These percentages remained stable in 1978. Civil accounted for 57.5% of the caseload while criminal gained .1% to 42.1% of the total number of new cases. This shift in case type is significant. Criminal cases require more time and are more costly for society. When new cases contain a high percentage of criminal cases, the total increase in workload is larger than the strict interpretation of the figures would show.

Increased Demand for Court Services

The average population per judge in 1976 was 47,753. This was based on the one hundred and four authorized judgeships. In 1970, this figure was 46,984 and was 47,025 in 1977 due to the addition of the three judgeships. This grew to 47,986 in 1978.

In spite of the fact that the population per judge has remained fairly stable, the need for court services in Virginia has increased at a much faster rate than the population growth rate. In 1960 there were 1.37 commenced cases per every one-hundred persons in Virginia. By 1970, this ratio had increased to 1.71. In 1976 this ratio had become 2.15; during 1977 the ratio rose to 2.32 commenced cases per hundred persons, and to 2.44 in 1978. Every year since 1966 has demonstrated an increase in the relative frequency of court involvement by Virginia citizens. Chart IV illustrates this involvement.

Pending Caseload

Despite the increase in concluded cases for the circuit courts during the year, the number of concluded cases was less than the number of new cases. This has been the trend since 1966, and therefore, the number of pending cases has been constantly increasing. The pending caseload at the close of 1978 was 9.7% more than at the end of 1976. The total pending cases numbered 111,388. Chart II shows the pending caseload from 1968 through 1978. The relative size of the 1978 pending caseload was slightly more than the previous year. Relative pending caseload is found by dividing the absolute pending caseload at the end of the year by the number of cases disposed of during the year. This ratio was .96 in 1978, .91 in 1977, .92 in 1976, .93 in 1975, and .96 in 1974. The pending caseload may appear to be large. However, it does not necessarily indicate a burden upon court time, nor does it reveal delay in case processing. In order to better understand the pending caseload, it is necessary to realize that whether out of preference or strategy, some cases simply "mature" on the docket until a more favorable time. There cases may not represent an immediate demand of judicial resources but merely a deferred normal expenditure of bench time. It should be remembered that courts must have pending caseloads. The court's inventory of cases is a natural level of pending cases. Cases awaiting the next term of court, cases such as divorce which require a time delay, involved civil cases, and criminal cases involving fugitives, all represent pending cases through no fault of the court. In fact, criminal cases, in which the defendants' rights to speedy trial are in question, had a decrease in their pending level of 11.5%. Thus before one attempts to study pending caseload, many factors should be taken into account.

Jury Trials

The circuit courts reported 2,719 jury trials involving criminal cases and 1,663 jury trials involving law actions. The total of 4,382 was 3.4% less than the 4,536 jury trials reported in 1977. Criminal jury trials increased by 131 while civil jury trials decreased by 285. Felony jury trials increased by 138 and misdemeanor jury trials remained unchanged. The ratio of jury trials to terminated cases establishes the frequency of cases involving jury trials. In 1976 these ratios were 8.6 jury trials per 100 law cases concluded, 8.1 jury trials per 100 felony cases concluded, and 3.8 jury trials per 100 misdemeanor cases concluded. These figures shifted to 8.3 for law, 6.7 for felony, and 3.7 for misdemeanor cases in 1977 and to 6.8, 7.2, and 3.2, respectively, in 1978. Thus law cases were twice as likely to result in a jury trial than were misdemeanor cases. Felony cases were in between in likelihood. While jury trials in felony cases increased sharply, the number of felony jury trial days dropped from 1,891 to 1,849 in 1978. Misdemeanor jury trials took 565 days and law jury proceedings required 2,453 days.

Appeals

Appeals from the general district court amounted to 18,741 new criminal cases and 2,003 appeals from the juvenile and domestic relations courts. There were 2,617 appeals of law actions. Thus a total of 20,791 new cases or 18.7% of the total commenced caseload was a result of appeals from the lower courts. This percentage was slightly lower at 17.7% in 1977.

A Profile of the Circuits

The judicial circuits of Virginia represent different geographic and varying demographic areas. Many demographic factors such as population, density, income level, racial composition, and industrialization contribute to both the number of cases, types of cases, and the complexity of the cases. While some circuits are mostly urban in nature, other circuits are basically rural. In an urban circuit, the judge sits in only one court, while in a rural circuit the judge usually sits in two or more courts.

While absolute caseload figures give some degree of comparison for understanding court burdens, they are not ideal. By examining circuits of similar caseload composition, one can improve the comparison. The thirty-one circuits have been divided into two groups: one-half with the highest percentage of new civil cases and the other half with the highest percentage of new criminal cases. After performing this separation of the circuits, one can make the following observations: The circuits with the highest percentage of civil cases have a lower commenced caseload per judge, a lower concluded caseload per judge, and a higher pending caseload per judge than the second group of circuits. The second group of circuits has a higher percentage of criminal cases and a higher concluded and lower pending caseload. Criminal cases proceed through the judicial system faster than civil cases, and therefore criminal cases would contribute to more concluded cases and leave fewer pending cases.

Further, if one compares the fourteen urban circuits with the seventeen rural circuits, it can be found that the urban circuit judges average a higher commenced, concluded, and pending caseload than their rural counterparts. This is understandable, as rural circuit judges usually serve more than one court and therefore spend some time traveling. If one takes into account both the composition of a circuit's caseload and the fact that it is a rural or an urban circuit, a more equitable comparison can be made.

A Note

It is normal for a reader of this report to directly compare the workload of one court with another or one judge with another. Caution should be applied in so doing. No one standard of performance can be fairly applied in such a comparison. Judges are highly trained in the law. Few of them come to the bench with any experience or training in the field of administration. It is a tribute to the judges that they are able to manage their courts and dispense justice simultaneously. The fruit of the judicial process is a high quality of justice. That degree of justice cannot be measured but must be maintained. In some particular situations, the following statistics will show a high volume of cases and a relatively long period of time until trial, this is not to criticize judicial ability but merely to highlight those courts in need of assistance or attention in order to maintain a high quality of justice.

Although it is true that "justice delayed is justice denied," it is equally true that the courts cannot sacrifice the quality of justice for mere quantity of cases processed. Any method developed to speed up the judicial process must be done in a manner to insure that justice is not denied for the sake of expediency and efficiency in handling an ever increasing volume of cases.

CIRCUIT COURT
JUDICIAL WORKLOAD ANALYSIS
INTRODUCTION

The Judicial Workload Analysis System is the second part of the Circuit Court Caseload Reporting System. Implementation began September 1, 1977, in approximately four courts. Case weighting is a fundamental complement to the caseload reporting system. One case of one type is not necessarily equal to one case of a different type. The number of cases alone does not indicate how much work caseload represents. Two reporting forms provide the data for this system: Daily Courtroom Activity Sheet and Daily Chambers Activity Sheet. The courtroom sheet is maintained by the clerk; completing the chambers sheet is the judge's responsibility.

REPORTING FORMS

Each form has a set of reporting guidelines and definitions printed on the reverse side for easy reference. These guidelines are also expanded in the workload section of the User's Guide. The workload forms are designed in a diary-style format to permit the recording of pertinent data at the time of activity. No subsequent computation is required of the judges and clerks. The computer calculates the elapsed time. The two forms capture a record of all judicial activity and associated times during a regular workday in the courthouse. In addition, the travel time between courthouses is recorded for a judge who rides circuit.

The following types of information are requested:

Case type
Time
Type and number of activities
Number of cases terminated

The workload forms use the same civil and criminal case type headings as the Monthly Caseload Reports. Case-related activities are logged according to one of the nine types of cases.

Time is reported by noting as nearly as possible the start and stop clock-times for an activity or group of activities. Predetermined types of activity are assigned code numbers. Numbers are used to standardize activity definitions and reduce writing requirements. The courtroom sheet has eighteen activity types, the chambers form has only six.

If several cases involving the same activity (for example, pre-trial hearing) are heard consecutively, the number of times that activity occurred in the time period is indicated.

The number of cases terminated as a result of each type of activity also is entered. This information is used to relate time utilized to cases adjudicated. The monthly report cannot be used because it covers four, not two, weeks.

Two additional forms complete the workload sytem. The Clerk's Summary Sheet is forwarded by the Office of the Executive Secretary to each court to notify when the timing of its activities started. Courts received this notification not more than ten days before their start date. At the conclusion of the two weeks, the Clerk's Summary Sheet was returned to the Executive Secretary with the completed workload forms.

The other form was titled Judge's Summary Sheet. It was submitted by the judge and contained information relating to time taken away from normal courthouse activity for personal or official reasons any time during the previous twelve months. The categories for which time (in days) were reported are:

Vacation
Sick
Judicial Conference
Judicial Education out-of-state
Other Professional
Other Personal

This form established the number of days an average judge was unavailable for judicial duties in the courthouse. Given the existing structure of Virginia's circuit courts, particularly the rural courts, this was the simplest method of establishing a statewide average for time available for courtroom or chambers activity.

JUDGE YEAR STANDARD

The judges reported that they used on the average 14.8 vacation days, 3 sick days, 4.5 conference days, 1 out-of-state education day, 2 days for other professional, 1.7 days for personal, and there were 11 holidays. The total days not on the bench or in chambers performing judicial activities averaged 38.4 days. Subtracting this from the possible working days (260), the average number of working days was 221.6. The American Bar Association bench standard is 4 hours per day. An estimate of 3 hours per day was given for non-bench time. Thus, the judge standard value is 1,551.2 hours per year.

VIRGINIA'S CASE-WEIGHTING CONCEPT

The case-weighting system for Virginia conformed to what has become almost standard weighting methodology, though it was tailored to the Virginia "climate" and needs, specifically in terms of a sampling philosophy. The categories set out on the timing sheets corresponded to the major case-type categories reported on the monthly report forms. Average times for the activities associated with these major case-type categories were established by actually timing the courts for a set period. The total time reported per case-type was divided by the number of dispositions per case-type to yield the case-type average for a disposition. This figure represented the amount of judicial time the average case was expected to require. Finally, these case-type averages were multiplied by a court's filings for each case-type to provide judicial workload. Multiplying the case-type averages by a court's disposition figures provided a picture of the amount of work accomplished by a particular circuit given its own resources. Figure 1 demonstrates these calculations.

The judicial workload was placed against the time available to the average judge for disposing of cases. This figure (the "judge-year-value") was based on the information on available days provided by the judges, but was the result of a policy decision of the Judicial Council of Virginia. The figure may be higher, lower or the same amount of time as an individual judge actually uses, but is representative of what could be expected from most judges. Comparing workload with available judge-years permitted a conclusion as to whether or not circuits are appropriately staffed.

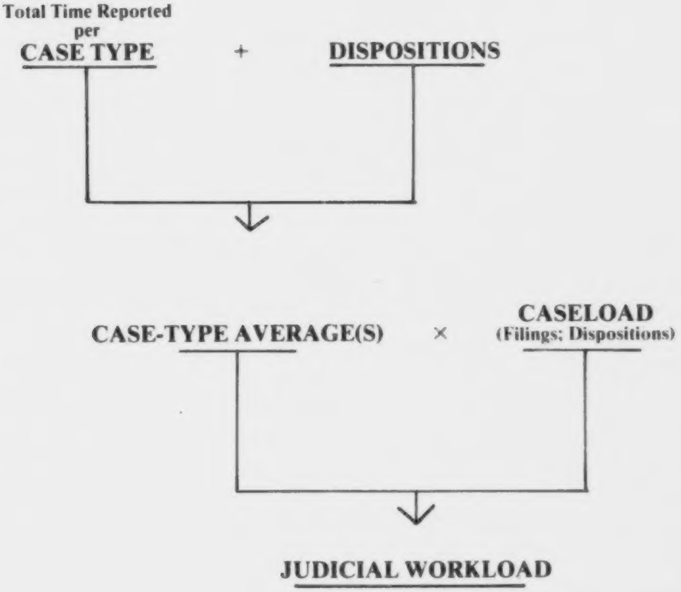
SAMPLING

Each circuit court participated in determination of appropriate weights, but only for two weeks and only once a year. This sampling began September 1, 1977, and continued through August 1978. Several factors helped determine the schedule for collecting weighting data. The starting date and length of each court's term and the size of the court were two factors. The schedule was divided into "beginning," "intermediate," and "end" for each month due to the different starting times of each court's term. "Beginning" meant the court's work is timed in the first two weeks of the month; "intermediate" meant work can be timed for any two weeks in the middle of a month (as determined by the Office of the Executive Secretary); and "end" means a court's work was timed in the last two weeks of the month.

The sampling differed from other weighting systems in two respects: all, rather than a sample of courts participated, but courts participated for only two weeks rather than two or more months. If weights represented the time needed to dispose of an average case, the timing covered cases from beginning to end. But the average case may have taken months or years to terminate. It was neither practical nor desirable in most cases to ask judges and clerks to time their activities over an extended period. The "term of court" system in Virginia provided a helpful reference period, however, because most courts have a "docket call" at the start of each term. Many cases, particularly criminal, start and end in a single term. Thus, timing different courts at the beginning, in the middle, or at the end of their terms provided a statistically acceptable picture of an "average" case for the state from filing to termination.

A two-week period was chosen for two reasons. First, time information was of increasingly questionable reliability the longer the timing continues. Second, two weeks seemed to be the minimum time for collecting useful data, since the shortest terms were at least a month in length. It was expected that when 122 two-week periods were combined, the statistical picture would be similar to that which would be produced by a longer sampling period. A number of circuit judges in rural Virginia "ride" circuit. Circuit riding may have complicated the data gathering system, but it was believed that the system devised could accommodate these complications.

ESTABLISHING CASE-WEIGHTS



FINAL RESULTS

Based on the weighting period from September 1977 through August 1978, weights were generated for each category of case. These reflected the average amount of time for each case that was considered in the sample. A particular case may have taken more or less time to complete disposition.

On the civil side, condemnations have a weight of 116. This means that on the average a condemnation case requires 116 minutes of judicial time. The weights for other civil cases are 89 for appeals, 125 for other law, 48 for divorce, and 87 for chancery cases.

During the sampling period there were 56,514 commenced and 53,599 concluded civil cases. The weighted commenced and weighted concluded were found by multiplying the individual case weights by the total cases in each category of civil and criminal. There were 56,514 commenced criminal cases and 53,599 concluded cases. The weights by category of criminal case were 88 for Class 1 and 2 felony, 58 for other felony, and 24 for misdemeanor cases. A habeus corpus/post conviction matter required 116 minutes.

Dividing the weighted commenced by the judicial standard yielded the number of judges required for new cases. This was 96.6 for the entire circuit court system. In a similar way, the number of judges needed to dispose of the caseload was calculated as 87.8. The actual number of circuit court judges was 107.

Table CW-1 shows the weighted commenced and weighted concluded judgeships for each of the thirty-one circuits.

JUDICIAL PREDICTOR EQUATION

There are numerous factors which influence the number of judgeships required for a particular area. Some of these factors are quantifiable while others are not. In the district courts, two techniques were used to estimate judicial workload. Bench times were sampled to determine the average amount of time needed to hear particular types of cases. This is very similar to the method used in the Circuit Court Workload Analysis System. Cases heard in the circuit courts are generally of a more serious and complex nature. The basic reporting of workload reflects this fact. However, in the district court analysis, caseload was not enough alone to predice the number of judges and a regression or predictor equation was established. This is described in detail under the District Court section.

The same technique has been applied to the circuit court workload analysis. Caseload alone is a good predictor. Graphs CW-2 and CW-3 show this. The idea is to construct a model of known, measureable variables which affect the number of judgeships required in each circuit. Two equations were generated: commenced and concluded predictors. The equations are a result of applying a conventional statistical technique, stepwise multilinear regression analysis, to the descriptive factors.

For the commenced predictor equation the variables are population, four civil case types, three criminal case categories, total caseload, the geographical makeup of the circuit, and the number of judges who travel in the circuit. The concluded predictor is based on the methods of disposition of civil and criminal cases as well as the factors given the above equation.

Both equations have high correlation with the number of judges and are statistically significant. The total civil commenced caseload is the best single predictor of judges with respect to commenced cases. The best single predictor for the concluded equation is the total civil concluded caseload. The results showed that based on commenced caseload there should be 104.66 judges. Based on concluded caseload the figure is 105.32 judges. There are currently 107 judges in the Commonwealth's circuit courts. Table CW-4 gives this information by circuit.

Several questions may be asked concerning the predictor equations. How many variables should be included? How well does the equation represent that data? Are there other factors which influence caseload and thus, the number of judges, which are not included? The answer to the third is yes. Many factors could be included. However, this is only an additional item which may be considered when determining judicial positions. It is not the ultimate answer. The equation derived statistics represent the data well. The number of variables included is limited to the information obtained through the Caseload Reporting System and simple observation.

FIRST JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The First Judicial Circuit serves the city of Chesapeake. The circuit is currently authorized two judgeships. Judges J. G. Bray, Jr., and W. H. Hodges sit in the First Circuit. Judge Bray is the chief circuit judge.

The population has increased over the past two decades. The 1960 census was 66,447 and the 1970 census was 89,580. The Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the 1977 population at 112,300. The Department of Planning and Budget projects the 1980 population to be 117,500. The population per judge based on the 1977 figure was 56,150. The First Circuit ranked ninth among the thirty-one judicial circuits. The state average population per judge was 47,986.

In 1978, the First Circuit commenced 2,485 cases. This was an increase of 266 cases or 12% over 1977. The state increase was 6.6%. The commenced caseload per judge was 1,243 cases for 1978 and ranked ninth among the fourteen urban circuits. This compared with the urban state mean of 1,169.

The circuit terminated 2,173 cases during 1977 and 2,245 in 1978. By comparison during 1976, the circuit disposed of 2,092 cases. There were 10 actions at law and 52 chancery causes removed by Virginia Code Section 8-154. The difference of 72 terminated cases between 1977 and 1978 represented a 3.3% increase. The pending caseload at the end of 1977 was 2,418 cases and rose to 2,658 at the close of 1978.

The composition of the 1977 caseload for the circuit was 28.2% law, 43.4% equity, 17.3% felony, and 11.1% misdemeanor. The figures indicated that the circuit's caseload was dominated by civil cases by a ratio of 2.5 civil cases for each criminal case. The 1978 composition of 29.3% law, 37.4% equity, 23.3% felony, and 10% misdemeanor revealed a similar pattern.

There were 95 jury trials in 1977 which was 39% less than the 156 jury trials heard in 1976. Jury trials in 1978 amounted to 105. The judges spent a total of 115 days hearing jury trials. Of these 70.4% of the days were for law proceedings, 20% of the days were felony proceedings, and 9.6% of the days involved misdemeanor cases.

In assigning trial dates for the 668 law cases, 82.3% were given dates less than ninety days from date of setting. In the 1,369 criminal cases assigned trial dates, 46.9% were not given dates during the term. The history of terminated cases revealed that 47.7% of the civil cases were concluded within one year. In addition, 84.5% of criminal cases were disposed of within five months of filing.

SECOND JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Second Judicial Circuit consists of the counties of Accomack and Northampton and the city of Virginia Beach. The circuit is authorized six judgeships. Judges Whitehurst, Russo, Owen, Lam, and Vakos sit in Virginia Beach. Judge Jacob is the resident judge for Accomack and Northampton. Judge Wahab retired December 31, 1978. Judge Whitehurst was appointed to the vacant position effective February 1, 1979.

The population of Virginia Beach has grown rapidly since 1960. The 1960 census and 1970 census reported the population at 85,218 and 172,106, respectively. The 1977 population of the Second Circuit was estimated at 285,500 by the Tayloe Murphy Institute. The Department of Planning and Budget projected the 1980 population to be 256,300. The population of the two counties on the Eastern Shore of Virginia decreased slightly from 47,601 in 1960 to an estimated 47,100 in 1977. The circuit increased in population from 132,819 in 1960 to 270,000 estimated in 1976 and is projected to be 306,100 in 1980. The population per judge based on 1977 population data was 47,583. The Second Circuit ranked twenty-fourth among the thirty-one circuits. The state average population per judge was 47,025.

The Second Circuit commenced 7,050 new cases during 1977 and 7,729 in 1978. This was an increase of 9.6% in total commenced cases. The commenced caseload per judge was 1,288 for 1978. The circuit ranked sixth among the fourteen urban circuits. The state mean was 1,169 during 1977.

The circuit disposed of 7,459 cases during 1978 as compared with 7,137 cases concluded in 1977. The difference of 322 cases represented an increase of 4.5%.

The 1977 commenced caseload was composed of 20.4% law, 37.6% equity, 20.7% felony, and 19.9% misdemeanor cases. During 1978 commenced cases were distributed as 20.9% law, 37.1% equity, 20.7% felony, and 21.1% misdemeanor. Thus, the type of new cases commenced changed only slightly from 1977 to 1978.

There were 148 jury trials during 1977 which was 27 less than the 175 jury trials conducted during 1976. In 1978 there were 132 jury trials. For 1978 the judges spent a total of 178 days hearing jury trials. Of these, 71% were law days and 26.4% were days in felony proceedings. Misdemeanor hearings accounted for 2.2% of the jury days.

In assigning trial dates for 1,712 law cases, 80.5% were given days within ninety days of the date of setting. In the 7,173 criminal cases assigned trial dates, 37.7% were given dates during the term. The history of terminated cases revealed that 43.9% of the civil cases were disposed of within one year. In addition, 60.5% of the criminal cases were concluded within five months of filing.

THIRD JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Third Judicial Circuit serves the city of Portsmouth. The circuit has an authorization of three judges. The judges in 1978 were Robert F. McMurran, chief circuit judge, R. Winston Bain, and William H. Oast, Jr. Judge McMurran retired on November 28, 1978, and was replaced by Lester E. Schlitz effective February 1, 1979.

The population of Portsmouth declined slightly since 1970. The population as determined by the 1970 census was 110,963. The Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the 1977 population at 109,300. The Department of Planning and Budget projected the 1980 population to be 105,500. The annual rate of change until the end of the century was approximately −0.4%. The population per judge based on the 1977 data was 36,433. The Third Circuit ranked twenty-seventh among the thirty-one circuits. The state average per judge was 47,986.

In 1978 the Third Circuit commenced 4,012 cases. This was 164 or 3.9% less than the 1977 commenced caseload. The state's new caseload increased 6.6% during this period. The commenced caseload per judge was 1,337 for 1978. The circuit ranked fifth among the fourteen urban circuits on this measure. The urban state mean was 1,169.

The circuit had 4,200 cases terminated during the 1977 year. The circuit terminated 4,062 cases during 1978. This represented a decrease of 3.3%. The pending caseload at the end of 1977 was 6,294 cases and 6,244 at the end of 1978. Pending caseload was recalculated at the end of 1977 and the apparent change from 1976 was attributable to the recount.

The composition of the 1977 caseload for the Third Circuit was 23.6% law, 21% equity, 25.1% felony, 30.1% misdemeanor, and .2% habeas corpus. The composition of the new cases in 1978 was 26.6% law, 19.1% equity, 28.3% felony, and 26.1% misdemeanor. The ratio of civil to criminal cases changed from approximately one to one in 1976 to a ratio of one to 1.24 in 1977, and reversed to one civil for each 1.19 criminal in 1978.

There were 188 jury trials heard in 1977 which was not a significant change from the 191 jury trials in 1976. This increased to 224 jury trials in 1978. The 1978 jury trials were 41.1% civil and 58.9% criminal in nature. The judges of the circuit spent a total of 162 days hearing the 1978 jury trials. These were divided into 59.5% law jury days, 37.7% felony jury days, and 6.2% misdemeanor jury days.

In assigning trial dates for the 622 civil cases, 54.5% were given dates more than ninety days from the date of setting. In the 2,177 criminal trial dates assigned, 21% were not given dates during the term. The history of terminated cases indicated that 49.8% of the civil cases were terminated within one year and 81.7% of the criminal cases were terminated within nine months of filing.

FOURTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

Norfolk City is the only locality designated in the Fourth Judicial Circuit. The circuit is currently authorized nine judgeships. The circuit had seven judgeships until 1968, when two additional judgeships were granted. One judgeship being added to the old Thirty-Second Circuit and the other to the Court of Law and Chancery of the City of Norfolk. Judge Gutterman serves as the chief judge.

The population of Norfolk was 307,951 by the 1970 census; however the population as estimated by the Tayloe Murphy Institute was 285,900 in 1977. The population based on the 1977 estimate was 31,767 per judge. Out of the thirty-one circuits only Richmond and the Fifth Circuit had smaller population per judge ratios. Twenty-five percent of the population was between the ages of twenty and twenty-nine. This age group has generally been associated with a high incidence of crime. The state's population between twenty and twenty-nine years of age was estimated at nineteen percent.

The circuit had 14,653 commenced cases in 1978 which was 2,044 cases higher than the 1977 caseload of 12,653. The 1978 caseload per judge of 1,628 commenced cases ranked first among the fourteen urban circuits. The average for circuits in the state was 1,169 cases per judge.

In 1977 the circuit concluded 12,309 cases which was 164 more cases than the 1977 dispositional level. Despite this increase, the new caseload grew at a higher rate and therefore the pending caseload at the end of 1978 rose from 6,884 cases to 9,228.

The composition of the caseload in 1977 was 19.6% law, 22.7% equity, 31.4% felony, and 26% misdemeanor. In 1978, these percentages were 18.4% law, 21.6% equity, 29.7% felony, and 30% misdemeanor. The state percentages contained a higher percentage of civil cases (23.5% law and 35.2% equity) with a lower percentage of criminal cases (23.5% felony and 18.6% misdemeanor).

Jury trials totaled 265 for 1978, 96 less than 1977. The judges spent a total of 351 days hearing jury trials. There were 68.9% of the days spent hearing law jury cases and 31.1% of the days in criminal jury trials.

Trial dates were assigned for 1,944 law hearings. Only 13.2% of these dates were set more than ninety days ahead. In criminal cases, 14,468 hearing dates were set. Of these, 38.5% were not set for the present term. The terminations history shows that 40.2% of the civil cases were concluded within one year. Of the 7,937 criminal cases terminated, 85.8% were disposed of within five months of filing and 8.8% more were disposed of during the period from six to nine months from filing.

FIFTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Fifth Judicial Circuit is comprised of Suffolk and Franklin cities and the counties of Southampton and Isle of Wight. The circuit is authorized three judgeships. The third judge was added to the circuit effective July 1, 1977. Judge James C. Godwin is the chief circuit judge. Judges Benjamin A. Williams, Jr., and E. Everett Bagnell also sit in the circuit.

The population of the Fifth Circuit was 88,771 by the 1970 census. The 1977 population was estimated at 92,400 by the Tayloe Murphy Institute. The city of Suffolk has approximately one-half the total population of the circuit and is expected to show most of the future growth. The 1980 population is projected as 96,600. The population per judge based on the 1977 popualtion was 30,800 which ranked the Fifth Circuit thirtieth among the thirty-one circuits.

The new caseload in 1977 was 2,028 cases, and increased to 2,273 in 1978. This was 12.1% more than the total cases commenced in 1977. The commenced cases per judge was 758. The circuit was last among the thirty-one circuits. The state mean for commenced cases per judge was 1,169.

The circuit disposed of 1,938 cases in 1977 and 1,998 in 1978. This was only 3.1% more than the number of cases disposed of during 1977. The pending caseload at the end of 1977 was 1,809 cases and increased to 2,084 at the close of 1978.

The 1977 new caseload for the circuit consisted of 17.8% law, 33.4% equity, 29% felony, and 19.7% misdemeanor cases. The composition for 1978 was 22% law, 30.4% equity, 28.8% felony and 18.5% misdemeanor. Thus, the 1978 caseload indicated a more even distribution between civil and criminal cases.

There were 41 jury trials held in 1978. This was 18 less than the number of the year before. A total of 54 days were spent presiding over these jury trials.

Trial dates were assigned for 333 law cases. Thirty-six percent were set ninety days ahead. A total of 1,471 criminal cases were given trial dates. Criminal cases were disposed of a a rate of 73.7% within five months of filing and another 17.4% from six to nine months of filing. Civil cases were terminated at a rate of 60.3% within one year of setting.

SIXTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Sixth Circuit is comprised of five counties: Brunswick, Greensville, Prince George, Surry, Sussex, and the City of Hopewell. The circuit currently has two authorized judgeships. The judges are Ligon L. Jones and Robert G. O'Hara, Jr. Judge Jones serves as the chief judge.

The population of the circuit as determined by the 1970 census was 96,264. The 1977 population was estimated at 90,300 by the Tayloe Murphy Institute. The population was primarily affected as a result of the annexation by Petersburg City of 4,629 persons from Prince George County in January 1972. Based on the population per judge figures, the circuit ranked seventeenth among the thirty-one circuits. The population of the circuit is expected to remain stable through 1980.

There were 1,819 commenced cases during 1978, which was a slight 1.7% change from the 1,788 cases in 1977. The 910 cases per judge compared to a state average of 1,169 cases per judge.

In 1978 the circuit concluded 1,527 cases as compared with 1,806 in 1978. The pending caseload at the end of 1976 was 1,700 cases and at the close of 1978 was 1,685. Over 85% of the pending cases involved civil cases while only 265 were criminal cases.

The 1977 commenced caseload was 19.1% law, 50% equity, 19% felony, and 11.7% misdemeanor. The 1978 caseload split was 19.5% law, 47.8% equity, 24.1% felony, and 8.4% misdemeanor. The composition of the commenced caseload in 1976 was 30% law, 42% equity, 17% felony, and 12% misdemeanor. These compositions varied from that of 1975 in that the percentages of law and equity cases both increased, while felony cases declined. The percentage of misdemeanor cases remained the same.

Jury trials totaled 47 in 1976, 50 in 1977, and 28 in 1978. Jury days totaled 34 in 1978 with 8 criminal jury days and 26 civil jury days.

In 1978, 616 criminal and 235 civil cases were assigned trial dates. Slightly over eleven percent of the criminal cases were not assigned for the term of setting. Approximately 54% of the civil cases were set ninety days or more ahead. Eighty percent of the criminal cases were terminated within five months and 46.4% of the civil cases were disposed of within one year.

SEVENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The City of Newport News is the only locality designated in the Seventh Judicial Circuit. The circuit is currently authorized three judgeships and has had three judgeships during the entire period covered by this report, 1966-1978.

The population of Newport News was 138,177 by the 1970 Census, and the 1977 population as estimated by the Tayloe Murphy Institute was 144,400. The population per judge based on the 1977 estimate was 48,133. Newport News ranked sixteenth in the population per judge when compared with all thirty-one circuits. Twenty percent of the Newport News population was between the ages of twenty and twenty-nine. This marginally differed from the state's average of eighteen percent. This age group has generally been associated with a high incidence of crime.

The Seventh Circuit had 4,080 commenced cases in 1978 which was 509 more than the 1977 caseload of 3,571. This constituted an annual increase of 14.3% in new cases over 1977. The 1978 caseload per judge of 1,360 commenced cases ranked fourth among the fourteen urban circuits, highest ranked first. The average for all circuits was 1,169 cases per judge.

In 1978, the circuit concluded 3,859 cases which was 577 more than the 1977 dispositional level of 3,282. The 1977 pending caseload of 2,254 increased by 577 to 2,831 during 1978.

The composition of the caseload in 1978 was 18% law, 32.4% equity, 24.1% felony, and 22.6% misdemeanor. The state percentages contained a slightly higher percentage of law (22.3%) and equity (35.2%) cases, and correspondingly lower percentages of felony (23.5%) and misdemeanor (18.6%) cases.

Jury trials totaled 54 for 1978, eighteen less than 1977. The number of felony trials decreased by ten while the law jury trials decreased by eight to account for the 20% decline. The judges spent a total of 48 days hearing jury trials.

Trial dates were assigned for 569 civil hearings. Of these cases, 348 or 61.2% were set on dates more than 90 days ahead. In criminal cases, 2,472 hearing dates were set. Of these, approximately one third (28.8%) were set for the present term. The terminations history showed that 43.5% of the civil cases were concluded within one year. Of the 1,798 criminal cases terminated, 93.3% were disposed of within five months of filing.

EIGHTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The City of Hampton is the only locality designated in the Eighth Judicial Circuit. The Circuit is currently authorized two judgeships and is served by Judges Edgar A. Massenburg and Nelson T. Overton. Judge Massenburg is the chief judge.

The population of Hampton was 89,258 by the 1960 census and increased to 120,779 when the 1970 census was taken. The Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the 1977 population at 127,300. Based on this estimate, the population per judge was 63,650 which ranked Hampton as seventh highest among the circuits. This was 16,000 higher than the mean population per judge of 47,986.

In 1978, the Eighth Circuit commenced 2,469 cases which was 105 more cases than the 1976 caseload of 2,364. This represented an annual increase in the caseload of 4.4%. The 1978 caseload per judge in the Eighth Circuit was 1,235 commenced cases. Hampton ranked tenth among the fourteen urban circuits with the highest ranked first, and this figure was only slightly higher than the state average of 1,169 commenced cases per judge.

In 1977, this circuit concluded 2,857 cases which was a significant increase (49.6%) over the total number of terminations for 1976 of 1,921. The increase resulted from the application of Section 8-154 to 41 Actions at Law and 627 Chancery Causes. If the removal of these 668 cases was not included, the increase in the number of terminated cases would be 268, or a relatively modest increase of 14%. The pending caseload dropped 4.8% to 2,053 for 1977 from 2,627 in 1976. However, the number of terminated cases in 1978 dropped to 2,247 or 21.4% and pending cases increased to 2,275.

The composition of the caseload in 1978 was 71.4% civil (22.5% law and 48.9% equity) and 28.6% criminal (13.9% felony and 14.6% misdemeanor). The total civil percentage was higher than the state percentages of 23.5% law and 36% equity with Hampton's percentage of law cases slightly lower and of equity cases significantly higher. Reciprocally, Hampton's criminal caseload was lower than the state percentages of 23.5% felony and 18.6% misdemeanor. Jury trials totaled 39 for 1977 and 41 for 1978. The judges spent a total of 67 days hearing jury trials; 32.8% of those days were occupied with criminal jury cases and 67.2% were spent hearing law jury cases.

Trial dates were assigned for 468 civil hearings. Only 76 of these, or 16.2%, were set on dates more than ninety days ahead. In criminal cases, 562 hearing dates were set. Of these, only 78, or 13.9%, were not set for the present term. The termination history showed that 47.5% of the civil cases were concluded within one year. Of the 684 criminal cases terminated, 94.3% were disposed of within five months of filing.

NINTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Ninth Judicial Circuit serves ten localities covering 1,876 square miles in the middle peninsula area. The localities are Charles City, Gloucester, King and Queen, King William, Mathews, Middlesex, New Kent, York, James City counties, and Williamsburg and Poquoson cities. The circuit is authorized two judgeships. The judges are John E. DeHardit and Russell M. Carneal. Judge DeHardit is the chief judge of the circuit.

The population of the circuit demonstrated continuous growth in recent years with the 1977 population estimated at 136,400. The population is expected to continue to grow at the rate of about two percent per year through 1980, when the population is projected to reach 140,800. The population per judge based on 1977 population was 68,200. The Ninth Circuit ranked fourth among the thirty-one circuits and was 42% higher than the state mean in this category.

The 1978 commenced caseload for the circuit was 2,792, which was slightly higher (229) than the previous year. The 1978 caseload was composed of 21.8% law cases, 38.5% equity cases, 25.8% felony cases, and 13.9% misdemeanor cases. The state caseload consists of 22.3% law, 35.2% equity, 23.5% felony, and 18.6% misdemeanor.

The concluded caseload in 1978 decreased by 176 cases from the previous year to 2,509 cases. The pending caseload increased by 2,763 cases by the close of 1978. Civil cases accounted for 87.5% of the pending caseload. There were 69 jury trials in 1977 and 87 in 1978. The total number of jury days was 90.

Trial dates were assigned to 392 civil cases and 878 criminal cases. More than seventy percent of the civil cases were assigned dates ninety days or more from date of setting. Slightly less than one third of the criminal cases were set beyond the term.

The 2,509 terminated cases consisted of 1,491 civil cases and 1,018 criminal cases. The circuit terminated 48% of the civil cases within one year; 86% of the criminal cases reached disposition in five months or less.

TENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Tenth Judicial Circuit of Virginia consists of Appomattox, Buckingham, Charlotte, Cumberland, Halifax, Lunenburg, Mecklenburg, and Prince Edward counties along with the city of South Boston. The circuit is authorized two judgeships. The judges are Meredith C. Dortch, Chief Judge, and John R. Snoddy, Jr.

The population of the Tenth Judicial Circuit remained relatively stable over the last twenty years. The 1960 census found the population to be 137,436 while the Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the 1977 population at 137,800. The population per judge was 68,900. The circuit ranked third among the thirty-one circuits and was 21,000 above the state average population per judge.

The commenced caseload declined by 66 cases to 2,035 from 1977 to 1978. The commenced caseload per judge was 1,019, which was 151 less than the state mean and ranked the circuit eleventh among the seventeen rural circuits. The composition of the 1978 caseload was 23.1% law, 39.1% equity, 24.3% felony, and 13.4% misdemeanor cases. The state commenced caseload broke down into 22.3% law, 35.2% equity, 23.5% felony, and 18.6% misdemeanor.

The circuit terminated 1,824 cases during 1978. The previous year, there were 2,248 terminations. Twenty percent of the 1977 terminations were purged under Virginia Code Section 8-154. The pending caseload dropped by one third by the close of 1977 but increased by 211 at the end of 1978.

The circuit conducted 53 jury trials in 57 total jury days. There were 77 jury trials in 1977 and a total of 75 jury days.

Trial days were assigned to 262 civil and 796 criminal cases. Of these, 45.4% of the civil dates were set more than ninety days ahead and 21.2% of the criminal dates were not set for the present term. Historically, one half of the civil cases were terminated within one year of setting. For criminal cases, 81.2% were terminated within five months of filing.

ELEVENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Eleventh Judicial Circuit is comprised of the counties of Amelia, Dinwiddie, Nottoway, Powhatan, and the city of Petersburg. The circuit is currently authorized two judgeships and is served by Judges Oliver A. Pollard, Jr. and Thomas Warren. Judge Warren replaced Judge Mayes in September 1977. Judge Pollard sits in the city of Petersburg while Judge Warren travels the circuit to hold court in the four counties. Judge Pollard is the chief circuit judge.

The population of the circuit was 90,697 according to the 1970 census and was estimated at 99,800 in 1977 by the Tayloe Murphy Institute in Charlottesville. Petersburg with 42,900 people and Dinwiddie County with 21,400 were the two largest localities in the circuit and represented two thirds of the total population. Based on the Tayloe Murphy estimate, the population per judge was 49,900 which ranked the Eleventh Circuit fourteenth in the state, highest ranked first. The state mean was 47,986 persons per judge.

In 1978, the Eleventh Circuit commenced 1,873 new cases which was 12.9% higher than 1,657 cases in 1977. The 1978 caseload per judge numbered 937 which was below the 1,169 case average for all circuit judges. Concluded cases for 1978 totaled 1,692 which was slightly higher than the 1,631 cases terminated in 1977.

The 1977 pending caseload of 1,190 increased 341 or 21.7% over 1976 (1,569). This apparent increase was the result of a recounting of pending cases in the city of Petersburg in January 1977. This recount increased their pending caseload by 365, 357 of which were civil cases. Thus there has actually been a slight decrease in the circuit's pending caseload with the 21.7% increase explained by Petersburg's recounting of its caseload. The pending caseload at the close of 1978 was 1,371 cases.

The composition of the circuit's commenced caseload in 1977 was approximately 56% civil (21.8% law and 34.3% equity) and 44% criminal (32.0% felony and 11.7% misdemeanor). The distribution of criminal and civil cases was almost identical to that of the state as a whole: 57.5% civil and 42.1% criminal. The breakdown in civil cases of 21.8% law and 34.3% equity varied only slightly from the state percentages of 22.3% law and 35.2% equity. However, the Eleventh Circuit had a significantly higher percentage of felonies (32.0%) than does the state percentage (23.5%), with a correspondingly lower percentage of 11.7% misdemeanors compared with the state percentage of 18.6%.

Jury trials totaled 99 for 1978, seven more than 1977. Judges Pollard and Warren (Mayes) spent a total of 75 days hearing jury trials.

Trial dates were assigned for 211 civil hearings. Of these, 109 or 51.7% were set on dates more than ninety days ahead. In criminal cases, 1,064 hearing dates were set. Of these, 70 or 6.6% were not set for the present term. The terminations history revealed that 57.7% of the civil cases were concluded within one year. Of the 771 criminal cases terminated, 679 or 88% were disposed of within five months of filing.

TWELFTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

Chesterfield County and the city of Colonial Heights constitute the Twelfth Judicial Circuit. The circuit has two judges, Ernest P. Gates and D. W. Murphey. Judge Gates is the chief judge of the circuit.

The population of the circuit experienced tremendous growth since 1960. At that time the population was 53,442. By 1970 the population had increased by 72% to 92,142. Between 1970 and 1977 the population growth rate was six percent per year and the 1977 population was 133,200. The Division of State Planning projected the 1980 popualtion at 144,900. The population per judge based on the 1977 population estimate was 66,600. The circuit ranked fifth among the circuits on this measure.

The 1978 caseload experienced a 4.3% decline from the previous year. However, during 1977 the commenced caseload rose 22.8% over 1976 to 2,669 cases. The increase from 1975 to 1976 was 1,000 cases. The 1978 new cases per judge figure for the circuit was 1,277 cases. When compared with the fourteen urban circuits, the circuit ranked seventh. The circuit was 9.2% more than the state mean for commenced cases per judge.

The 1978 new caseload was heavily weighted toward civil cases. The composition was 16.8% law, 57.1% equity, 16.4% felony, and 7.8% misdemeanor. Divorce cases in Chesterfield County were 45.6% of the total caseload. The caseload composition was not markedly different from that of 1976 or 1977.

Terminations also dropped from 1977 to 1978. There were 2,693 dispositions in 1977 which was 118 less than the previous year. Civil cases accounted for 70.1% of the terminations. However, only 216 cases were purged under Virginia Code Section 8-154. The pending caseload was reduced during 1977 by 15.1% and was 1,289 at year's end. Approximately one half of the pending cases were divorce proceedings.

In 1978 the Twelfth Circuit had 58 jury trials: 35 civil and 23 criminal. In 1977 the circuit conducted 29 jury trials of which 23 were law actions and six were felony or misdemeanor trials. The 1978 jury trials took a total of 55 days to hear.

Of the 338 law actions, 159 were assigned trial dates more than ninety days ahead. Only 60 of 149 criminal cases were not set during the term. Civil cases were disposed of at a rate of 45.7% within one year. The criminal disposal rate was 88.2% within five months of filing.

THIRTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Thirteenth Judicial Circuit of Virginia serves the City of Richmond. The Circuit is divided into two divisions. Division I holds court in the John Marshall Courts Building. The Division II Court, sometimes referred to as the Manchester Division, sits in the Southside section of Richmond. The circuit is currently authorized eight judgeships. Judges J. Randolph Tucker, Jr., James B. Wilkinson, James M. Lumpkin, James E. Sheffield, Marvin F. Cole, and Willard I. Walker sit in Division I and Judges William E. Spain and Frank A. S. Wright sit in Division II.

The population of the City of Richmond declined steadily since 1970. The population as determined by the 1970 census was 249,431. The Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the 1977 population at 224,200. The Department of Planning and Budget projected the 1980 population to be 208,400. The population per judge based on the 1977 data was 28,025. The Thirteenth Circuit ranked thirty-first among the thirty-one circuits with the state average per judge being 47,986.

In 1978 the Thirteenth Circuit commenced 8,245 cases. This was 485 or 5.5% lower than the 1977 total. The commenced caseload per judge was 1,031 for 1978 and ranked twelfth among the fourteen urban circuits. The state mean was 1,169.

The circuit terminated 7,502 cases during 1978. During 1977 the circuit disposed of 8,357 cases. The difference of 855 cases represented a 10.2% decrease in concluded cases. The pending caseload at the end of 1977 was 5,808 cases which was an increase over the 4,940 cases pending at the close of 1976. This rose to 6,551 during 1978.

The composition of the 1978 commenced caseload for the circuit was 35% law, 29% equity, 26.5% felony, 8.8% misdemeanor, and .7% habeas corpus. During 1978, the state composition was 22.3% law, 35.2% equity, 23.5% felony, and 18.6% misdemeanor. These figures indicate that the composition of the circuit was becoming dominated by civil cases at a ratio of 3.5 to two.

The judges in Division I hear cases by type, civil or criminal. Three judges hear primarily criminal cases and three hear primarily civil cases. Division II judges hear both types of cases. Both divisions of the circuit utilize Commissioners in Chancery references in chancery causes other than divorce.

There were 277 jury trials in 1978 which was significantly lower than the 351 jury trials heard in 1977. For the year of 1978 the judges spent a total of 420 days hearing trials. Of these, 61.4% of the days were law proceedings, 36.4% of the days were in felony proceedings, and 2.1% of the days involved misdemeanor hearings.

In assigning trial dates for the 2,232 law cases, 61.2% were given dates more than ninety days from date of setting. In the 2,770 criminal cases assigned trial dates, 42.2% were not given dates during the term. The history of terminated cases revealed that 60.8% of the civil cases were disposed of within one year. In addition, 93.3% of the criminal cases were concluded within five months of filing.

FOURTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

Henrico County is the only locality designated in the Fourteenth Judicial Circuit. Currently, the circuit has four judgeships authorized and is served by Judges Edmund Waller Hening, Jr., E. Ballard Baker, L. Paul Byrne, and Robert M. Wallace. The fourth judgeship was created by the 1977 legislature, and Judge Wallace took office July 1, 1977. Judge Hening is the chief judge.

Henrico's population as determined by the 1970 U.S. Census was 154,364. The Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the 1977 population at 174,700 which would represent an average annual increase of approximately 2,250 persons. Based on the Institute's estimate for 1977, the population per judge was 43,675 which ranked Henrico as twenty-fourth among the thirty-one circuits. The state average population per judge was 47,986.

In 1978 the circuit commenced 3,784 new cases which was 192 more than the 1977 caseload of 3,592. This represented an annual increase in caseload of 5.3%. The 1978 caseload for the state increased 6.6% over 1977. Henrico County's caseload per judge in 1977 was 946, which was lower than the state average of 1,169 commenced cases per judge. The circuit thus ranked thirteenth among the fourteen urban circuits, highest ranked first.

The judges of the Fourteenth Circuit concluded 3,214 cases in 1978, 153 more than 1977. The 1977 pending caseload for Henrico was 3,477. Pending cases rose to 4,077 during 1978. The number of terminated cases per judge for 1978 was 765, and the number of pending cases per judge was 869.

The composition of Henrico's caseload in 1978 was 63.6% civil (20.1% law and 43.5% equity) and 36.4% criminal (16.6% felony and 19.7% misdemeanor). The civil percentage was somewhat higher than the state percentage of 57.5% civil cases. The proportion of law cases was slightly lower; however, when compared to the state ratio of 22.3%, Henrico's equity case percentage of 43.5% was significantly higher than the state's 35.2%. The Fourteenth's misdemeanor caseload of 19.7% was above the state misdemeanor percentage of 18.3%. A 16.6% felony caseload for Henrico compared as much lower than the state percentage of 23.5% felonies.

Jury trials totaled 117 for 1978, thirty more than in 1977. Henrico judges spent a total of 118 days hearing jury trials in 1978. Sixty-two days were occupied with criminal jury cases, and 56 days were spent hearing civil cases with a jury.

Trial dates were assigned for 538 civil hearings. All of these cases were reported to be set on dates more than ninety days in advance. In criminal cases, 1,375 hearing dates were set. Of this number, 1,218 or 88.6% were not set for the present term. The terminations history revealed that 45.6% of the civil cases were concluded within one year. Of the 1,073 criminal cases terminated, 99% or 1,062 were disposed of within five months of filing.

FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Fifteenth Judicial Circuit is comprised of ten counties: Caroline, Essex, Hanover, King George, Northumberland, Richmond, Spotsylvania, Stafford, Westmoreland, and the city of Fredericksburg. The circuit has four authorized judgeships. John A. Jamison is the chief circuit judge. Dixon L. Foster, J. M. H. Willis, Jr., and Richard H. C. Taylor are the other resident judges.

The population of the circuit was estimated at 205,800 (51,450 per judge) in 1978 and is expected to grow to 216,400 (54,100 per judge) by 1980. The largest population growth is expected in Hanover and Stafford counties.

There were 4,250 commenced cases in 1978, which was 7.5% higher than the 3,954 commenced cases during 1977. The 1976 caseload was 3,824. The circuit's caseload experienced significant increases during 1973, 1974, and 1975. The four largest courts in terms of caseload were Stafford, Hanover, Spotsylvania, and Fredericksburg. There were 1,062 new cases per judge during the year. The new caseload was divided among 27.1% law, 36.8% equity, 16.7% felony, and 19.2% misdemeanor cases. The composition of the 1978 state caseload was 22.3% law, 35.7% equity, 23.5% felony, and 18.6% misdemeanor.

In 1976, 3,948 cases were concluded, exceeding the 1975 dispositional rate by 238 cases. The higher dispositional rate resulted in a reduction in the pending caseload which was 2,602 cases at the end of 1976. Terminations trailed commenced cases by 98 in 1977. In 1978 there were 4,126 concluded cases or 124 less than the number of new cases. These differences and a recount of pending caseload provided for an increase in pending cases to 2,948 at the close of 1978. Only a small number of cases (1.8%) were purged under Virginia Code Section 8-154.

Jury trials totaled 307 for the circuit in 1978, which was 15 higher than reported in 1977. The jury trials were 44% civil and 56% criminal. These jury trials required a total of 302 days with both civil and criminal trials averaging approximately one day each.

Trial dates were assigned to 559 law, 631 felony, and 506 misdemeanor cases. Approximately 416 of the law cases were set ninety or more days in advance. For both felony and misdemeanor cases, 26.7% were not set for the present term.

Criminal cases were terminated within five months of filing 80.3% of the time. Civil cases were disposed of within one year 53% of the time.

SIXTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Counties of Albemarle, Culpeper, Fluvanna, Goochland, Greene, Louisa, Madison, Orange and the city of Charlottesville form the Sixteenth Judicial Circuit. The circuit has four judges. Vance M. Fry is the Chief Circuit Judge. The judges in addition to Judge Fry are Harold H. Purcell, David F. Berry, and Herbert A. Pickford, III. Judge Purcell has submitted his resignation to become effective June 30, 1979. He will be replaced July 1, 1979, by F. W. Harkrader, presently a general district court judge.

The population of the circuit increased rapidly. The 1970 census determined the population to be 154,250 By 1977 the population increased by 19.4% to 184,100. The growth of the area is expected to continue. The population per judge based on the 1977 population estimate was 46,025 which was below the state average of 47,986.

The caseload for 1978 was 3,951 new cases and 3,486 terminated cases. The previous year had 3,656 new and 3,475 terminated cases. The increases in new and terminated cases were 8.1% and less one percent, respectively. The state increases were 6.6% and 3.2%, respectively. The pending caseload at the close of 1978 was 4,707 cases.

The 1978 caseload consisted of 20.1% law, 40.6% equity, 27.2% felony, and 11.7% misdemeanor. The commenced caseload per judge for 1978 was 988. The state mean commenced caseload per judge was 1,169. Charlottesville and Albemarle represented approximately one half of the circuit's caseload.

There were 132 jury trials during 1978, three more than the number of jury trials during 1977. The jury trials were split 43 and 89 for civil and criminal, respectively, while the jury days were 58 and 88 for civil and criminal cases, respectively.

Trial dates were set for 415 civil cases and 1,596 criminal cases. Slightly more than one third of the civil cases were set more than ninety days ahead and just over forty percent of the criminal cases were set for the term. There were 2,009 civil terminations and 1,477 criminal terminations. Civil cases were terminated within one year in 54.1% of the cases. Criminal cases were disposed of within five months for 83.5% of the cases.

SEVENTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

Arlington County is the only locality designated in the Seventeenth Judicial Circuit. Currently, the circuit is authorized four judgeships and is served by Judges William L. Winston, Paul D. Brown, Charles S. Russell, and Charles H. Duff. Judge Winston is the chief judge.

The Bureau of the Census determined Arlington's population in 1970 as 174,284. By 1977 the area's population decreased to 154,800 in the estimate by the Tayloe Murphy Institute. Based on the Institute's 1977 estimate, the population per judge was 38,700, well below the state average of 47,986. Arlington ranked twenty-fifth among the thirty-one circuits of the state, with highest ranked first.

In 1978 the circuit commenced 3,239 new cases which was 125 more than the 1977 caseload of 3,239. This represented an increase of four percent in new cases over 1977. By comparison, the state commenced caseload increased by 6.6% over 1977. Arlington's caseload per judge in 1977 was 810 which was lower than the state average of 1,169 commenced cases per judge. The circuit thus ranked last among the fourteen urban circuits, highest ranked first.

The four judges of the Seventeenth concluded 2,730 cases in 1978, 272 less than in 1977. The 1978 pending caseload for Arlington was 4,318, an increase of 509 over the 1977 total of 3,809. The number of terminated cases per judge for 1978 was 895, and the pending caseload per judge was 1,080.

Arlington's caseload in 1978 was composed of 59.1% civil (23.3% law and 35.8% equity) and 40.9% criminal (36.7% felony and 2.9% misdemeanor). The civil percentage was somewhat higher than the overall state percentage of 57.5% civil cases, and reciprocally Arlington's criminal percentage was lower than the state's 42.1% criminal cases. The proportion of law cases was slightly higher in Arlington, 23.3% compared with 22.3%, while the percentage of equity cases was about identical to that of the state, 35.8% opposed to 35.2% state equity. Arlington varied considerably from the state pattern within the criminal category. The circuit had a criminal caseload of 36.7% felonies and 2.9% misdemeanors compared with the state's 23.5% felonies and 18.6% misdemeanors.

Jury trials totaled 250 for 1978, 138 more than in 1977. The four judges in Arlington spent a total of 311 days hearing jury trials in 1978, averaging 78 days per judge. Criminal jury cases occupied 152 days, and 159 days were spent hearing civil cases with a jury.

Trial dates were assigned for 664 civil hearings. Dates of more than ninety days in advance were set on 449 of 67.6% of these cases. In criminal cases, 1,607 hearing dates were set. Of this number, 419 were not set for the present term. The terminations history revealed that 42.6% of the civil cases were concluded within one year. Of the 1,021 criminal cases terminated, 73.7% were disposed of within five months of filing.

EIGHTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The city of Alexandria is the only locality designated in the Eighteenth Circuit. Currently, the circuit is authorized three judgeships and was served by Judges Franklin P. Backus, Wiley R. Wright, Jr., and Donald Hall Kent. Judge Backus retired on January 31, 1979, and was replaced by Albert H. Grenadier.

Alexandria's population as determined by the 1970 census was 110,927. By 1977 the city's population dropped to 104,800 as estimated by the Tayloe Murphy Institute. Based on his estimate, the population per judge was 34,933, well below the state average of 47,986. Alexandria ranked twenty-eighth among the thirty-one Virginia circuits, highest ranked first.

In 1978, the circuit commenced 2,815 new cases which was 141 more than the 1977 caseload of 2,674. This represented an increase of 5.3% in new cases over 1977. By comparison, the state commenced caseload increased by 6.6% over 1977. Alexandria's caseload per judge in 1978 was 938 which was lower than the state average 1,169 commenced cases per judge. The circuit thus ranked thirteenth among the fourteen urban circuits, highest ranked first.

The three judges of the Eighteenth concluded 2,686 cases in 1978, 41 less than in 1977. The 1977 pending caseload for Alexandria was 3,151, or an increase of 5.2% over the 1977 total of 2,996. The 1978 pending figure rose to 3,280. The number of terminated cases per judge for 1978 was 895, and the number of pending cases per judge was 1,093.

The composition of Alexandria's caseload in 1978 was 52.7% civil (21.7% law and 31.0% equity) and 47.3% criminal (31.3% felony and 16.2% misdemeanor). This distribution of cases followed closely a statewide pattern of 57.5% civil (22.3% law and 35.2% equity) and 42.1% criminal (23.5% felony and 18.6% misdemeanor).

Jury trials totaled 75 for 1978, less than the 97 jury cases in 1977. Alexandria's three judges spent a total of 118 days hearing jury trials in 1978; this was an average of 39.5 days per judge. Criminal jury cases occupied 49 days, and 69 days were spent hearing civil.

Trial dates were assigned for 304 civil hearings, 189 or 62.2% of these cases were set on dates more than ninety days in advance. In criminal cases 1,059 hearing dates were set in 1978. Of this number 309 or 29.2% were not set for the present term. The terminations history revealed that 47.7% of the civil cases were concluded within one year. Of the 1,358 criminal cases terminated, 77.6% or 1,054 were disposed of within five months of filing.

NINETEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Nineteenth Judicial Circuit is comprised of Fairfax County and the cities of Fairfax and Falls Church. In 1978 the circuit was authorized eight judgeships. Prior to July 1977 the Nineteenth Circuit included Prince William County which was redesignated the Thirty-First Circuit by the 1977 Legislature.

The population of the realigned Nineteenth Circuit was 487,813 in 1970 and was estimated in 1977 at 568,200 by the Tayloe Murphy Institute. Based on this figure, the population per judge was 71,025 which was substantially higher than the state average of 47,986. Fairfax ranked second among the fourteen urban circuits in population per judge and held the same position in the ranking of all thirty-one circuits in the state. The only circuit with a greater population per judge was Prince William with 76,900 persons per judge.

In 1978 the circuit commenced 9,828 new cases which was 957 more than in 1977 when the judges heard 8,871 new cases. This represented an increase of 10.8% over 1977 which was more than the overall state increase of 6.6% in new cases. Fairfax's caseload per judge in 1978 was 1,229 which was above the state average of 1,169 commenced cases per judge. The circuit ranked eleventh among the fourteen urban circuits, highest ranked first.

The eight judges of the Nineteenth Circuit concluded 9,332 cases in 1978, 1,723 more than in 1977. The 1978 pending caseload for Fairfax was 11,691, an increase over the 1977 total of 11,195. The number of terminated cases per judge for 1978 was 1,167, and the number of pending cases per judge was 1,461.

The composition of Fairfax's caseload in 1978 was 71.9% civil (26.9% law and 45% equity) and 28.1% criminal (12.3% felony and 15.8% misdemeanor). The civil percentage of cases was substantially greater than the state's ratio of 57.5% civil (22.3% law and 35.2% equity). Correspondingly, the criminal percentages for Fairfax were lower than those for the state (23.5% felony and 18.6% misdemeanor).

Jury trials totaled 282 for 1978, 34 less than in 1977. Fairfax's judges spent a total of 577 days hearing jury trials in 1978; this averaged 72 jury days per judge. Criminal jury cases occupied 249 days, and 328 days were spent hearing civil cases with a jury.

Trial dates were assigned for 1,605 civil hearings. There were 1,292 or 72.6% of these cases set on dates more than ninety days in advance. In criminal cases, 3,220 hearing dates were set. Of this number 791 or 24.6% were not set for the present term. The terminations history revealed that 38.6% of the 6,615 civil cases were concluded within one year. Of the 2,717 criminal cases terminated, 83.6% were disposed of within five months of filing.

TWENTIETH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Twentieth serves the three counties of Fauquier, Loudoun, and Rappahannock. The circuit has two judges: Rayner V. Snead and Carleton Penn. Judge Snead is the chief circuit judge.

The population of the circuit has been rapidly expanding as the Washington suburbs extend outward. The population grew 27.3% between 1960 and 1970 and 28.5% in the first seven years of this decade. The 1977 population was estimated as 88,300. The rate of growth is projected at 3.4% yearly until the 1980 population reaches approximately 96,400. The growth spurt was most evident in Loudoun County.

The commenced caseload increased by 29.3% for the circuit and 9.9% for the state from 1975 to 1976. However, this increase did not continue through 1977, and the number of new cases dropped by 57 to 1,707. In 1978 the trend again reversed and the caseload increased 15.5% to 1,972. The caseload per judge ratio increased correspondingly to 986. The state mean for this caseload measure was 1,169 during 1978.

The commenced caseload consisted of 21.3% law, 35.9% equity, 24.5% felony, and 18.3% misdemeanor cases. The 1978 state caseload was similar in nature.

Terminations rose by 21.6% in 1978 to 2,120. Purging cases under Virginia Code Section 8-154 accounted for 379 terminations. Due to the increase of terminations over new cases, the pending caseload, which was 1,483 at the close of 1977, was reduced to 1,335 by the end of 1978.

The number of jury trials was 41% higher in 1978. There were 47 civil, 45 felony, and 11 misdemeanor jury trials. These trials took a total of 94 days to hear.

In assigning trial dates to 161 law cases, 54% were given dates more than ninety days from date of setting. In the 247 criminal trial dates assigned, 38.9% were not given dates during the present term. The history of terminated cases revealed that 38.3% of the civil cases were disposed of within one year. In addition, 82.2% of the criminal cases were concluded within five months. Another 9.4% of the criminal cases were disposed of in the next three months.

TWENTY-FIRST JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Twenty-First Judicial Circuit is the area consisting of Henry County, Patrick County and the city of Martinsville. The circuit has two judges: John D. Hooker and Frank I. Richardson, Jr.

The population of the circuit has grown at a rate of 4.9% since 1970. The 1977 population was estimated at 89,500 by the Tayloe Murphy Institute and is projected to increase to 94,600 by 1980. The populations of Patrick County and Martinsville remained relatively unchanged while Henry County increased by 7.2%. The population per judge of the circuit was 44,750 in 1977 and will be 47,800 in 1980. The state average was 47,986.

The circuit commenced 3,140 cases during the year of 1978. This was 6.7% lower than the 3,367 new cases commenced in 1977. The state increase was 6.7% during the same period. The commenced caseload per judge was 1,570 as compared to the state average of 1,169 cases per judge.

The 1978 commenced caseload divided into 17.3% law, 19.5% equity, 24.5% felony, and 38.3% misdemeanor. Of the 1,984 new criminal cases, 1,204 were misdemeanors and 851 of the misdemeanors were appeals from the district courts.

The number of cases concluded during 1978 numbered 2,683, one less than the 1977 total. The high number of cases commenced and the relatively stable rate of terminations resulted in a 45% increase in the pending caseload. At the close of 1978 there were 2,535 pending cases.

Jury trials increased from 110 in 1976 to 139 in 1977 and declined to 120 in 1978. There were 30 civil and 90 criminal jury trials. The civil trials took 42 days to conclude. Criminal jury days amounted to 103 for the entire year.

The circuit assigned trial dates to 205 civil cases, 63.4% of which were set more than ninety days ahead. There were 1,049 criminal cases assigned trial dates and 26.7% of these were not set for the present term. Of the 741 civil cases terminated, 66.4% were concluded within one year. Criminal cases were disposed of at a rate of 94% within five months of filing.

TWENTY-SECOND JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The counties of Franklin and Pittsylvania along with the city of Danville form the Twenty-Second Judicial Circuit of Virginia. William Carrington Thompson, Chief Circuit Judge, Beverly A. Davis, III, and James F. Ingram are the resident judges of the circuit.

The average annual rate of change for all localities in the circuit was less than 1% during the 1960's. Franklin County's rate of growth increased to 2.3% during the early 1970's. Franklin and Pittsylvania Counties will sustain slight increases and Danville will have slight decreases for the remainder of this century. The 1977 population of the circuit was estimated at 140,700. Thus, the population per judge was 46,900 which is 1,000 below the state average.

During 1978 the courts of the Twenty-Second Circuit commenced 3,906 cases and disposed of 3,846 cases. The previous year's totals were 3,828 new cases and 4,022 terminated cases. These represent an increase of 2% for new cases and a decrease of 4.4% for terminated cases. Statewide, new cases increased by 6.6% and terminations had a rate of increase of 3.2%.

New cases consisted of 16.6% law, 28% equity, 24.4% felony, and 30.2% misdemeanor. There were 608 criminal appeals from the general district courts and 94 from the juvenile & domestic realtions courts.

During 1977 the rate of dispositions being higher than the commenced caseload, the pending caseload had dropped from 1,532 in 1975 to 1,473 in 1976 to 1,152 at the close of 1977. This was a decrease of 24.8% during that interval. The pending caseload increased by only 60 cases in 1978 and at the end of the year amounted to 1,212.

The number of jury trials heard during 1977 was 251 or 6.4% of the commenced caseload. This is significantly higher than the percentage of jury trials per commenced cases for the entire state. The judges of the circuit spent 35 days hearing civil jury trials and 114 days hearing criminal jury trials.

Trial dates were assigned to 497 law actions. Only 102 of these were set more than ninety days ahead. For the 1,993 criminal cases assigned trial dates 27.5% were not set during the present term. Slightly less than 60% of the civil cases were disposed of within one year. For criminal cases, 96.8% were terminated within five months.

TWENTY-THIRD JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Twenty-Third Judicial Circuit is comprised of Roanoke County, Roanoke City, and Salem City. Currently, the circuit is authorized five judgeships. The fifth judgeship was created by the 1977 Legislature and was filled by Judge Kenneth E. Trabue on July 1, 1977. Judges Ernest W. Ballou, Jack B. Coulter, and Trabue sit in Roanoke City while Judges Frederick L. Hoback and Lawrence L. Koontz, Jr., hold court in Roanoke County and the City of Salem.

The population of the circuit was 181,436 according to the 1970 census and was estimated at 190,500 in 1977 by the Tayloe Murphy Institute in Charlottesville. Roanoke City contained 50% of the total population with 95,700 persons; Roanoke County had over one third of the population; and the remaining 13% resided in the city of Salem. Based on the Tayloe Murphy estimates, the population per judge was 38,100 which ranked the Twenty-Third Circuit tenth among the fourteen urban circuits and twenty-sixth among all the circuits, highest ranked first. The circuit's population per judge was considerably lower than the state average of 47,986.

In 1978 the Twenty-Third Circuit commenced 5,542 new cases, a decrease of 4.9% over the 1977 caseload 5,827. By comparison, the state's caseload increased 6.6%. The 1978 caseload per judge was 1,109 cases which was below the state average of 1,169 commenced cases per judge. The circuit ranked tenth among the fourteen urban circuits highest ranked first. Concluded cases for 1978 numbered 5,193 which was 8.3 % less than the 5,660 cases terminated in 1977. The 1978 pending caseload for the Twenty-Third was 4,832, an addition of 34 cases from the preceding year.

The composition of the Twenty-Third's 1978 caseload was 19.1% law, 34.7% equity 22.2% felony, and 23.2% misdemeanor. The percentages of equity and felony cases in the Twenty-Third were very similar to those of the state as a whole, 23.5% felony and 35.2% equity. The circuit's 19.1% law was lower than the state's percentage of law cases (22.3%) while the 23.2% misdemeanor portion was higher than the state's 18.6%.

Jury trials totaled 139 for 1978, 12 more than in 1977. The number of civil jury trials dropped from 40 in 1977 to 39 in 1978. In the criminal category, felony jury trials increased from 51 in 1977 to 75 in 1978 and the number of misdemeanor jury cases dropped from 36 in 1977 to 25 in 1978. The judges of the Twenty-Third spent a total of 141 days hearing jury trials in 1978; this averages approximately 28 jury days per judge. Criminal jury cases occupied 90 days and 51 days were spent hearing civil jury trials.

Trial dates were assigned to 330 civil hearings. Only nine of these cases were set on dates more than ninety days in advance. There were 2,376 hearing dates set. Of this number 286 were not set for the present term. The terminations history revealed that 47.5% of the 2,698 civil cases were concluded within one year. Of the 2,495 criminal cases terminated, 89.5% or 2,232 were disposed of within five months of filing.

TWENTY-FOURTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Twenty-Fourth Judicial Circuit is comprised of the counties of Amherst, Bedford, Campbell, Nelson, and the cities of Bedford, Lynchburg, and Waynesboro. Currently, the circuit is authorized four judgeships and is served by Judges O. Raymond Cundiff, William W. Sweeney, Robert C. Goad, and Norman K. Moon. The chief judge is Judge Cundiff who holds court in Lynchburg. Judge Moon sits in Campbell County while Judge Sweeney sits in Bedford. The counties of Amherst and Nelson along with the city of Waynesboro are handled by Judge Goad.

The population of the circuit was 184,622 according to the 1970 census and was estimated at 199,000 in 1977 by the Tayloe Murphy Institute. The city of Lynchburg and the surrounding Campbell County contained 54% of the total population with 107,400 people. Based on the Tayloe Murphy estimates, the population per judge was 49,750 which ranked the Twenty-Fourth Circuit as fifteenth among all the circuits, highest ranked first. The circuit's population per judge was higher than the state mean of 47,986.

In 1978 the circuit commenced 4,730 new cases, an increase of 14% over the 1977 caseload of 4,149. By comparison, the state's commenced caseload increased 6.6%. The 1978 caseload per judge in the Twenty-Fourth was 1,183 which was somewhat similar to the state average of 1,169 commenced cases per judge.

Concluded cases for 1978 numbered 4,491 which was 12.8% more than the 3,981 cases terminated in 1976. In 1978, 203 cases were purged through the application of Virginia Code Section 8-154 compared with 195 in 1977. The 1978 pending caseload for the Twenty-Fourth was 2,172 which varied from the 1,933 pending cases of the previous year. The number of terminated cases per judge was 1,123, and the number of pending cases per judge was 543.

The composition of the circuit's 1978 commenced caseload was 19.1% law, 37.8% equity, 25.5% felony, and 20.2% misdemeanor. These percentages were similar to the state's distribution of 22.3% law, 35.2% equity, 23.5% felony, and 18.6% misdemeanor.

Jury trials totaled 248 for 1978, 15 more than in 1977. The judges of the Twenty-Fourth Circuit spent a total of 212 days hearing jury trials in 1978; almost 53 days per judge, 130 days were occupied with criminal jury cases, and 82 days were spent hearing civil jury trials.

Trial dates were assigned for 622 civil hearings. Dates more than ninety days in advance were set on 338 or 54.3% of these cases. In criminal cases 2,248 hearing dates were set. Of this number 405 or 18% were not set for the present term. The terminations history revealed that 63.2% of the 2,343 civil cases were concluded within one year. Of the 2,148 criminal cases terminated, 92.7% were disposed of within five months of filing.

TWENTY-FIFTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Twenty-Fifth Circuit is comprised of seven counties: Alleghany, Augusta, Bath, Botetourt, Craig, Highland, and Rockbridge. Also included in the circuit are the cities of Buena Vista, Clifton Forge, Covington, Lexington, and Staunton. There are courts in all of the above localities with the exception of the cities of Covington and Lexington which utilize the county courts. The circuit currently has three authorized judgeships. At present Judges William S. Moffett, Jr., Roscoe B. Stephenson, Jr., and Rudolph Bumgardner, III, are serving the circuit. Judge Holstein retired on December 15, 1977, replaced by Judge Bumgardner effective February 2, 1978.

The population of the circuit as determined by the 1970 census was 156,843 and was recently estimated by the Tayloe Murphy Institute at 164,800. The two localities experiencing the largest growth during the last six years were Augusta County which gained more than 13,000 persons (approximately 5% annual growth) and Botetourt County which increased by approximately 3,000 persons. Augusta County and Staunton together account for 45% of the circuit's total population. The population per judge based on the 1977 data was approximately 54,933 which ranked tenth among the thirty-one circuits. The state average per judge in 1978 was 47,986.

In 1976 the Twenty-Fifth Circuit commenced 3,248 cases. The 1977 caseload increased by 6.3% to 3,452. The 1978 caseload experienced an additional increase of 108 cases to 3,560.

The 1978 commenced caseload per judge of 1,187 was 18 cases higher than the state average of 1,169. As with the population figures, Augusta and Staunton in 1977 accounted for one half of the total commenced caseload.

In 1976, the circuit concluded 3,495 cases, which exceeded the 1975 disposition level by 698 cases. The increase in dispositions occurred principally in equity cases and was basically a clearing up of the equity docket in Alleghany County. The average cases concluded per judge in 1976 was 1,165. As a result of the concluded caseload exceeding the commenced caseload during 1976, the pending caseload at the end of 1976 was 4,181 which was below the 4,432 figure at the close of 1975. Terminations for 1977 were 3,214. The pending caseload increased in 1977. The circuit's total at the end of 1977 was 4,372 cases. With 92 more new cases than terminations in 1978, the pending caseload at the close of the year was 4,273.

The composition of the circuit's 1978 caseload was 15.6% law, 40.9% equity, 24.4% felony, and 18.9% misdemeanor. In 1977 the composition was 13% law, 42.8% equity, 24% felony, and 19.9% misdemeanor. The Twenty-Fifth had a higher percentage of equity cases with a correspondingly lower percentage of law cases when compared with the state's distribution of 22.3% law, 35.2% equity, 23.5% felony and 18.6% misdemeanor.

Jury trials totaled 111 in 1976 which exceeded the 1975 figure of 82 trials by 29. Jury trials in 1977 totaled 88. Only 69 jury trials were heard in 1978.

From 1966 through 1977 the circuit experienced an average annual increase of 3.9% new cases per year. Currently, this increase amounts to approximately 130 additional new cases per year. The caseload for 1978 based on this percentage growth was estimated at nearly 3,580 cases.

Throughout the circuit, commissioners in chancery are used in partition suits and other chancery causes; however, they are generally not used in divorce cases. In addition, all the courts have four terms per year in civil and criminal cases.

For the year the judges spent a total of 87 days in jury trials. In the assigning of trial dates for law cases, 177 out of 358 or 49.6% were given dates within ninety days from the date of setting. In the assigning of trial dates for criminal cases, 231 out of 1,389 were not set for trial during the same term as the date of setting. The history of terminated cases revealed that 44.3% of the civil cases were concluded within one year. In addition, 72.6% of the criminal cases were concluded within five months of filing.

TWENTY-SIXTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Twenty-Sixth Judicial Circuit is comprised of the counties of Clarke, Frederick, Page, Rockingham, Shenandoah, Warren and the cities of Harrisonburg and Winchester. Currently, the circuit is authorized three judgeships and is served by Judges Robert K. Woltz, Joshua L. Robinson, and Duncan C. Gibb. The chief judge is Judge Robinson who holds court in Page and Rockingham Counties (includes Harrisonburg). Judge Woltz sits in Clarke and Frederick while Judge Gibb handles the counties of Shenandoah and Warren along with the city of Winchester.

The population of the circuit was 168,867 according to the 1970 census and was estimated at 196,900 in 1977 by the Tayloe Murphy Institute. The two largest localities in terms of population are Rockingham County (53,700) and the Frederick-Winchester area (50,700) which account for 53% of the total population. Based on the Tayloe Murphy estimates, the population per judge was 65,633 which ranked the Twenty-Sixth Circuit as fifth in the state among all circuits, highest ranked first. The state means was 47,986.

In 1978 the Twenty-Sixth Circuit commenced 3,237 new cases, an increase of 2.1% over the 1977 caseload of 3,170. By comparison, the state's commenced caseload increased 6.6%. The 1978 caseload per judge in the Twenty-Sixth was 1,079 which was somewhat lower than the state average of 1,169 commenced cases per judge.

Concluded cases for 1978 numbered 3,073 which was 8.2% more than the 2,839 cases terminated in 1977. In 1978 192 civil cases were removed through the application of Virginia Code Section 8-154 compared with 173 in 1977. The circuit's 1977 pending caseload was 2,446 which varied only slightly from the 2,381 pending in the previous year. Pending caseload rose by 164 to 2,610 at the close of 1978.

The composition of the circuit's 1978 commenced caseload was 17.8% law, 43.2% equity, 29.5% felony, and 9.3% misdemeanor. Compared to the state's distribution, the greatest variance occurred in the criminal category where the state's percentage of felonies was 23.5% and of misdemeanors 18.6%. Thus the Twenty-Sixth Circuit had a far greater percentage of felonies and a correspondingly lower percentage of misdemeanors.

Jury trials totaled 203 for 1978, 21 less than in 1977. The judges of the Twenty-Sixth spent a total of 165 days hearing jury trials in 1978 or 55 days per judge. Criminal jury cases occupied 111 days and 54 days were spent hearing civil jury trials.

Trial dates were assigned for 174 civil hearings. Dates more than ninety days in advance were set on 60 or 34.5% of these cases. In criminal cases, 634 hearing dates were set. Of this number, 288 or 45.4% were not set for the present term. The terminations history revealed that 73.4% of the 1,124 criminal cases were disposed of within five months of filing. Of the 1,949 civil cases terminated, 54.2% were concluded within one year.

TWENTY-SEVENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Twenty-Seventh Judicial Circuit serves the southwestern counties of Carroll, Floyd, Grayson, Montgomery, Pulaski, Wythe, and the cities of Galax and Radford. The circuit currently is authorized three judgeships and has three judges: R. William Arthur, Kenneth I. Devore, and Dale W. LaRue. Judge Arthur sits primarily in Pulaski and Wythe Counties. Judge Devore sits in Floyd, Montgomery, and Radford City, while Judge LaRue sits primarily in Carroll and Grayson Counties. Judge Matthews retired January 31, 1978.

The population of the circuit as determined by the 1970 census was 165,040 and the 1977 population was recently estimated by the Tayloe Murphy Institute at 184,600. The circuit's 1980 population was projected at 196,500. Montgomery County was the largest county in terms of population with 59,100 and is expected to grow to approximately 68,400 by 1980. The population per judge, based on the 1977 population data, was approximately 61,533 which ranked eighth among the thirty-one circuits in 1978. The state average per judge was 47,986.

The 1978 caseload was 3,752 commenced cases which was approximately 17.7% higher than the 1977 total. The commenced caseload per judge in 1978 was 1,251 cases, which was more than the state average.

In 1978 the circuit concluded 3,558 cases, exceeding the 1977 dispositional level by 386 cases. Terminations for 1977 were 3,072, representing a 15.8% change. Terminations on a statewide basis increased 3.2%. A recount of pending cases was done in early 1977. As a result of this count and the increase of new cases over terminated, pending cases rose at the close of 1977 and again in 1978.

The composition of the circuit's 1978 commenced caseload was 16.7% law, 42.5% equity, 24.5% felony and 16.2% misdemeanor. These percentages were similar to the 1977 percentages of 17.7% law, 41.1% equity, 24% felony, and 15.9% misdemeanor.

Jury trials totaled 143 in 1978 which was only slightly lower than the 1977 total of 162 trials. Jury trials in 1978 took 141 days.

In assigning trial dates for law cases, 119 out of 358 were given dates within ninety days from the date of setting. In the assigning of trial dates for criminal cases, 141 out of 1,380 (10.2%) were set for trial beyond the term of setting. The history of terminated cases revealed that 59.6% of the civil cases were concluded within one year. In addition, 93.4% of the criminal cases were concluded within five months of filing.

TWENTY-EIGHTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Twenty-Eighth Judicial Circuit serves the counties of Smyth and Washington and the city of Bristol. The current authorization for the circuit is two judgeships. Judge J. Aubrey Matthews is the chief circuit judge. Judge Wayne L. Bell is also a judge of the circuit.

The population of the circuit experienced a steady increase for the first six years of the 1970's. The population will continue to increase from the 1977 estimate of 95,000 through the end of the decade. The population per judge of the circuit was 47,500. This figure ranked nineteenth among the circuits and was slightly below the state average of 47,986.

The Twenty-Eighth Circuit commenced 1,786 and terminated 1,777 cases during 1978. The previous year 1,751 cases were commenced and 1,544 were concluded. The commenced caseload per judge was 893, which was less than the state average commenced caseload per judge.

The composition of the 1978 commenced caseload was 22.1% law, 44.2% equity, 19.4% felony, and 12.4% misdemeanor. The composition of the state caseload was 22.3% law, 35.2% equity, 23.5% felony, and 18.6% misdemeanor.

Pending cases rose from 1,178 in 1976 to 1,307 at the end of 1977. Since new cases and terminations were evenly balanced in 1978, the pending caseload remained steady.

There were 117 jury trials in 1978 and 76 jury trials in 1977. The judges spent a total of 102 days hearing jury trials. These days were equally divided between the 46 civil and 56 criminal jury trials.

In assigning trial dates for the 333 law cases, 65 were given dates more than ninety days from the date of setting. In the 460 criminal cases assigned trial dates, only eight were given dates beyond the term. The history of terminated cases revealed that 44.3% of the civil cases were disposed of within one year. In addition, 77.8% of the criminal cases were concluded within five months of filing.

TWENTY-NINTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Twenty-Ninth Judicial Circuit serves the southwestern Virginia counties of Bland, Buchanan, Dickenson, Giles, Russell, and Tazewell. The circuit has three authorized judgeships. The circuit judges are Nicholas E. Persin, Chief Judge, Glyn R. Phillips, and Robert Lee Powell.

The population of the circuit decreased by 10.9% during the 1960's. This trend was reversed during the perid from 1970 to 1977. The population grew to 155,200 by the end of 1977, a 15.3% increase over 1970. The projected population for 1980 was estimated at 153,000. The population per judge of the circuit based on the 1977 figure was 51,733. The circuit ranked thirteenth among the thirty-one circuits and was approximately 3,800 higher than the state mean in population per judge.

The 1978 commenced caseload for the circuit increased by 8.1% over 1977 and was 3,484 cases. The commenced caseload per judge was 1,161, compared with 1,169 commenced cases per judge for all circuit courts. The composition of the new caseload was 30% law, 33.6% equity, 15.8% felony, and 20.3% misdemeanor. Law cases formed a higher percentage of commenced cases for the circuit than for the state. Felony cases were correspondingly lower. Equity and misdemeanor percentages were similar to those of the state.

The circuit terminated 2,961 cases in 1978. This was 186 more than the previous year. The pending caseload at the close of 1977 was 2,787, compared to 2,701 pending cases at the end of 1976. This rose sharply in 1978 with 523 additional cases, reaching 3,310.

The judges of the circuit heard 101 civil jury trials and 114 criminal jury trials during 1978 compared with 210 total jury trials in 1977. It took 88 days to dispose of the civil trials and 87 days to dispose of the criminal trials.

Trial dates were assigned to 585 law cases of which 90 were set more than ninety days ahead. Of the 960 criminal trial dates set, 316 were not set for the present term. The history of terminated cases showed that approximately one half of the civil cases were terminated within one year of setting. Of the 1,087 criminal cases terminated, 69.6% were concluded within five months of filing.

THIRTIETH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Thirtieth Judicial Circuit consists of the counties of Lee, Scott, and Wise. The Wise County Circuit Court also serves the city of Norton. The circuit has a current authorization of two judgeships. Judge M. M. Long, Jr., is the chief circuit judge and S. W. Coleman, III, is also a judge in the circuit.

The 1960 U. S. Census reported the circuit's population as 100,212. By 1970 the population had fallen to 84,815. In 1977, the Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated that the circuit had again reached the 1960 level with a total population of 100,200. The 1977 population per judge for the Thirtieth was 50,100 and ranked the circuit fourteenth in a statewide comparison of all thirty-one circuits.

The circuit commenced 2,245 cases in 1978 compared with 1,891 in 1977. This represented an 18.72% increase with the largest gain occurring in the number of law cases, up 167 or 30.29%. By comparison the state's commenced caseload increased 6.57%. Misdemeanors also increased considerably by 159 cases or 22.58%. Felonies rose by 22.22% or 42 while the number of equity cases, 827, remained constant. With a commenced caseload per judge of 1,123, the Thirtieth ranked eighth among the seventeen rural circuits.

The composition of the 1978 caseload was 30.29% law, 36.84% equity, 10.29% felony, and 22.58% misdemeanor. This distribution contained a significantly higher percentage of law cases and a correspondingly lower percentage of felony cases than the state's 22.3% law and 18.6% misdemeanor. The circuit's equity and misdemeanor percentages did not vary significantly from the state's.

Judges Long and Coleman disposed of 1,734 cases in 1978, 238 more than in 1977. Due to the sharp increase in the commenced caseload, the number of cases pending rose from 3,426 in 1977 to 3,937 at the close of 1978.

In 1978 there were 74 law, 23 felony, and 64 misdemeanor jury trials to total 161, a decrease of 39 from 1977. Of the 145 jury days, 79 were connected with law cases and 66 with criminal actions.

Trial dates were assigned for 743 civil hearings. Of these law cases, 55.45% or 412 were set on dates more than ninety days in advance. In criminal cases, 1,186 hearing dates were set. Of this number, 83.22% were set for the present term. The terminations history for 1978 revealed that 81.2% of the civil cases were concluded within one year. Of the 548 criminal cases terminated, 60.77% were disposed of within five months of filing, 23.36% from six to nine months, and 15.88% more than nine months from filing.

THIRTY-FIRST JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Thirty-First Judicial Circuit was formed July 1, 1977, by separating Prince William County and the cities of Manassas and Manassas Park from the Nineteenth Circuit. The 1977 Legislature redesignated the circuit and provided for an authorization of two judgeships for the Thirty-First Circuit. Judge Arthur W. Sinclair is currently the chief circuit judge and Percy Thornton, Jr., is also a resident judge of the circuit.

The population of the circuit was estimated at 153,800 in 1977 by the Tayloe Murphy Institute. The 1960 census gave the population as 50,164; thus the area has more than tripled its population in the last two decades. It is projected to reach 176,300 by 1980. The population per judge was 76,900, ranking Prince William first among the thirty-one circuits in that comparison. The state mean was 47,986.

In 1978 the Thirty-First Circuit commenced 2,818 cases, up 405 or 16.78% over the 1977 level, compared to an overall Commonwealth increase of 6.57%. This continued a trend of significantly rising caseload for the circuit. Sharp increases in equity and felony cases were responsible for most of the growth. Felonies rose 33.2% in 1977 and in 1978 by 26.96% (up 134). In 1978, there were 192 more equity cases, up 18.03%. Law cases rose by 13.16% (85) while the number of misdemeanors remained constant. The 1978 commenced caseload per judge for the Thirty-First was 1,409 and ranked the circuit second among the fourteen urban circuits, highest ranked first.

The two judges of the Thirty-First concluded 2,561 cases in 1978, an increase of 11.69% over the 2,293 dispositions in 1977. Since the commenced caseload rose more sharply than the concluded, the number of pending cases increased by 525 cases over the 1977 level of 2,508. Terminations per judge for 1978 were 1,147.

The composition of the 1978 caseload was 25.94% law, 44.61% equity, 22.39% felony, and 7.06% misdemeanor varying little from the 1977 breakdown. Prince William continued to have a much greater percentage of civil cases, 70.6%, compared with the state's 57.5% civil and 42.1% criminal. While Prince William's felony percentage of 22.39% was similar to the state's 23.5%, the circuit's percentage of commenced misdemeanor cases, 7.05, was much less than the Commonwealth percentage of 18.6.

Jury trials totaled 75 in 1978, increasing almost 30% over 1977 and almost reaching the 1976 level of 83. The two judges of the Thirty-First spent a total of 77 days hearing jury trials. As a result, although the number of jury trials increased significantly, the judges actually spent 24 days less hearing 17 more jury trials in 1978 than in 1977.

Trial dates were assigned for 353 civil hearings. Of these cases, 327 or 92.63% were set on dates more than ninety days in advance. In criminal cases, 779 hearing dates were set. Of this number, 47.5% were set for the present term. The terminations history for 1978 revealed that 47.77% of the civil cases were concluded within one year. Of the 836 criminal cases terminated, 75.72% were disposed of within five months of filing, 17.11% from six to nine months of filing, and only 7.18% more than nine months from filing.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF VIRGINIA DISTRICT COURT SYSTEM

In 1973, the courts not of record were reorganized to form a unified District Court System of limited jurisdiction. Chapter 546 of the 1973 Virginia Acts of Assembly, which was approved on March 20, 1973, provided for the amendment, addition, and repeal of a number of sections of the Code of Virginia so as to establish a system of general and juvenile and domestic relations district courts within the framework of the unified court structure. County courts, city municipal courts, and county and city juvenile and domestic relations courts were redesignated as district courts and town municipal courts and other town courts having general civil and criminal jurisdiction were abolished. Section 16.1-69.6 provided for the administration of the new district courts under a system of geographic districts. District lines were drawn on the basis of circuit lines creating thirty-two districts.

As a result of Chapter 546, there are only two types of courts under the present district system: Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Courts which assume the jurisdiction and function of pre-1973 county, city and regional juvenile and domestic relations courts, and General District Courts which perform the work not delegated to the Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Courts.

Section 16.1-69.9 provides for the transition to a full-time judiciary in the district court system, requiring that by June 30, 1980, all judges be full-time and elected to six-year terms by the General Assembly. Until that time, part-time judges are appointed by the circuit judges serving in the respective area. Each full-time district court judge is to be paid a salary equal to ninety percent of a circuit court judge's salary. Full-time district court judges selected for a term commencing on or after July 1, 1973, were prohibited from engaging in the practice of law. In addition, every full-time judge and substitute judge of a district court was required at the time of his appointment, or election, to be licensed to practice law in Virginia and to reside within the boundaries of the district in which he serves. District court judges are permitted to serve more than one local district court of the same type (juvenile and domestic relations or general district court) but not both a juvenile and domestic relations district court and a general district court.

Section 16.1-69.10 set forth procedures for the determination of the number of judges required in each district. The statute provided that the General Assembly would make such determinations based upon recommendations made annually by the Committee on District Courts. Pursuant to that provision, the Committee on District Courts, through the Office of the Executive Secretary, conducted similar evaluations of judicial workloads in all judicial districts. In 1978, the Committee on District Courts recommended to the General Assembly that one additional juvenile and domestic relations district court judgeship be added in the Twelfth Judicial District as well as one juvenile and domestic relations district court judgeship in the Twenty-Fourth Judicial District. Based upon the Committee's recommendation, the General Assembly approved the creation of both of these positions effective July 1, 1979. In addition, the General Assembly authorized the creation of one additional general district court judgeship in the Third Judicial District effective July 1, 1979.

Sections 16.1-69.30 through 16.1-69.36 were enacted to govern the administration and supervision of the district courts. The major responsibility for the immediate supervision of the district courts was given to the Committee on District Courts. Other aspects of this supervision were made the responsibility of the district court judges themselves. The district judges select their own chief district judge, and Section 16.1-69.35 allowed the chief district judges to assign other judges in their district to handle the work of judges unable to hold court. It also charged the chief judges with the responsibility to determine when the district courts or divisions of such courts should be open for the transaction of business. The statute also permits a chief judge to request the Executive Secretary of the Supreme Court to temporarily assign a general district or juvenile district judge from one district to serve in another.

Section 16.1-69.30 declared the district courts subordinate to the Supreme Court and subject to the administrative supervision of the Chief Justice. In Section 16.1-69.32 the Supreme Court was directed to formulate uniform rules of practice and procedure in the district courts, these to be the only rules in all the district courts in Virginia. Much of the staffing of the district courts was made the responsibility of the Committee on District Courts. No statutory changes expressly declared that personnel of the district system be state employees. However, Section 16.1-69.46 indicated that salaries of clerks and personnel of the district courts were to be primarily payable by the state, although all district court personnel are appointed by, serve at the pleasure of, and are subject to removal by the chief judge of the district court in which they serve (Section 16.1-69.39). The Committee on District Courts was made responsible for establishing guidelines and determining the necessity for the employment of substitute judges, clerks, deputy clerks, and all other personnel of the district courts and to authorize the employment of such personnel by the courts. The statute requires that the Executive Secretary assist the Committee in the performance of its duties.

The district system is state financed except for the provision of physical court facilities by localities and authorization for localities to supplement district judges' salaries.

THE YEAR IN SUMMARY

Virginia's District Courts reported a total of 1,596,654 new general district cases and 176,052 new juvenile and domestic relations cases in 1978. The additional 115,599 new general district cases represented an increase of 7.81% and reflected growth in all three categories of cases: criminal, traffic, and civil. The additional cases were more than twice the increase experienced between 1976 and 1977. The expansion in the juvenile and domestic relations caseload of 13,614 additional new cases was equivalent to an 8.38% increase. While the number of new cases increased in the general district courts, the number of hearings, 1,879,035, represented a decline of less than one percent. The decline of 15,235 hearings from the 1977 value was caused by a reduction in the number of traffic hearings. The reduction in traffic hearings may be attributed to the traffic infraction law which went into effect July 1, 1977. Shortly after its enactment, the public began to utilize the option of pleading guilty to the infraction, prepaying the fine, and waiving the hearing. During 1978, as the public became more aware of the option an increasing number of traffic hearings were waived. By the end of the year, 290,301 traffic hearings had been waived, which was two and a half times more than were waived in the first six months following enactment. While the number of traffic hearings decreased the number of criminal and civil hearings both increased. A 7.84% rise in hearings accompanied the increase in juvenile and domestic relations new cases.

The change in the clerical workload of the courts was best established by the number of transactions handled. The transactions represented the number of times cases are placed on the court's docket, regardless of whether the cases are heard or the hearings are waived. The reason the hearings and waived hearings were counted was that regardless of whether the case was heard or not, the papers must be pulled for court, the case must be placed on the docket, the disposition recorded, and the papers refiled. The 2,229,186 general district transactions during 1978 were 177,793, or 8.67%, more than occurred in the previous year. The number of juvenile and domestic relations transactions, 344,887, also rose by 28,147, or 8.89%, more than 1977.

THE DISTRICT COURT STATISTICS

Docketing and Caseload Reporting System (UDS). The year 1978 was the third year under this system which utilizes a system of uniform docketing sheets, thus providing a consistent method of counting cases. Each court uses standard docket sheets which have a tear-off section. The tear-off section is completed line by line for each case on the docket. The tear-off data is then compiled and used to prepare the court's monthly summary report to the Office of the Executive Secretary. The UDS system counts four things: new cases, hearings, hearings waived, and dispositions.

The first time the case is placed on the docket it is counted as a new case. On the second and all subsequent hearings the case is counted as a continuance. Each time the case is heard it is counted as a hearing. If the case is dismissed prior to court or the hearing is waived, the docket tear-off sheet is coded as such and a hearing is not counted. In addition, the coding of the tear-off provides more detailed information about the case, such as the type of hearing and whether or not the case received a final disposition.

It is important to understand that while it is quite natural to attempt to compare the caseloads of both clerks' offices and judges with others, caution should be exercised. First, clerks' offices are very different in size and equipment. Larger offices are able to specialize and have special office equipment including computer assistance. On the other hand, small offices with one or two clerks who must be "experts" in their fields seldom have more equipment than a typewriter and an adding machine. Similar problems occur in attempting to compare judges. Virginia's district court judges are not alike in many respects. First, many judges sit in rural districts and must travel to as many as five or six courts. These judges are faced with not only their work on the bench but also the administrative problems of numerous courts. Judges in urban areas, while generally sitting in only one court, must deal with a large number of attorneys and hold court in both the mornings and the afternoons. Because of these differences, it is better to group courts as to whether they are urban or rural. However, even when grouping the courts for examination, care should be exercised. The averages and figures given for each district and court provide only a starting point for more detailed comparisons. For example, the case mix is important because some case types are known to take longer than others. One must not examine the numbers so long that the goal of justice in the individual case is forgotten. The caseload figures contained in this report are primarily used as a planning tool. The figures should not be used in a vacuum with respect to decision making.

STAFFING THE DISTRICT COURT SYSTEM

The District Court System is divided into thirty-two judicial districts composed of two hundred and eight district court clerk's offices. Of these offices, 39% were general district, 35% were juvenile and domestic relations, and 26% were combined offices which provide services to both general district and juvenile and domestic relations courts. At the close of 1978 the district courts were authorized a total of 823 personnel. Of this total, 815 were permanent employee positions. The remaining seven positions were wage employees who were considered part-time. The increase of 18 personnel from 805 at the end of 1977 to 823 represented an increase of 2.24%. The total gain of personnel from 1975 to 753.9 to 823 in 1978 indicated an annual growth rate of three percent. The clerk's offices themselves ranged in size from Fairfax County General District Court with 36 employees to small rural courts which employ only one person.

In 1978, the District Court System was served by a total of one hundred and sixty judges. One hundred and forty-five were considered full time while the remaining fifteen were considered part time. Of this total eighty-five full-time judges and all fifteen part-time judges sat in the general district courts. The remaining sixty full-time judges plus four of the part-time judges heard juvenile and domestic relations cases. During the 1978 Legislature, two additional judgeships were authorized. The Nineteenth Judicial District gained one additional general district judgeship effective April 1, 1978. The second judgeship authorized was for the Twenty-Third Judicial District increasing the number of juvenile and domestic relations judgeships to three.

It should also be noted that the district courts utilized substitute judges for disqualifications and absences. During 1978, the general district courts utilized 2,677 substitute judge days while the juvenile courts used 1,429 substitute days. The total, 4,106 substitute days, was two and a half percent higher than the 1977 value of 4,005 substitute days.

GENERAL DISTRICT COURTS

The general district courts hear three types of cases: criminal, traffic, and civil. During 1978, the general district courts reported a total of 1,596,654 new cases, 1,879,035 hearings, 1,526,444 dispositions, and 2,229,186 transactions. The increase of 115,599 new cases (7.81%) over 1977 was caused by growth in all three categories. The largest gains occurred in the number of new traffic cases and civil cases. The decline of 15,235 hearings was caused by a significant reduction in the number of traffic hearings as a result of the traffic infraction law. Both the number of criminal hearings, 489,553, and civil hearings, 522,827, experienced increases of 3.37% and 14.32%, respectively, over the 1977 level. The overall ratio of hearings to new cases, 1.18, was also indicative of the increase in new cases while the number of hearings has decreased.

During 1978, the distribution of new cases was 56.60% traffic, 25.50% civil, and 17.90% criminal. While the civil percentage increased from that of 1977, the traffic and criminal portions declined. The distribution of hearings: 46.12% traffic, 27.83% civil, and 26.05% criminal, revealed the higher ratio of hearings to new cases in the criminal and civil caseloads.

Three districts in the state: Norfolk in the Fourth, Richmond in the Thirteenth, and Fairfax in the Nineteenth, continued to account for 27% of the state's total general district caseload. The top five urban districts, to also include Virginia Beach and Newport News, made up 35% of the state's caseload. Table D provides a summary of all general district cases by district.

CRIMINAL CASES

The total criminal caseload for the state is shown on Table G. The 285,840 new cases was two percent (5,602) higher than the level in 1977, while the number of hearings, 489,553, increased by 15,975 or 3.37%. The ratio of hearings to new cases, 1.71, was consistent with the 1977 level of 1.69. The number of dispositions, 269,700, was three percent higher than 1977. The ratio of dispositions to new cases, .94, indicated the courts were able to keep up with the new caseload. The number of hearings waived prior to court was less than seven percent of the new cases.

The courts reported the following breakdown of criminal hearings: 3.11% review progress hearings; 21.17% bond, arraignment, counsel appointment hearings; 0.13% extradition hearings; 7.14% preliminary hearings; 32.14% adjudicatory hearings with testimony; 34.29% adjudicatory hearings without testimony; 2.02% dispositional hearings. This breakdown of hearings was very consistent with those of 1976 and 1977. Hearings were waived in 19,238 cases. The state average caseload for full-time equivalent judges of 3,012 new cases and 5,159 hearings was above the 1977 average of 2,991 new cases and 5,054 hearings.

TRAFFIC CASES

The general district courts reported a traffic caseload of 903,646 new cases, 866,655 hearings, 866,405 dispositions, and 1,156,950 transactions during the year.

Table H provides a breakdown of traffic cases by district. The new caseload reflected an increase of 59,281 cases or 7.02% over the 1977 level of 844,365. The increase in the traffic cases, however, was not accompanied by an increase in hearings. The number of traffic hearings declined by 96,690 or ten percent. The traffic infraction law which went into effect July 1, 1977, is the major reason for the decline. Under this statute, 290,301 traffic hearings were waived in 1978. As a result, the law contributed to a twenty-five percent savings in total hearings. The ratio of hearings to new cases, .96, was indicative of the large number of traffic hearings being waived. The ratio in 1977 was 1.14 hearings. The dispositional rate of 866,405 cases for the year was eight percent higher than 1977. The ratio of dispositions to new cases, .96, was slightly above the value in 1977 of .95.

A percentage distribution of traffic hearings by type revealed the following: review progress hearings, 4.43%; bond, arraignment, counsel appointment hearings, 4.64%; preliminary hearings, .19%; adjudicatory hearings with testimony, 46.06%; adjudicatory hearings without testimony, 41.85%; and dispositional hearings, 2.84%.

The state average number of traffic cases and hearings per full-time equivalent judge was 9,522 new cases and 9,132 hearings. The average number of new cases per judge was up five and a half percent from 1977, while the number of hearings dropped eleven percent.

CIVIL

The number of new civil cases, 407,168, reported in 1978 was 14.23% higher than the previous year. The additional 50,716 new cases can be attributed in part to the continuing inflation. As the level of prices increase, people have less disposable income and rely more heavily on credit. When the amount of credit increases so does the probability of more delinquent accounts. The number of hearings for the year, 522,827, followed the increase in new cases as hearings rose by 14.32%. The majority of civil hearings, 61%, involved suits in debt. The other hearings involved garnishment, 12.72%; unlawful detainers, 18.72%; and other civil cases, 7.53%. Of the hearings 46% involved testimony while 54% did not. These values were consistent with those of 1977. In addition, 40,484 hearings were waived or the case was dismissed prior to court. The waived hearings or the cases dismissed were not reflected in the total number of hearings. The ratio of hearings to new cases, 1.28, was the same value as 1977. The ratio of dispositions to new cases, .96, was above the 1977 ratio and was consistent with the values of criminal and traffic. The significance of this ratio was that it demonstrated the district courts were able to meet the demand for court services.

The state averages per full-time equivalent judge of 4,290 new cases and 5,509 hearings were both significantly higher, 13%, than the 1977 values.

As expected the change in venue statute made by the 1977 Legislature which took effect October 1, 1977, has had an impact in the district courts. The change in venue allows the plaintiff the option to bring a suit against someone in another locality in the plaintiff's local court. While the urban district courts' civil caseload increased over sixteen percent, the rural district caseload increased by ten percent.

JUVENILE AND DOMESTIC RELATIONS COURTS

During 1978 the juvenile and domestic relations courts reported a total of 176,052 new cases, 339,632 hearings, and 159,108 dispositions. Of this caseload, approximately 70%, 126,709 new cases and 234,268 hearings, involved juveniles. The adult caseload reached 49,343 new cases and 105,364 hearings. The total increase in new cases for the juvenile and domestic relations courts was 8.38% or 13,614 new cases. The increase in hearings of 24,301 reflected a 7.84% increase.

The juvenile caseload for the year experienced a 9.47% rate of growth over the level in 1977. The increase of 10,964 new cases was accompanied by 20,328 additional hearings for a 9.5% increase. Criminal hearings continued to account for the largest share of juvenile hearings, 47.44%. Hearings involving traffic cases represented 26.87% of the total. The percentage of status and custody hearings were 7.02% and 18.66%, respectively.

The Unform Docketing System provides a more detailed breakdown of the types of juvenile hearings. The distribution by type was review progress hearings, 7.62%; bond, detention, and counsel appointment hearings, 14.86%; transfer hearings, 2.03%; adjudicatory hearings with testimony, 45.88%; adjudicatory hearings without testimony, 13.56%; and dispositional hearings, 16.05%. These percentages were similar to 1977.

Adjudicatory hearings accounted for sixty percent of all juvenile hearings, while the pre-trial and post-trial hearings accounted for forty percent. The ratio of hearings to new cases, 1.85, was identical to that of 1977. The courts also processed 4,831 cases in which the hearings were waived.

The adult caseload increased by 5.68% to 49,343 new cases while the number of hearings, 105,364, rose by 4.33%. The adult caseload was evenly split between criminal (49.52%) and non-support (50.48%). The number of dispositions reached 159,108 while the ratio of dispositions to new cases was .90. The adult hearings were composed of the following types of hearings: review progress hearings, 22%; bond, arraignment, counsel appointment hearings, 12.62%; preliminary hearings, 3.2%; adjudicatory hearings with testimony 40.09%; adjudicatory hearings without testimony, 16.59%; and dispositional hearings 5.49%. Fifty-seven percent of the hearings actually involved adjudication of cases. Forty-three percent of the hearings involved pre-trial and post-trial hearings and half of these involved review progress hearings. The ratio of hearings to new cases of 2.14 was consistent with the value of 1977, 2.16.

The average number of new cases per juvenile and domestic court judges for 1978 of 2,910 new cases was 8.10% higher than the 1977 value, 2,679. The number of hearings per judge, 5,614, represented an 8.59% increase over the 1977 level of 5,170.

URBAN AND RURAL DISTRICTS

The reasons for grouping the districts as to urban and rural have been stated previously. Table E provides a comparison of caseloads and hearings per general district judges in urban districts, while Table F lists this same information for rural districts. The average caseload for an urban general district judge in 1978 was 19,486 new cases and 23,692 hearings. The urban averages in 1977 were 18,124 new cases and 23,937 hearings. The rural general district judges averaged 14,191 new cases and 15,949 hearings while the 1977 values were 13,533 and 16,566, respectively.

As shown on Table K the urban district juvenile and domestic relations judges averaged 3,215 new cases and 6,370 hearings. Both averages were above the 1977 values of 2,952 new cases and 5,923 hearings. The rural juvenile and domestic relations judges averaged 2,589 new cases and 4,819 hearings in 1978. This is shown on Table L. These values also increased over the previous year's means of 2,380 new cases and 4,407 hearings.

The composition of the general district caseload between the urban and rural districts is shown on Chart VII. The rural districts have a larger percentage of traffic cases, 60.09%, as compared to the urban districts, 54.03%. The urban district's civil percentages are higher, 29.12%, versus 20.58% for the rural districts. The criminal percentages are fairly close, 16.85% for the urban districts and 19.33% for the rural districts.

DISTRICT COURT JUDICIAL WORKLOAD ANALYSIS

INTRODUCTION

The Committee on District Courts recommends new judicial positions in the General District Courts to the legislature, which in turn is responsible for the election of judges. The Uniform Docketing and Caseload Reporting System was designed to provide uniformity of information from the courts to establish a firm basis for comparing caseload and staffing needs.

By January 1976, all court locations in the Commonwealth's General District Courts were using uniform docketing. This portion of the system rigidly defines the procedures for docketing cases and recording data. Uniform procedures for reporting this information are established.

To provide for judicial workload analysis, a tear-off section of the uniform docketing sheet permits the recording of the amounts of bench time used by judges to handle various types of case hearings. A sample of courts was selected, bench minutes recorded, and weights determined for each type of hearings. The weights are the average time to conduct a hearing over the entire sample. Once the number of hearings and weights are known, the judges' workload can be projected. Workload is compared to the standard of judicial bench time and based on this comparison, the number of judges required to process a district's caseload was determined.

COURT SAMPLE

The sample of courts was taken from October 1977 through December 1977. Courts were divided by caseload into three sizes; small, medium, and large. A random sample of courts was selected. Twenty-nine general district localities were sampled. Forty-three courts or twenty-two percent of the total courts were visited. There were a total of 2,823 observations of individual hearings involving general district cases and 350 involving juvenile and domestic relations cases.

The sampling was conducted by two Commonwealth interns. They were instructed to code each hearing as to type as defined in the User Manual of the Uniform Docketing and Caseload Reporting System. Then the number of bench minutes which each hearing required were recorded. If more than one hearing involving a particular defendant occurred, they kept the total time and divided by the number of hearings. Any fractions of amount of time for any hearing was set at one minute. The minimum amount of time for any hearing was set at one minute.

TOTAL JUDICIAL TIME

The bench minute sample revealed that the average time for a criminal hearing in the General District Court is 3.15 minutes. Traffic hearings require 2.32 minutes and it takes 1.91 minutes on the average for each civil hearing. On the juvenile and domestic relations side, the sample showed that a juvenile hearing requires 8.55 minutes while adult hearings take 6.31 minutes. These are the average amounts of time for the sample taken. Particular cases will require more or less time.

The accuracy of the weighted values can be statistically determined. The criminal average lies in a 95% confidence interval with a lower bound of 2.76 and an upper bound of 3.54. The figure 3.15 is the expected value. In a similar way traffic weights are in the range from 2.05 to 2.59. The civil range is 1.04 and to 2.42. Since the sample size for juvenile and adult cases was smaller, there is less accuracy. This is shown by a large range for the confidence interval. For example, the interval for juvenile hearings is 7.00 to 10.10 and for adult hearings, 4.88 to 7.74.

Using 1977 data, the total bench minute time for the state equals 76,670 hours for general district and 41,106 hours for juvenile and domestic relations cases. These amounts were found by multiplying the total number of hearings in each category by the expected value and adding the resulting total. That is, there were 473,578 criminal hearings in 1977. The expected or average value for a criminal hearing is 3.15 minutes. Multiplying 3.15 times 473,578 gives 24,862 hours. This amount is added to traffic and civil to achieve the total number of hours. Juvenile and domestic relations are done in a similar way.

JUDGE STANDARD

An important step in the process is to determine a judge year value. The judicial standard bench time is set by the American Bar Association at four hours per working day. The average number of working days was found from information generated by the leave Accounting System. The average amounts of time taken for various leave by judges amounts a fifty-five (55) days per year. The time consists of twenty (20) vacation days, thirteen (13) training days, eleven (11) holidays, three (3) administrative leave days, and eight (8) sick days. This allows 205 working days or 820 hours for hearing cases per judge per year.

JUDGESHIPS

Using the 1977 data, the number of hours to hear all general district cases was calculated as 76-670 hours. Dividing this by the judge standard of 820 hours (76,670/820) gives 93.7 full-time equivalent judges needed to process the 1977 caseload for the entire state. There were actually 93.7 full-time equivalent judges. Using 41,106 hours for the juvenile and domestic relations processing, it would require 50.1 judges (41,106/820). The state had 60.8 FTE judges for the juvenile courts. Tables W-1 and W-2 give the weighted judgeships for both general and juvenile courts based on projected 1978 hearings.

JUDICIAL PREDICTOR

Using bench minutes as a single weighting tool poses several real questions that cannot be answered. Judges who have multiple courts over widely separated areas, judges who hear large numbers of complex cases, areas which have high concentrations of population, and so forth may be slighted under the weighting concept. An equation which contains as many of the large number of variables which influence judicial time can be another tool.

REGRESSION ANALYSIS

One of the frequently occurring situations in applied statistics is the analysis of data consisting of a number of observed responses which are dependent upon a set of separate inputs. The problem is to put these together to construct a predictor equation. The observed responses, in this case, judges, can be represented by a regression equation and are a function of independent responses such as population, caseload, travel, etc. The variables are related by the multiple linear regression model:

$j = W_1C_1 + W_2C_2 + \ldots + WnCn + e$, where

j is the number of judges in a district

Wi is the coefficient (weight) generated for each variable

Ci is the known values which influence the number of judges. These are caseload, hearings, population, travel, urban/rural district, etc.

Stepwise regression is a statistical technique which constructs a "best" equation by choosing the judicial variables that will provide an equation. First, the single best variable is placed in the equation. The next variable added is that which provides the best prediction in conjunction with the first variable. The method continues step by step until no other variable makes a significant contribution to the equation.

This procedure has been used in numerous studies and is appropriate for use in the judicial system. Predictor equations were established for both general district and juvenile courts. The dependent variables were full-time equivalent judges from each of the thirty-two districts. The predictor variables included in the final equation were caseload by category, population, urban or rural court, number of judges "riding the circuit," full or part-time judges in the district, and caseload changes.

PREDICTOR EQUATION

Results show that caseload is by far the best predictor. Table W-3 graphically demonstrates this relationship. The regression line is equivalent to a predictor equation. Districts above the line have excess judicial staff while districts below are "over achievers." However, many of the districts above the regression line are rural districts with judges who must travel extensively. Therefore, it appears that caseload alone is not the only variable necessary for a predictor equation.

Table W-4 predicts the number of general district judges by district based on projected 1978 caseload. Table W-5 gives the level of predicted juvenile and domestic relations judicial staffing.

CONCLUSION

Many states have attempted to establish weighted caseload systems. Most have failed due to the lack of understanding of statistical methods and their uses. The weighted caseload data and judicial predictor equations are two tools which may be used in conjunction with the many other factors that influence the need for judgeships in a particular area. Tables W-6 and W-7 compare weighted judges and predicted judges with the current number of full-time equivalent judges in both general and juvenile courts for the thirty-two districts.

COMMITTEE ON DISTRICT COURTS

The organization of a court system should serve the court's basic task of determining cases justly, promptly and economically. To this end, the organizational structure should facilitate sound, financial administration; efficient use of manpower, facilities, and equipment; and continuous planning for the future. The Constitution of Virginia places the responsibility of achieving this goal on the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Virginia. To assist the Chief Justice in carrying out that responsibility relative to the District Court System, the General Assembly created the Committee on District Courts.

The Committee on District Courts was establish pursuant to § 16.1-69.33, Code of Virginia, 1950, as amended, and is composed of nine members.

—Chairman of the House Courts of Justice Committee
—Two members from each of the Courts of Justice Committees to be appointed by the Chairmen
—A Circuit Court Judge, a General District Court Judge, and a Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Court Judge, each to be appointed by and serve at the pleasure of the Chief Justice

The Committee is fortunate to have the capable assistance of three Advisory Committees. In combination these committees provide expertise in every facet of court operation and have provided invaluable advice concerning the establishment of administrative policy.

Judges' Advisory Committee

Hon. Duncan M. Byrd, Judge, Twenty-Fifth Judicial District, General District Court

Hon. John H. Thomas, Judge, Twelfth Judicial District, Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Court

Clerks' Advisory Committee

Carrie T. Aylor, Clerk, Pittsylvania County General District Court

Phyllis E. Brown, Clerk, Alexandria Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Court

Bruce R. Cherry, Clerk, Portsmouth Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Court

Truesho P. Patten, Clerk, Washington County General District Court

Magistrates' Advisory Committee

David A. Lyon, III, Chief Magistrate, Sixth Judicial District

William C. Phelps, Chief Magistrate, Third Judicial District

Areas of Responsibility. By statute, the Committee on District Courts has been given the responsibility for fulfilling the following duties:

—Reporting annually to the General Assembly on the number of judges needed and the districts for which they should be authorized.
—Certifying that the filling of a vacancy occurring in the office of any judge of any district is or is not necessary.
—Authorizing the appointment of substitute judges.
—Authorizing the establishment of district court clerks' offices.
—Fixing salary classification schedules of court personnel.
—Establishing vacation and sick leave policies for district court judges.
—Establishing a sick leave policy for district court personnel and full-time magistrates.
—Establishing guidelines and determining the necessity for the employment of substitute judges, clerks, deputy clerks, and all other personnel of the district courts and authorizing the employment of such personnel.
—Authorizing the appointment of personnel to serve one or more district courts within any district.
—Authorizing clerk and deputy clerks of the circuit court of a political subdivision to serve as clerk and deputy clerk of one or more district courts within the political subdivision.
—Determining salaries of part-time judges.
—Authorizing the number of magistrates in each district.
—Authorizing the appointment of substitute magistrates.
—Fixing annual salaries of magistrates.
—Performing such other duties as may be conferred by law and necessary for the effective administration of justice.

NEW PERSONNEL PROGRAMS

During 1978 the major enhancements of the Personnel Management System were a review of the District Court Classification System and the development and implementation of an Appeals Policy and Procedure.

Classification Review

One of the major goals of a classification system is to provide a means by which tasks of similar complexity may be grouped to accomplish the desired result of "equal pay for equal work". The classifications should be of benefit to management as well as to the employees and should foster the accomplishment of the court's objectives. In conducting the District Court classification review several questions were addressed and are listed below:

I. Are the classifications for the clerks of court appropriate?
  A. How many levels of court clerk should there be?
  B. How should the requirement to possess knowledge of all types of cases in small and combined district courts be balanced with the managerial responsibilities of higher volume general district and juvenile and domestic relations district court clerks' offices?
  C. Should there be a distinction in classification levels:
    1. between clerks of small, combined offices and clerks of small general or juvenile and domestic relations offices?
    2. between clerks of large, specialized divisions of general district courts and clerks of all three divisions of large general or juvenile and domestic relations courts?
  D. Is the title "Court Clerk" appropriate?

II. How many and what classification of supervisory positions are necessary?

III. What should be the salary relationship between the Deputy Court Clerk II and Court Clerk I?

IV. What criteria should distinguish deputy clerk responsibility from other clerical functions?

V. What level of secretarial services are needed?

I. In addressing the clerks' classifications, it was decided that their primary responsibility is to manage the office so that all administrative requirements of the court may be met. Management functions are the primary criteria in determining clerks' classifications. Clerks' management activities may be grouped into four major areas: records management, financial management, personnel management, and public relations. All, except the public relations, may be measured by annual new caseload, funds accounted for, and the number of employees in the office. In the analyses used in developing clerks' classifications, the clerks' involvement in management activities is the fundamental consideration. The degree that clerks' involvement in management functions increases is very subtle. This complicates the development of separate clerks' classifications, however, three classifications were established. Within each classification there are varying levels of management involvement, yet there are more similarities than differences. The lowest classification of court clerk recognizes that all clerks' responsibilities involve managerial functions and require knowledge of case categories. As volume increases, involvement in managerial responsibilities increases, as does the requirement to be knowledgeable in the dynamics of an organization. This is recognized by the classifications.

The management responsibilities of small, combined courts equate those of small general or juvenile and domestic relations courts and those of large specialized divisions equate those of the large juvenile and domestic relations courts or all three divisions of the general district courts. For this reason, a different classification is not supported. Although a greater degree of knowledge of case categories is required of clerks in small, combined offices than those in separate general or juvenile and domestic relations offices, that degree in and of itself does not outweigh the management functions. Similarly, clerks of large specialized divisions have more limited case type knowledge than clerks of all three divisions of large general district or juvenile and domestic relations courts. Although their knowledge of their specialized area is more detailed, the knowledge difference does not supersede the primary similarities in management functions.

The major reason for considering a change in the title of court clerk is to more accurately reflect the managerial responsibility assigned to the positions. Circuit court clerks carry this title as does the Clerk of the Supreme Court. The title and its accompanying responsibilities are well known to all members of legal circles. Throughout the Code of Virginia there are references to the clerk of the court. Changing the title in the district courts would add inconsistency between the Supreme Court, circuit, and district courts and would necessitate a change in the statutes. The title has been changed from "court clerk" to "district court clerk" to distinguish this classification from the circuit court clerks.

II. Deputy Court Clerks II should supervise one or more divisions of the court, and their span of control should be from three to seven positions. The Court Accounting Clerk II is a specialized position which is responsible for the court's accounting where the clerk must delegate this function. It should also supervise any personnel assigned to the bookkeeping area although this number would usually be less than three.

III. The responsibilities of the Deputy Court Clerks II and Court Clerks I are not exact duplicates of each other. Clerks receive less direct supervision than is available to Deputy Court Clerks II. In some management areas, such as public relations, the Court Clerks I have a higher level of responsibility. In others, such as records and personnel management, the Deputy Court Clerks II's responsibility equals and often exceeds the Court Clerks I's. These factors balance each other, and the salary scale for each should remain the same.

IV. In reviewing the District Court System, both the Point System and Job Classification Method have been employed. A majority of the tasks performed in the clerks' offices have been analyzed in terms of several factors.

Knowledge, skills, abilities
Degree of analysis, judgment
Contacts with others
Consequences of errors
Degree of supervision
Level of difficulty of decisions
Scope of responsibility
Degree of repetitiveness
Extent to which established procedures are followed Necessity to resolve original problems

At the April, 1978 Clerks' Conference a description of several tasks handled in the clerk's office was distributed to the Executive Committee. The members were requested to conduct their evaluation process with consideration to these factors in two phases:

1. To analyze each individual task to be performed
2. To analyze each grouping of tasks as one activity

For example, is a high, medium, or low degree of analysis required in preparing index cards? On the basis of this analytical process, a classification should be recommended for each individual task as well as for an entire grouping of tasks, such as the case filing procedures. The analysis contained the two phases because such criteria as the level of responsibility and breadth of knowledge would very likely be different for a grouping of tasks for each individual task. Also, a better judgement can be developed for an activity by thoroughly evaluating the components (the tasks) of that activity. As a general rule, specialization to a very high degree is feasible only in larger courts.

In developing the "Classification Specifications" all tasks and activities were reviewed in terms of the ten factors and total relative values were established. The tasks with similar relative values have been grouped into one classification. The descriptions of the "Level of Difficulty or Responsibility" offer a narrative analysis of these factors' application to each classification and its typical duties.

To determine which functions merit the Deputy Court Clerk I classifications, it is first necessary to identify the key activities in the clerk's office. There are two:

1. Those which are directly associated with preparation for and follow-up after court. These include reviewing docket preparation and completion procedures for accuracy, being accountable for all cases, assuring compliance with court policies and procedures, and insuring that the court's instructions are executed.
2. Those which account for funds within the court's possession.

Those tasks which are crucial in the first category are described in the Deputy Court Clerk I specification. The perspective of this position is very broad in that it involves thorough understanding of the entire case processing stream and responsibility for the critical activities in that stream. Task assignments which require a lesser perspective or scope do not merit this classification level.

V. The volume of traditional secretarial work, such as handling the judge's correspondence, screening telephone calls, keeping appointment calendars, generated by any one judge is not sufficient to justify establishment of a full-time position. The overwhelming majority of correspondence and telephone calls directed to the judges should fall into categories which can be resolved through the normal processing mechanisms of the clerks' offices. In short, the entire clerk's office exists to meet the court's administrative needs. Those inquiries which do not fall into established procedures should be reviewed by a supervisory individual or the clerk to determine the manner in which to resolve the problem from an administrative standpoint. This process will handle a number of these problems. Only those matters which fall outside the realm of the administrative activities of the clerks' offices, which require the judge's administrative responsibility as opposed to clerk's office functions, should require the judge's personal attention. This volume is low.

This same analysis is true of courts with several judges. Although the volume of matters requiring their individual attention increases, it can usually be handled satisfactorily in combination with other functions from the clerk's office.

In rural areas the judges must travel to several localities and usually have one administrative office. Secretarial responsibilities will generally fall upon this office rather than being divided among the several courts. The analysis is still generally applicable and the volume of secretarial support required is low.

Responsibility for providing secretarial support should be assigned to an individual who has other clerk's office responsibilities. The classification of the position will be based upon the level of the clerk's office responsibilities of the employee and how they are combined with the secretarial functions. Approximately 30 to 40 percent of the employee's time should be required for secretarial responsibilities.

Appeals Policy and Procedure

As of July 1, 1978 the Committee on District Courts approved the implementation of the District Court System Appeals Policy and Procedure with an eye toward protecting the rights of both management and court personnel.

The concept upon which an employer-employee relationship is based is that an employer engages personnel so that the employer can direct their activities toward the accomplishment of the goals and objectives management has outlined. Implicit in this concept is the employer's right (or the right of the employer's designee) to take those actions, either positive or negative, which in the employer's best judgment motivate employees to reach and maintain standards of performance satisfactory to the employer. The limits to the authority and rights in this regard are those established by higher level management and state and federal statutes. The purposes of the appeals procedure are (1) to insure that the authority to appoint, remove, grant or deny merit increases, take disciplinary actions in directing employees' activities is exercised in a responsible, reasonable, and fair manner, and (2) to insure that employment practices do not discriminate on the basis of race, color, sex, religion, or national origin.

Administrative actions of the Office of the Executive Secretary which implement or apply policies and directions of the Committee on District Courts are not appealable under the Virginia District Court System Appeals Policy and Procedure. Appeal lies directly to the Committee on District Courts by letter stating the complaint. The Committee will take such actions as it deems appropriate in each case.

Permanent and wage employees who question the reasonableness of (1) the application of policies, (2) disciplinary actions other than removal, and (3) removal may use the established procedure in seeking solutions for actions they consider to be taken without just cause. The policies of the Committee on District Courts are not subject to appeal.

Appeals lie to the clerk of court, to the judge normally sitting in the court, to the chief district court judge, and finally to an appeals panel.

The Personnel Appeals Panel is composed of three court employees and three judges appointed by the Committee on District Courts with terms of two years. The panel represents the state geographically as well as by size and type of court. In addition the Committee has appointed three individuals in responsible personnel management positions in the private sector. When appeals are heard, one of these three is selected to serve as the seventh panel member.

The standing panel of six decides upon the merits of requests for panel hearings in cases involving other than removals, demotions, promotions, or denials or merit increases. If the majority decision is that the appeal does not merit a hearing, the decision of the chief judge(s) shall be final. For removals, demotions, denials of merit increases, or promotions, the panel shall conduct a hearing upon request. It will examine the documents submitted to the Executive Secretary and decide upon the admissibility of evidence and the order in which the parties concerned may present their cases. It is the panel's responsibility to determine the issues involved; weigh pertinent legislation, and procedures of the Committee on District Courts; administer oaths to witnesses; direct the examination of witnesses, evidence, and circumstances relating to the subject of the hearing; and come to a conclusion concerning the reasonableness of the actions taken in light of the preceding considerations. The panel may obtain any additional data which it considers necessary to an understanding or conclusion of the issue(s). A majority decision shall be final.

The panel has authority to take corrective actions if it finds in favor of the appellant. The panel may use its discretion in determining corrective action however, the extent of its authority is that it may place the aggrieved party in the position that individual would have been in had the decision being appealed been in the appellant's favor. The earliest date from which such corrective action may commence is the effective date of the decision being appealed.

The panel does not have the authority to change existing or establish new policies and procedures of the Committee on District Courts. However, if it wishes to recommend a policy change, the chairman of the panel shall notify the Executive Secretary, and he shall bring the recommendation to the attention of the Committee on District Courts. The Committee is not a body to which the panel's decision may be appealed, however, it may review the panel's jurisdiction. Individuals who question whether the panel has exceeded its authority may request the Committee on District Courts to consider the issue by filing such request with the Executive Secretary, and the panel's decision will not become effective until the Committee reaches its decision. The Committee will review the appeal and the panel's actions. If it finds that the panel has not exceeded its authority, the panel's decision will become effective in accordance with its instructions. If it decides that the panel exceeded its authority, the panel's decision will be voided. The appeal will be returned to the panel to reach a decision within the limits of its authority.

EVALUATION OF COURT REORGANIZATION AND PROJECTION OF FUTURE NEEDS

The Report of the Court System Study Commission to the Governor and the General Assembly of Virginia (The I'Anson Commission Report) in 1971 provided Virginia with a coherent and concise plan for the organization and administration of its courts. From the 1971 findings came a number of legislative proposals in 1973 (Chapters 544, 545, 546 and 547 Acts of Assembly 1973) which created a statewide District Court system under the administrative authority of the Chief Justice, established a statewide magistrate system to replace the former justices of the peace, and combined the courts of record into circuits with their judges as state officials. In order to further these efforts to improve the administration of justice in Virginia, constant evaluation and consideration of the court process is required.

During 1978 the Judicial Council of Virginia authorized a study by the National Center for State Courts aimed at continuing this evaluation and improvement process. The first portion of the project is devoted to a review of the recommendations contained in The I'Anson Commission Report. Each recommendation will be evaluated to determine to what degree it has been implemented by Virginia law and practice and the extent of the success or failure of any recommendation so implemented. The latter phase of this project will review Virginia's implementation of the American Bar Association Standards Relating to Court Organization and make recommendations as to actions necessary to implement further changes deemed desirable within such standards or within the original I'Anson Commission Report. In conducting both phases of this project the consultants will be provided policy guidance and expertise by an Ad Hoc Committee of The Judicial Council.

In-depth research will be conducted in those areas identified by the Ad Hoc Advisory Committee. The National Center will be reviewing appointment, supervision, and removal of all non-judicial personnel such as law clerks, judges' secretaries, court reporters and clerk's office personnel. Additionally, they will consider the need for an Intermediate Appellate Court, improvement of the magistrate system, utilization of substitute judges and the financing of the court system.

The final report, due in mid-1979, once adopted by the Judicial Council, should provide Virginia with a good analysis of the existing court system as well as a blueprint for future improvements to the system.

CLASS IV MISDEMEANORS

A long-standing suggestion by some individuals with significant court experience is that the courts devise a method which would permit individuals who have committed minor misdemeanors and who wish to plead guilty to such offenses to pay their fine without coming to court. Such a procedure has previously existed in many jurisdictions in Virginia by having the defendant post a cash deposit in lieu of bond with surety and being tried and convicted in his absence, after which the judge would apply the cash deposit to the fine and cost. Throught the use of local fine schedules (which were not consistent from jurisdiction to jurisdiction) set by the local judge, the cash deposit would equal the fine and cost generally imposed.

This system had numerous defects. First, it required the use of a bond, which resulted in a significant amount of bookkeeping. Second, it required the calling of the case on the docket, which took a significant amount of time in courts with large quantities of such cases. Third, it was not a uniform procedure from court to court, leading to a certain amount of public confusion as to the proper procedure to be followed. Despite these faults, proponents contended that an efficient procedure for disposing of minor misdemeanors in which the defendant recognized his guilt was highly desirable.

Based on the success experienced with the traffic infraction prepayment of fine and waiver of trial with guilty plea procedure, further study was conducted by the National Center for State Courts to see if this procedure could be applied to minor misdemeanors. The result of this further study resulted in the recommendation, introduction and enactment of legislation to extend the pre-trial guilty plea procedure to Class IV Misdemeanors. This procedure would apply to both state and local offenses punishable as Class IV Misdemeanors. The primary difference between the two systems being that a statewide prepayment schedule promulgated by the Supreme Court in a Rule of Court, would apply for state offenses whereas each judicial district could have its own prepayment schedule for local offenses.

This provision for a local fine schedule was made because many local criminal misdemeanors, unlike local traffic infractions, do not track the Code of Virginia or they are not found anywhere in the Code.

These prepayment provisions currently have more impact upon prepayment of local misdemeanors than state misdemeanors since only 22 state offenses are currently prepayable. Thus, many state misdemeanors which are almost universally handled on a forfeiture of cash deposit basis continue to be handled on this same basis.

EDUCATION

Continuing judicial education in the Commonwealth has its roots in Section 17-228 of the Virginia Code, 1950. This section established the Judicial Conference of Virginia to improve the administration of justice in the Commonwealth, and mandated a yearly meeting of the conference. In 1974, after the establishment of the district court system, the Committee on District Courts unanimously voted to support a program of continuing education for the personnel of this sytem. Funding for both in- and out-of-state training has been provided through a grant from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, and limited administrative leave is given to judiciary members to attend this training.

The Director of Educational Services works closely with the education committees of the circuit and district court judges and of the district court clerks and the magistrates to provide the continuing education program. The present program consists of two conferences a year for each of these groups. One conference each year for the circuit and district court judges is mandatory and beginning in the Fall of 1979, one district court clerks conference will be mandatory. An education conference was also held for the circuit court clerks, although they are elected officials and are not within our administrative jurisdiction. A program on Court and Records Management was presented by members of the Institute for Court Management and was well received. Plans are underway to have another such conference for this group in early summer of 1979.

The Director has received a great deal of help from the American Academy of Judicial Education in preparing in-state training courses for both circuit and district court judges, but the Supreme Court is assuming a greater role in these as our experience grows. In 1979, we plan to take over in-state training fully and look to the AAJE only for assistance in securing special out-of-state faculty for us.

Out-of-state training continued at a brisk rate in 1978. Seventy-five judges attended thirty different courses. Twelve clerks and magistrates also attended this training with the understanding that they will be future faculty members at their in-state educational conferences. The American Academy of Judicial Education called a meeting in Washington, D.C. of judicial education officers from nearby states to explore the feasibility of conducting some out-of-state training on a regional basis to reduce travel costs to Nevada and Florida where most such training now takes place. The concept was accepted in principle, and we are awaiting AAJE's follow-up proposals and cost estimates.

The videotaping equipment purchased in 1976 was put to full use throughout 1978. Videotapes were played at educational conferences, videotaping of mock trials for the new judges and of probable cause problems for new magistrates continued and were enthusiastically endorsed. A District Court Clerks Orientation Program was taped and is being sent to requestors. The videotape library consisted of 55 tapes of different subjects at the end of 1978. Throughout the year 150 tapes were sent to 20 judicial personnel as well as to 12 non-judicial personnel for community relations purposes. Included in the latter category were tapes provided to the Richmond public broadcasting TV station and high schools.

The orientation programs for new judges and new magistrates were continued in 1978. Separate programs were held in Richmond for the new circuit and district court judges on March 15-18, 1978 and March 29-April 1, 1978. Two sessions for new magistrates were held in Richmond on January 18-21 and August 16-19, 1978. The videotapes used in these orientations were also available to be sent to those judges and magistrates who could not attend the programs in Richmond.

In addition to these orientation programs, we also continued the visits to correctional centers for judges. Circuit court judges visited the State Penitentiary, James River Correctional Center, Virginia Correctional Center for Women, Mecklenburg Maximum Security Facility, and the Southampton Correctional Center on the 1st and 2nd of June. The juvenile and domestic relations judges' tour was split between central and western Virginia. One group visited the Natural Bridge and Appalachian Learning Centers and the Community Youth Home in Roanoke. The other went to the Reception and Diagnostic Center and the Bon Air and Beaumont Leaning Centers on June 8 and 9. All the participants felt these visits were well worthwhile. Plans are underway to conduct more such tours in 1979, and to include mental health facilities.

CRIMINAL FUND ACQUISITION

The criminal fund pre-audit and approval were transferred from the Comptroller's office to the Office of the Executive Secretary of the Supreme Court on July 1, 1978. The Office of the Executive Secretary then processes the vouchers which are sent to the Comptroller for payment.

To prepare for the changeover, a project team was organized within the Office of the Executive Secretary in March. The purpose of the team was to redesign the forms used in the criminal fund, prepare the courts for the changeover, and hire and train additional staff members to process the paperwork. Three thousand five hundred to four thousand vouchers are processed monthly in the criminal fund.

The benefits of the changeover are: improved accounting of the expenditures for the individual courts as well as control of the expenditures by the Judicial Branch rather than the Executive Branch of the government; turn around time for payment of vouchers has been shortened considerably since vouchers are not held up by terms of circuit court; all district courts now mail in their vouchers direct to the Office of the Executive Secretary and circuit courts may also send in their vouchers any time during a term; and payments should be received by the vendors within 15 days of receipt by the Office of the Executive Secretary.

COURT TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE VISITS

The Director of Technical Assistance traveled over six thousand miles and made fifty-two technical assistance visits during 1978. Nine visits were made for general monitoring and six visits were for special monitoring. Monitoring visits are made for the purpose of maintaining uniformity of clerk's office procedures in the district courts and offering assistance to improve office management. A special monitoring visit is made on request and a general monitoring visit is made unannounced. There were four visits made for special investigation purposes and three public relations visits. Thirty visitations were made for personnel surveys. These visits were made with the Director of Personnel, and the general operation of the court and clerk's office were observed. Suggestions for improvement of the operation were offered which sometimes would eliminate the need for additional personnel. Recommendations for the number of personnel needed and/or the need for reclassification were made according to the need. Ten visits were made by other personnel to assist clerks who were have specific accounting problems.

FIRST JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The city of Chesapeake is the only locality in the First Judicial District. The district is currently authorized two general district court judgeships filled by Judge Forbes and Judge Gibson. The district also has two juvenile and domestic relations judges, Judge Grissom and Judge Leftwich. The second judgeship was created by the 1977 Legislature and Judge Leftwich took office July 1, 1977. The judges used a total of 75 substitute days during the year.

The district's total population was estimated at 112,300 while the number of juveniles in Chesapeake was 37,900. The population per general district judge of 56,150 was slightly higher than the state average of 54,104. The juvenile population per judge of 18,950 was below the state value of 25,507.

The new general district caseload in 1978 of 31,664 represented a three percent change over the 30,773 new cases in 1977. Hearings continued to decline in 1978. The 41,062 hearings were three percent less than the number of hearings in 1977. The traffic infractions law was the primary reason for the decline. In 1978, traffic cases increased by slightly over ten percent but traffic hearings decreased by almost four percent from the previous year. There were 6.1% and 4.5% decreases in criminal cases and hearings. Civil cases were down 1.8% while hearings remained unchanged. The average number of cases per judge was 15,832 and the average hearings per judge equaled 20,531. This compared to the urban means of 19,486 cases and 23,692 hearings per judge respectively.

The caseload was divided among 18.3% criminal, 48.9% traffic, and 32.8% civil. The state caseload was 17.9% criminal, 56.6% traffic, and 25.5% civil. Thus Chesapeake had a criminal caseload similar to the state but had higher civil and correspondingly lower traffic. The 1977 caseload comparison was essentially the same.

Juvenile caseload in 1978 consisted of 2,806 juvenile and 1,597 adult cases. The total caseload of 4,403 was approximately six percent higher than the previous year. Hearings increased from 10,301 in 1977 to 10,919 in 1978. The number of new cases per judge was 2,202 and there were 5,460 hearings per judge. The urban values were 2,910 cases and 5,614 hearings per judge. Since the caseload was somewhat lower than most urban areas, Judge Leftwich was designated to sit in the Fifth District six days per month.

SECOND JUDICIAL DISTRICT

Virginia Beach is the only locality designated as the Second Judicial District. The district is authorized three general district and two juvenile and domestic relations judges. The three general district judges are Robert L. Simpson, Constantine A. Spanoulis, and John B. Preston. Judge Preston replaced P. B. White who retired January 31, 1979. The two juvenile judges are Fred P. Aucamp and J. Davis Reed. Judge Kenneth N. Whitehurst, Jr., was elected to the Circuit Court on February 1, 1979, and Judge Reed's appointment became effective March 1, 1979.

The population of Virginia Beach continued to grow rapidly. The population gained almost 15,000 from 1976 to 1977. The estimated population was 238,400 which equaled 79,467 per general district judge. The population per judge was considerably above the state average of 54,104. Virginia Beach ranked fourth among the thirty-two districts on this measure. The juvenile population of the city also increased to 82,300. The number of juveniles per judge was 41,150 which ranked fourth and was well above the state average of 25,507.

After a very steep rise in cases between 1976 and 1977, the caseload rose less sharply in 1978. The caseload increased by 11,825 new cases and 7,267 hearings from 1976 to 1977. In 1978, the number of new cases was 69,338 while hearings numbered 78,220. This represented increases of 2,190 new cases and a decline of 4,484 hearings. Criminal and civil cases gained by 831 and 1,705, respectively, while traffic cases were reduced by 346. The change in hearings was caused primarily by a decrease in traffic hearings of 6,804. Civil hearings climbed by 2,529. The ratio of hearings to new cases since 1976 reflects the effect of the traffic infraction law. In 1976 there were 1.18 hearings per case in traffic. This figure was 1.02 in 1977 and .86 in 1978.

The mix of new cases for the district (24.6% criminal, 55.8% traffic, and 19.6% civil) demonstrated a two percent shift in cases from traffic to civil over the previous year. The state caseload was made up of 17.9% criminal, 56.6% traffic, and 25.5% civil cases. Virginia Beach had 23,113 new cases and 26,073 hearings per judge. The urban averages were 19,486 and 23,692. The district ranked second in cases and fifth in hearings per judge. Virginia Beach had the second highest criminal, the fourth highest traffic, the ninth highest civil, and fourth highest total caseload when compared to all localities in the Commonwealth.

The judges of the juvenile and domestic relations court for Virginia Beach sat for 11,217 new cases and 18,047 hearings in 1978. The number of new cases was the second highest among all Virginia localities. Both cases and hearings increased by almost nine percent over 1977. The major increase (10.9%) occurred in adult cases. Juvenile cases increased 8.2%. The sharp rise in adult cases reversed the trend experienced in 1977 of lower numbers of adult cases. The averages per judge of 5,609 cases and 9,024 hearings ranked the district at the top of the state and were well above both the urban (3,215 cases and 6,370 hearings) and state (2,910 cases and 5,614 hearings) averages.

THIRD JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The city of Portsmouth is the only locality in the third district. The district is currently authorized two general district and two juvenile and domestic relations judges. Donald H. Sandie and Gordon F. Marsh were the general district judges. Judge Marsh retired January 31, 1979, and was replaced by Stanley L. Morris. In addition, a third judgeship was created by the 1979 legislature effective July 1, 1979. Archie Elliott, Jr., has been appointed to fill this position. Cecil W. Johnson and Von L. Piersall are the juvenile and domestic relations judges. During 1978, the four judges used a total of 72 substitute days, 41 in general and 31 in the juvenile.

Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the population of Portsmouth at 109,300. The population per general district judge of 54,650 closely approximated the state average per judge of 54,104. The city's juvenile population of 32,600 was 16,300 per judge. This was significantly below the state average of 25,507 and ranked the Third District twenty-ninth among the thirty-two districts in the Commonwealth.

The general district court had 37,512 new cases and 48,456 hearings during 1978 as compared with 35,763 new cases and 47,993 hearings in 1977. Portsmouth experienced a drop in caseload from 1976 to 1977 due to a significant decline in criminal cases. Criminal cases remained almost unchanged in 1978 with criminal hearings decreasing 3.6%. Traffic also experienced a negative change with cases down 3.2% and hearings down 3.6%. However, civil cases and hearings shot up drastically with 17.9% and 10.4% positive changes.

The new caseload of the Third District shifted more from criminal (22.4%) and traffic (38.5%) to civil (39.1%). The criminal caseload was slightly different from the state (17.9%), but the state's mix of 56.6% traffic and 25.5% civil differed significantly from Portsmouth. The average caseload per general district judge of 18,756 cases and 24,228 hearings was similar to the urban mean of 19,486 cases and 23,692 hearings per judge. Thus, Portsmouth ranked in the middle of the fourteen urban districts. In terms of caseload by category, Portsmouth was seventh in criminal cases, sixth in civil cases, and tenth in total cases among the Commonwealth's localities.

The two judges of the juvenile and domestic relations court had 2,675 new cases and 8,245 hearings in 1978. There were 964 less cases and 1,223 less hearings in 1978 than in the previous year. The 1,575 juvenile cases represented a decrease of 29.5% while adult cases (1,100) showed a decline of 21.8%. The caseload also experienced a drop from 1976 to 1977. The number of cases per judge of 1,338 was less than one half the state average (2,910). The 4,123 hearings per judge was one fourth less than the state average of 5,614.

FOURTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

Norfolk is the only locality in the Fourth Judicial District. The district is authorized four general district judgeships. The general district judges in 1978 were Vernon D. Hitchings, Jr., Joseph A. Jordan, Jr., Fred E. Martin, Jr., William L. Shapero. The fourth judgeship was created by the 1977 legislature and Judge Jordan was appointed to the bench July 1, 1977. There are three juvenile and domestic relations judges authorized. These positions were held in 1978 by Judges Edwin A. Henry, James G. Martin, IV, and Lester V. Moore, Jr. The four district judges used 103 substitute days while the three juvenile judges used a total of 117 substitute days.

The total population of Norfolk was estimated at 285,900 persons. The district's population per general district judge of 71,475 ranked fourth among the thirty-two districts. The Tayloe Murphy Institute gave the approximate juvenile population as 72,300 or 24,100 per judge which was slightly under the state juveniles per J&DR judge of 25,507.

Norfolk's general district court is divided into three divisions. The Criminal Division had 34,364 new cases and 49,939 hearings in 1978. These were 4.7% and 1.9%, respectively, less than the previous year. The Traffic Division reported 68,788 new cases, due to the traffic infraction law, only 58,958 hearings. Traffic cases were up 23% while hearings actually declined by 1.5%. The Civil Division recorded 39,548 new cases and 53,953 hearings. Both new cases (29.6%) and hearings (35.4%) showed large increases. The total number of cases for Norfolk was 142,700 with 162,850 hearings. The new cases increased by 16.5% from 1977 while hearings went up eight percent during that period. Norfolk ranked first among Virginia's localities for new criminal cases and second in traffic, civil, and total caseload.

The average cases and hearings per judge were 35,675 and 40,713, respectively. Norfolk was first in the state on both averages. The Criminal Division handled 24.1%, the Traffic Division 48.2%, and the Civil Division 27.7% of the total caseload. In 1977, the caseload consisted of 29.4% criminal, 45.7% traffic, and 24.9% civil. The 1978 state caseload was 17.9% criminal, 56.6% traffic, and 25.5% civil. As is typical of a large urban area, criminal caseload was much higher while traffic cases were equally lower.

The juvenile and domestic relations court had 7,488 juvenile cases and 14,826 juvenile hearings. Adult cases were 2,947 and adult hearings 6,102 for 10,435 total new cases and 20,928 hearings. Juvenile cases increased by almost four percent while adult cases remained stable. The total number of new cases moved upward by 2.25%. The new cases per judge of 3,478 and hearings per judge of 6,976 were more than the Commonwealth averages of 2,910 and 5,614, respectively. Norfolk ranked third in Virginia on the total number of juvenile and domestic relations cases.

FIFTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Fifth Judicial District consists of the counties of Isle of Wight and Southampton and the cities of Franklin and Suffolk. The district is authorized two general district and one juvenile and domestic relations judges. The district currently has one full-time general district judge, William W. Jones, and two part-time judges, Robert B. Edwards and T. B. Kingsburg, III. Judge Jones replaced Judge Bagnell, who was appointed to the Circuit Court bench in October 1977. Judge R. Baird Cabell is the only J&DR judge in the district. The general district judges were aided by 41 substitute judge days during 1978 while the juvenile side had 31 substitute days.

The population of the Fifth District was estimated at 92,400. The population per full-time equivalent judge (2.0) of 46,200 was somewhat below the state average of 54,104. The juvenile population of the area was placed at 31,000. The juvenile population per judge was above the state average of 25,507 and ranked sixth among the Commonwealth's thirty-two judicial districts.

The general district courts of the Fifth District experienced a three percent caseload growth for 1978 which was similar to the increase for the previous year. There were 34,741 new cases and 46,181 hearings in 1978 compared with 33,752 new cases and 45,407 hearings in 1977. The increase in cases was caused by a gain of 7.3% in traffic cases. Criminal cases decreased 7.3% while civil cases dropped by one percent. However, the reverse occurred with respect to hearings. Traffic hearings were reduced by 5.7% due to the traffic infraction law. At the same time, criminal hearings rose 17.6% and civil hearings five percent.

The new caseload was composed of 13.1% criminal, 61.1% traffic, and 25.8% civil cases. This was approximately the same as 1977 with only slight changes in each category. The percentages of total cases by category for the state were 17.9% criminal, 56.6% traffic, and 25.5% civil. Thus, the Fifth District had a higher ratio of traffic cases with an equally lower proportion of criminal cases. The caseload per full-time equivalent judge was 17,371 cases and 23,091 hearings. These averages were above the state means of 16,825 cases and 19,800 hearings per judge and significantly above the rural figures of 14,191 cases and 15,949 hearings per judge. The Fifth District ranked fourth on cases and second on hearings per judge among the eighteen rural districts.

The 1978 caseload for the juvenile and domestic relations courts of the Fifth District amounted to 3,443 cases with 7,262 hearings. Caseload rose dramatically over 1977. New cases shot ahead by 30.4% and hearings, though increasing less rapidly, experienced an 11.2% increase. This reversed the trend indicated in the previous year when both cases and hearings declined. The per judge figures of 3,443 cases and 7,262 hearings were well above the state average for rural districts in both categories (2,589 and 4,819, respectively). The district ranked third and second respectively on these two workload indicators.

SIXTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Sixth Judicial District is comprised of the counties of Brunswick, Greensville, Prince George, Surry, Sussex, and the cities of Emporia and Hopewell. All the clerk's offices in the district are combined, general with juvenile and domestic relations. The district is authorized two general and two juvenile and domestic relations judges. The district currently has one full-time general district court judge, James A. Luke, and one full-time juvenile and domestic relations judge, P. I. Leadbetter. The district is also served by two part-time judges, C. C. Connelly and C. A. Perkinson, both of whom serve in general district and J&DR courts. Judge Connelly sits three days per week in Prince George GD and J&DR. Judge Perkinson serves two days per week in Brunswick GD and J&DR and one day per week in Emproia GD only. Judge Luke, the general district judge, serves in Sussex, Surry, Hopewell, and Greensville. Judge Leadbetter, the juvenile and domestic relations judge, serves in Hopewell, Surry, Sussex, Greensville, and Emporia. The full-time equivalent judge value for general district is 1.8 judges and the value is 1.2 judges for juvenile and domestic relations. The four judges used a total of 69 substitute days.

The Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the 1977 population for the Sixth District at 95,200. The population per general district judge of 52,889 was close to the state's average of 54,104. The most recent estimate of the juvenile population was 29,100. The total population and the juvenile population per juvenile judge in the Sixth District (79,333 and 24,250, respectively) again were similar to the state averages.

The general district courts of the Sixth District reported a total of 38,751 new cases, 42,475 hearings, and 37,404 dispositions in 1978. These figures represented an increase of 976 new cases or 2.58% over 1977. The largest increase occurred in the civil caseload which rose 9.22% or 503 cases. Hearings declined in all categories to result in an overall decrease of 4,207 or 9.01% from 1977. Criminal and civil hearings dropped 5.73% and 3.86%, respectively. Although the traffic caseload for the Sixth District slightly increased, the number of traffic hearings fell 11.14% which may be attributed to the prepayment of violations under the traffic infraction law.

The composition of the 1978 caseload 11.98% criminal, 72.64% traffic, and 15.38% civil. These percentages varied considerably from the state's 17.90% criminal, 56.60% traffic, and 25.50% civil. The district's percentage of traffic cases was considerably higher than the state value and may be explained by the large sections of Interstate 95 and Route 460 contained within the district. Correspondingly, the district's percentages of criminal and civil cases were much less than the state values. The 1978 general district caseload per judge of 21,528 new cases and 23,597 hearings was significantly higher than both the rural and state averages, ranking the Sixth District highest in caseload and hearings per judge among the eighteen rural district.

The juvenile and domestic relations caseload for 1978 was 2,543 new cases and 6,297 hearings. The new caseload reflected a 10.13% increase, or 234 cases, over 1977 while hearings also rose by 13.15% or 732. This increase in overall caseload occurred despite a slight decline in adult cases and hearings of 3.15% and 3.83%, respectively. Thus growth in total caseload was the result of a significant increase in the juvenile category with new cases up by 20.59% and hearings by 25.34%. The new caseload per full-time equivalent judge was 2,119 new cases and 5,248 hearings. The caseload figure was somewhat lower than the rural average of 2,589 while the number of hearings was higher than the rural average of 4,819. Thus the Sixth District had a significantly higher number of hearings per case, 2.48%, than the rural mean of 1.86%.

SEVENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The city of Newport News is the only locality designated in the Seventh District. The Seventh District is authorized three general district and two juvenile and domestic relations judges. Currently, the district has three full-time general district judges, James H. Harvell, W. Robert Phelps, Jr., and Randolph T. West. In addition, the city is served by two juvenile and domestic relations judges, F. Thompson Wheeler, II, and Robert M. Yacobi. The district's five judges used a total of 163 substitute days during the year, with the general district judges averaging 34 each and the juvenile 30.5.

The most recent estimate of Newport News population was 144,400. The population per general district judge of 48,133 was significantly lower than the state's average of 54,104. Newport News had a juvenile population of 41,600 in 1976 averaging 20,800 per juvenile judge. The state average was 25,507.

The general district caseload in 1978 was 59,691 new cases and 90,099 hearings. The 1978 new caseload represented a significant increase of 18.90% over the 50,201 new cases reported in 1977. Increases occurred in all divisions, criminal cases rose by 18.66% and civil by 12.26%. An increase of 5,406, or 25.30% in traffic cases was primarily responsible for the sharp increase in the district's overall caseload. Newport News had the fifth largest caseload in the state, ranking sixth in criminal with 10,194 cases, eighth in traffic with 26,774 cases, and third in civil with 22,723 cases. Hearings, however, increased only slightly by 1.74% due to an 8.68% drop in the traffic category which offset significant increases in the number of criminal and civil hearings of 12.69% and 11.32%, respectively. The traffic infraction law therefore made possible only a modest increase in total hearings despite an almost twenty percent increase in the number of new cases.

The composition of the district's caseload was 17.08% criminal, 44.85% traffic, and 38.07% civil. The percentage of criminal cases was close to the state figure of 17.90%. However, the traffic and civil percentages varied significantly from the state's distribution and from that of other urban districts. The Seventh District's traffic cases were about twelve percentage points lower than the state's 56.60% and about ten points lower than the urban average of 54.03%. The district's civil percentage was correspondingly higher than the state's 25.50% and the urban 29.12%.

The average 1978 caseload per general district judge in the Seventh District was 19,897 new cases and 30,033 hearings. These figures were above both the urban and state averages, and the district ranked fourth among the urban districts in caseload per judge. In 1978, the number of hearings per case was 1.51 which was the highest in the state.

The 1978 juvenile and domestic relations caseload was 4,131 new cases, 11,057 hearings, and 3,955 dispositions. The 1978 number of new cases represented a slight gain of 1.23% over 1977. The number of juvenile cases actually decreased by 100 for a drop of 3.09% or 3,135. Adult cases increased in 1978 by a significant percentage of 17.73%, up 150 to 843 new adult cases. It was the increase in the adult caseload, therefore, which was responsible for the slight rise in overall caseload. Both juvenile and adult hearings increased in number over 1977, 6.73% and 11.85%, respectively. The result was a 7.47% increase in the total number of hearings.

The 1978 caseload distribution was 75.89% juvenile and 24.11% adult which was not significantly different from that of the state as a whole. The district caseload per juvenile judge for 1978 was 2,066 new cases and 5,529 hearings. These figures ranked the Seventh District in the middle of the eighteen urban districts, twelfth in new cases and ninth in hearings. The 2.68 hearings per case was higher than the urban mean of 1.98.

EIGHTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The city of Hampton is the single locality designated in the Eighth Judicial District. The district is authorized two general district court judges and two juvenile and domestic relations judges. Currently, the district has four full-time judges, two general district, Henry D. Kashouty, and Thomas H. Wilson, II, and two juvenile and domestic relations judges, Paul Crider, Jr., and Nelson T. Durden. The judges of the Eighth District used a total of 107 substitute days in 1978 with the two general district judges accounting for 75 days and the juvenile judges using the remaining 32 days.

Hampton's population was recently estimated at 127,300. The value of 63,650 persons per general district judge was significantly higher than the state average of 54,104. With a juvenile population of 40,900 and two J&DR judges, the district ranked twenty-fourth in the state which averaged 25,507 juveniles per judge.

The general district court reported 39,154 new cases, 57,356 hearings, and 39,686 dispositions in 1978. With 7,889 new criminal cases and 12,425 civil cases in 1978, the district ranked eighth highest in both criminal and civil categories and had the ninth highest general district caseload in the state. The 1978 new caseload represented a 10.21% rise over 1977 with the largest growth occurring in the traffic category. Traffic cases increased 2,882 or 18.06%. Smaller increases of 6.98% and 1.88% took place in the criminal and civil caseload, respectively. There was no significant change in the number of hearings, up 1.17% over 1977. Modest increases in criminal and civil hearings occurred to correspond with the increase in new cases: 5.75% criminal and 4.94% civil. The significant increase in the traffic caseload was not, however, accompanied by an increase in the number of traffic hearings. Hearings waived under the traffic infraction law numbered 9,029 and accounted for a 3.83% decrease in the number of traffic hearings. Thus increases in criminal and civil hearings were largely offset by the decline in traffic hearings resulting in only a 1.17% rise in total hearings for 1978.

The composition of the 1978 new caseload was 20.15% criminal, 48.12% traffic, and 31.73% civil. The Eighth District had a greater percentage of criminal cases than did the state (17.90%) or the average urban district (16.85%). The civil percentage was similar to 29.12% average of the urban districts, while Hampton handled a smaller percentage of traffic cases than did the state (56.60%) or urban districts as a group (54.03%). The caseload per general district court judge in the Eighth District of 19,577 new cases and 28,678 hearings compared to an urban mean of 19,486 and 23,692, respectively.

With a juvenile and domestic relations caseload of 4,915 new cases, 13,472 hearings, and 5,241 dispositions, Hampton had the state's eighth highest J&DR caseload in 1978. The 1978 figures represented a significant gain of 13.51% in new cases with the juvenile caseload rising 15.36% to 3,680; and adult cases increasing 8.33% to 1,235. In 1978, hearings per case equaled 2.74 which was considerably lower than the 1977 figure of 3.28. Consequently, the total number of hearings dropped 5.25% despite the increased caseload. Adult hearings fell significantly, 10.24%, or down 481; juvenile hearings declined only slightly, 2.78%. The 2.74 hearings per case was still higher than both the urban and state means of 1.98 and 1.93, respectively.

The distribution of the J&DR caseload for 1978 was 74.87% juvenile and 25.13% adult and was similar to the state percentages of 71.97% and 28.03%, respectively. The caseload per juvenile judge in 1978 was 2,458 new cases and 6,736 hearings, compared with an urban mean of 3,215 new cases and 6,370 hearings.

NINTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Ninth Judicial District is comprised of the counties of Charles City, Gloucester, James City, King and Queen, King William, Mathews, Middlesex, New Kent and the cities of Williamsburg and Poquoson. The district covers an area of 1,871 square miles east of Richmond and is bounded by the James River in the south and the Rappahannock to the north. The district is authorized two general and two juvenile and domestic relations judgeships. Currently, the district is served by two full-time general district judges, Joseph R. Zepkin and William T. Bareford. Judge Zepkin sits in the counties of Charles City, York and James City/Williamsburg. The counties of Gloucester, King and Queen, King William, Mathews, Middlesex, and New Kent are handled by Judge Bareford. The juvenile and domestic relations judges are Herbert I.L. Feild and John G. Sowder, both full-time. Judge Feild holds court in Gloucester, Mathews, Middlesex, and York while Judge Sowder sits in Charles City, King and Queen, King William, New Kent, and Williamsburg/James City. The four judges of the district used a total of 100 substitute days in 1978 with the two general district judges averaging 23.5 each and two juvenile judges 26.5.

The Tayloe Murphy Institute in Charlottesville estimated the district's total population at 136,400 and the juvenile population at 40,200. The population per general district judge was 68,200, ranking the district sixth highest in that comparison. The juvenile population per judge of 20,100, however, was significantly lower than the state average of 25,507 juveniles per judge.

The 1978 general district caseload for the Ninth District was 33,541 new cases, 34,885 hearings, and 32,676 dispositions. The number of criminal cases declined by 6.49% to 6,338 while the number of traffic cases remained about constant, 21,158 compared with 21,017 in 1977. The civil caseload, on the other hand, rose significantly by 12.13% to 6,045 in 1978. The additional 654 new civil cases offset the decline in the criminal category to result in a slight 1.07% increase in total new caseload. By comparison, the hearings dropped considerably, numbering 6,691 less than in 1977. The 16.09% decrease may be primarily attributed to the fact that 7,392 traffic hearings were waived resulting in a 23.13% decline over 1977. Corresponding to the fall in the number of criminal cases commenced, criminal hearings also totaled 11.90% less than in 1977. Only civil hearings increased, a modest 4.33%, to accompany the increase in new civil cases.

The composition of the 1978 general district caseload for the Ninth District was 18.90% criminal, 63.08% traffic, and 18.02% civil. Although increasing in number and in percentage of the district's overall caseload, the civil figure remained markedly lower than the state's percentage of 25.50% and somewhat lower than the rural 20.58%. The percentage of traffic cases was considerably higher than the state's 56.60% although closer to the rural 60.09%. The criminal percentages varied only slightly. The caseload per general district judge of 16,771 new cases and 17,443 hearings was significantly higher than the rural mean values of 14,191 and 15,949, ranking the district fifth among the eighteen rural districts in new cases per judge.

The juvenile and domestic relations caseload for 1978 was 3,722 new cases, 8,719 hearings, and 3,935 dispositions. Virtually no change occurred in the adult category with new cases falling slightly, 2.59%, and the number of adult hearings identical to the 3,029 hearings of the previous year. The number of juvenile cases increased considerably by 25.11% or 536 new cases with hearings also rising significantly by 11.20%. The sharp gain in the juvenile caseload was responsible for an overall increase in total caseload over 1977 of 15.81% new cases and 7.03% hearings.

The composition of the J&DR caseload of 71.76% juvenile and 28.24% adult was essentially the same as the state percentages. The new caseload per juvenile judge of 1,861 new cases and 4,360 hearings was significantly less than the rural mean of 2,589 new cases and 4,819 hearings. The number of juvenile hearings per case for the Ninth District of 2.34 was significantly higher than both the rural and state means of 1.86 and 1.93, respectively.

TENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Tenth Judicial District is composed of the counties of Appomattox, Buckingham, Charlotte, Cumberland, Halifax, Lunenburg, Mecklenburg, and Prince Edward. The district is authorized three general district and two juvenile and domestic relations judgeships. Judge McCormick and Judge Williams are both full-time and handle the district's J&DR caseload. Judge McCormick sits in Halifax, Lunenburg, and Mecklenburg while Judge Williams sits in the remaining counties. For the first half of 1978, the district was served by five part-time general district judges: Hay, Spencer, C. F. P. Crawley, R. Page Morton, and W. T. Waller. Judge Morton retired effective July 1, and Judge Hay was appointed to a full-time judgeship effective the same date. The death of Judge Waller in July resulted in a vacancy which was filled in September by Robert T. Vaughan. Judge Crawley, who was reappointed July 1 for a two year term, retired December 31, 1978. The 1979 Legislature confirmed the appointments of Judges Hay, Spencer, and Vaughan, electing them to full six year terms beginning February 1, 1979. Thus in the first six months of 1978, the district was served by five part-time judges equivalent to 2.8 full-time judges. At the close of the year, the Tenth was served by its full authorization of three full-time judges.

The Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the district's total population at 137,800 and the juvenile population at 42,500. The population per F.T.E. general district judge in the Tenth District of 45,933 was below the state average of 54,104. The juvenile population per F.T.E. juvenile judge of 21,250 was also less than the state's 25,507. The Tenth District, however, is the largest in terms of area—3,976 square miles.

In 1978, the district's total caseload was 44,892 new cases, 44,480 hearings, and 41,017 dispositions. The number of new cases remained unchanged, decreasing by less than one percent in 1978 while hearings dropped by 4.88%. The criminal caseload experienced a seven percent increase in both new cases and hearings. The reduction in total hearings was primarily the result of a 9.84% decline in the traffic category brought about by the prepayment of minor violations. The number of new traffic cases and the civil caseload remained constant.

Despite a growing criminal caseload, the district's 14.54% criminal distribution was less than the overall rural figure of 19.33%. The traffic and civil percentages of 63.71 and 21.75, respectively, were somewhat higher than the rural values. The caseload per general district judge in the Tenth (based on 3.0 F.T.E.) was 14,964 new cases and 14,827 hearings. The new caseload per judge was more than the 1978 rural average of 14,191. The hearings figure, however, was significantly less due to a hearings per case ratio of .99 made possible by the waiving of 9,977 hearings in 1978.

The juvenile and domestic relations courts reported 4,390 new cases, 7,684 hearings, and 4,219 dispositions. These values represented a decline of 3.81% in new cases accompanied by a 3.46% increase in hearings. In 1977, the juvenile judges of the Tenth averaged 1.63 hearings per case. This ratio increased to 1.75 in 1978, resulting in an increased number of hearings despite the decrease in new cases. The district's caseload included a smaller percentage (65.13) of juvenile cases than the state's (71.97) and a correspondingly higher percentage of adult cases, 34.87 compared with 28.03. The caseload per juvenile judge in the Tenth of 2,195 new cases and 3,842 hearings was somewhat less than the rural mean of 2,589 cases and 4,819 hearings.

ELEVENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Eleventh Judicial District is comprised of the counties of Amelia, Dinwiddie, Nottoway, Powhatan and the city of Petersburg. The district covers an area of 1,460 square miles in the central part of the state. The Eleventh is authorized two full-time general and two juvenile and domestic relations judgeships. Currently, James F. D'Alton and William I. Moncure serve as full-time general district judges. Judge D'Alton sits Monday through Friday in the city of Petersburg while the counties are handled by Judge Moncure. The J&DR judges are Ben L. Campbell and L. L. Mason, Jr., both full-time. Judge Campbell holds court in Dinwiddie and Petersburg while Judge Mason sits in Amelia, Nottoway, and Powhatan. The judges of the Eleventh used a total of 73 substitute days in 1978 with the general district judges averaging 20 days each and the juvenile judges 16.5.

The district's population was estimated at 99,800 in 1977. This equaled 49,900 persons per general district judge which was less than the state's average of 54,104. The juvenile population per J&DR judge of 15,100 was substantially lower than the state's 25,507, ranking the Eleventh next to last among the thirty-two districts in this comparison.

The 1978 general district caseload included 34,867 new cases, 45,215 hearings, and 34,481 dispositions. Little change occurred in the criminal caseload with the number of cases continuing to fall in 1978 (2.37%) and hearings up by 1.24%. Seventeen percent increases in both traffic and civil new cases resulted in 3,978 more new cases in 1978 for a 12.88% rise. A corresponding 18.89% increase in civil hearings was offset by a 13.24% drop in the traffic category with the result that total hearings remained constant: 45,215 compared with 45,143 in 1977.

The 1978 caseload composition for the Eleventh District was 20.76% criminal, 53.49% traffic, and 25.75% civil. In comparison to the overall rural percentages of 19.33% criminal, 60.09% traffic, and 20.58% civil, the district had somewhat higher percentages of criminal and civil cases and a correspondingly lower percentage of traffic cases. The general district caseload per judge of 17,434 new cases and 22,608 hearings was higher than both the rural and state means, ranking the Eleventh third highest of the thirty-two districts in this comparison.

The juvenile and domestic relations courts also experienced a rising caseload in 1978, reporting 4,126 new cases, 7,256 hearings, and 3,590 dispositions. The percentage increase in new J&DR cases of 11.66% was similar to the 12% increase which occurred in the general district courts. Both juvenile and adult cases increased, 14.01% and 7.33%, respectively. Adult hearings in 1978 underwent little change, 2,713 compared with 1977's 2,726 hearings. A gain in juvenile hearings did accompany the increase in new cases but was not as marked (5.53%), resulting in a 3.20% overall increase in total hearings.

Despite a significantly increasing juvenile caseload and a slower rising adult caseload, the percentage of juvenile new cases, 66.29%, was lower in a statewide comparison where 71.97% of the 1978 cases were juvenile and 28.03% adult. The caseload per judge in the J&DR courts for 1978 was 2,063 new cases and 3,628 hearings which was somewhat less than the rural judge average of 2,589 cases and 4,819 hearings.

TWELFTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Twelfth Judicial District is composed of Chesterfield County and the city of Colonial Heights. The district is authorized two general district and one juvenile and and domestic relations judgeships. Currently, the district is served by three part-time general district judges and one full-time J&DR judge. Judge Daffron and Judge Shelton sit in Chesterfield County and Judge Snead sits two days per week in Colonial Heights. The three part-time judges were equivalent to 2.2 full-time judges. Both juvenile and domestic relations courts are served by Judge Thomas. The 1979 Legislature authorized a second judgeship for the J&DR courts effective July 1, 1979. Marvin L. Garner was elected to fill the new position. In 1978, the three part-time general district judges used a total of 114 substitute days and Judge Thomas used substitutes on 25 days.

The combined population of Chesterfield and Colonial Heights was estimated at 133,200 in 1977, representing a 6.7% increase over the previous year. The population per general district judge value of 60,545 ranked the Twelfth as ninth highest in the state. The projected juvenile population also increased sharply 5.2%, reaching 44,600. With one J&DR judge, the Twelfth ranked third among the thirty-two districts in juvenile population per judge.

During 1978, the general district courts reported 32,747 new cases, 39,224 hearings, and 32,223 dispositions. The number of new cases filed were 2,471 more than in 1977. This 8.16% growth was primarily the result of 2,214 more traffic cases reported in 1978. Criminal new cases increased by 6.03% while the civil new caseload rose by less than one percent. Again a decrease in the traffic category of 1,179 hearings was the major factor in the lowering number of total hearings (1.73%). This 5.31% decline in traffic hearings more than offset modest increases in criminal (4.40%) and civil (1.48%) hearings.

The composition of the general district caseload in terms of new cases was 10.79% criminal, 70.46% traffic, and 18.75% civil. This distribution of cases varied considerably from that of the state and other urban districts. The Twelfth handled a far greater percentage of traffic cases than the 54.03% urban figure. Chesterfield, with 23,075 new traffic cases in 1978, had the ninth highest traffic caseload in the state. Correspondingly, the district had a significantly lower percentage of criminal and civil cases than did the state or urban districts as a group. The 1978 caseload per judge of 14,885 new cases and 17,829 hearings was much lower than the urban mean of 19,486 new cases and 23,692 hearings. Due to the high percentage of traffic cases, the number of hearings per case of 1.20 was less than the urban average of 1.98.

The juvenile and domestic relations courts of the Twelfth reported 4,174 new cases, 9,233 hearings, and 3,295 dispositions. An 11.31% increase in adult new cases was offset by a 3.87% drop in the juvenile caseload. The result was the total number of cases remained stable, increasing by only 12. The volume of total hearings was affected similarly. A 4.27% decline in juvenile hearings combined with a 5.70% increase in adult hearings to result in a hearings total 1.27% less than in 1977.

The composition of the district's J&DR caseload was 69.57% juvenile and 30.43% adult which was similar to the state's 71.97% juvenile and 28.03% adult. With a caseload per judge of 4,174 new cases and 9,233 hearings, the Twelfth ranked third in new cases and first in hearings among the fourteen urban districts. The addition of a second juvenile judge in 1979 should alleviate the relatively heavy caseload now handled by Judge Thomas.

THIRTEENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The city of Richmond is the only locality designated in the Thirteenth Judicial District. The general district caseload is handled by four divisions: Criminal, Traffic, Civil, and Manchester. There is only one juvenile and domestic relations court. Currently, Richmond is authorized seven general district court judgeships. The Criminal Division is served by Judge Duling and Judge Davila. Judges Williams and Schrieberg sit in the Traffic Division while the Civil Division is handled by Judge Belcher and Judge Roberts. Judge Nance serves in the Manchester Division and hears all types of cases. The juvenile and domestic relations court has three judgeships authorized and these are filled by Judges Douglas, Laster, and Ruby. During most of 1977, the J&DR courts had four judges; however, the 1978 Legislature reduced the number of authorized judgeships to three.

The population of Richmond has declined since 1970 and was estimated at 224,200 in 1977. The population per general district court judge of 32,029 was considerably below the state average of 54,104, ranking the Thirteenth last in this comparison. With a juvenile population of 54,200, the per J&DR judge value equaled 18,067 which was well below the state average of 25,507.

The general district caseload in 1978 was 160,956 new cases, 187,662 hearings, and 147,956 dispositions. Despite a decreasing population, Richmond's caseload increased significantly over the 1977 level by 17,433 new cases (12.15%) and 7,992 hearings (4.45%). Although the criminal and traffic caseloads changed very little, Richmond ranked third highest of all Virginia localities in volume of both case types. In 1976, new criminal cases dropped less than two percent with traffic cases increasing by only 2.42%. Both criminal and traffic hearings declined approximately five percent. Due to Richmond's unique position as a regional business center and the revision of Title VIII allowing change in venue, the number of new civil cases increased by 16,309 or 24.19% with civil hearings up by 13,864 or 18.67%. Consequently, Richmond ranked highest of all Virginia localities in volume of new civil cases in 1978. The sharp rise in civil cases was responsible for the gain in overall caseload with Richmond having the highest volume of cases of any locality in the state.

The composition of the district's 1978 caseload was 10.36% criminal, 37.62% traffic, 52.02% civil. Given the 1978 volume of civil cases, this distribution varied significantly from the state percentages of 16.85% criminal, 54.03% traffic, and 29.12% civil. The caseload per general district judge of 22,994 new cases and 26,809 hearings was higher than the urban mean of 19,486 new cases and 23,692 hearings, ranking the district third in caseload per judge among the fourteen urban districts.

Richmond's juvenile and domestic relations court reported 9,522 new cases, 19,464 hearings, and 8,614 dispositions. These figures represented a sharp increase of 34.07%, or 2,420 more new cases than in 1977. Hearings also rose by 9.21%. Both the juvenile and adult caseloads increased by approximately one-third to 5,683 and 3,839 new cases, respectively. Adult hearings rose by a modest 3.17%; thus the increase in total hearings was primarily the result of a 13.13% rise in juvenile hearings. The volume of J&DR cases for 1978 ranked Richmond fourth highest in that category among Virginia localities.

The composition of the J&DR new caseload in 1978 was 59.68% juvenile and 40.32% adult, compared with the state percentages of 71.97% juvenile and 28.03% adult. Of the 7,234 adult hearings, an unusually high percentage were criminal, 61.63% compared with the state's 49.52%. The caseload per juvenile judge in 1978 was 3,174 new cases and 6,488 hearings which was close to the urban mean of 3,215 cases and 6,370 hearings.

FOURTEENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

Henrico County is the only locality designated in the Fourteenth District. The district is currently authorized three full-time general district judges: Donald R. Howren, Joseph F. Spinella, and H. Ratcliffe Turner. The juvenile and domestic relations court is authorized two judgeships and currently is being served by Augustus S. Hydrick and J. Mercer White, Jr. Judges Turner and Hydrick are the chief judges. The five judges used a total of 134 substitute days during 1978.

The population of Henrico County was estimated by the Tayloe Murphy Institute at 174,700 in 1977. The population per fulltime equivalent general district judge of 58,233 was higher than the state average of 54,104. The district's ratio ranked eleventh among the state's thirty-two districts, highest ranked first. The juvenile population of Henrico, estimated at 50,800, averaged 25,400 per judge and was consistent with the state average of 25,507.

Henrico General District Court reported a total of 48,000 new cases, 58,691 hearings, and 46,200 dispositions during 1978. The number of new cases increased by 398 which was less than one percent. The increases in civil new cases (2,071, up 16.70%) and criminal (244, up 5.30%) were offset by a drop in the new traffic caseload of 1,917 cases for a 6.27% decrease. The total number of hearings declined by 2,567 hearings; however, it should be noted that the overall decrease in hearings was caused by a 7,725 reduction in traffic hearings. The number of criminal and civil hearings both increased by 1,288 and 3,871 hearings, respectively.

Henrico caseload for 1978 was 10.1% criminal, 59.74% traffic, and 30.16% civil. The criminal caseload percentage was considerably less than the state's percentage of 17.90%, while Henrico's civil percentage was significantly higher than the state's value of 25.50%. The traffic percentage in the district was above the state's percentage of 56.60%.

Henrico continued to have the sixth largest new caseload (48,000) among all Virginia localities. Newport News was fifth with 59,691 cases while Roanoke City with 44,098 cases was seventh. Henrico's traffic and civil caseloads ranked seventh among all localities with 28,675 and 14,475 respectively. The Fourteenth's caseload per general district judge of 16,000 new cases and 19,564 hearings was less than the urban district's average of 19,486 new cases and 23,692 hearings. The state averages were 16,825 new cases and 19,800 hearings.

In 1978, the juvenile and domestic relations judges in Henrico heard a total of 5,574 new cases and held 10,419 hearings. The number of hearings per case of 1.87 was consistent with the state value of 1.93. The 1978 caseload increased by 1,137 new cases, up 25.63%, and by 1,070 hearings, or 11.45%. The juvenile and adult caseloads both recorded gains in the number of new cases and hearings. Henrico juvenile hearings consisted of 44.55% criminal, 4.2% status, 32.84% traffic, and 18.42% custody. These percentages were comparable to the state's percentages of 47.44% criminal, 7.02% status, 26.87% traffic, and 18.66% custody. The adult caseload of the district was 42.84% criminal and 57.16% non-support. The caseload per judge in Henrico was 2,787 new cases and 5,210 hearings per judge. The urban district average was 3,215 new cases and 6,370 hearings per judge.

FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Fifteenth Judicial District is composed of ten counties: Caroline, Essex, Hanover, King George, Lancaster, Northumberland, Richmond, Spotsylvania, Stafford, Westmoreland, and the city of Fredericksburg. The district is currently authorized four general district court judges and two juvenile and domestic relations judges. The general district courts were served during the first half of 1978 by three full-time judges: Andrew G. Conlyn, Horace A. Revercomb, Jr., and J. L. Savage, Jr. The district was also served by two part-time judges, J. L. Landram and J. P. Farmer. Judge Landram retired June 30, 1978, and was replaced by Robert R. Gwathmey. Judge Gwathmey was elected by the 1979 Legislature to a six year beginning February 1, 1979. Judge Conlyn was the chief general district judge and sat in the five counties of the Northern Neck: Essex, Lancaster, Northumberland, Richmond, and Westmoreland. Judge Revercomb sat in King George and Stafford. Spotsylvania and Fredericksburg were served by Judge Savage. Judge Farmer sat two days per week in Carolina County. Judge Landram sat primarily in Hanover as does his replacement, Judge Gwathmey. Judge Gwathmey also assisted Judge Revercomb in King George. The general district judges used a total of 197 substitute days in 1978.

William J. Cox and C. Vincent Hardwick were the two juvenile judges and both served full-time. Judge Hardwick sat in Essex, Hanover, King George, Lancaster, Northumberland, Richmond, and Westmoreland. Judge Cox held court in Caroline, Spotsylvania, Stafford and the city of Fredericksburg. The juvenile judges used a total of 56 substitute days in 1978.

The population of the district experienced a sharp increase in both its northern and southern regions. The growth in the northern part was centered in Spotsylvania and Stafford resulting from their proximity to the Washington, D.C. area. Hanover County in the southern part of the district grew because of its location in relation to Richmond. The total population of the district in 1977, as estimated by the Tayloe Murphy Institute, was 205,800. The district's population in 1960 was 135,318 and reached 158,351 in 1970. It is projected to reach 216,400 by 1980. The population per full-time equivalent judge of 46,773 was below the state average of 54,104, ranking the Fifteenth twenty-fourth out of the thirty-two districts, highest ranked first. The juvenile population of the district was estimated at 63,600 or 31,800 per J&DR judge, ranking the district fifth out of the thirty-two districts. The state mean juvenile population per juvenile and domestic relations judge was 25,507.

During 1978, the general district caseload in the Fifteenth reached 65,519 new cases, 67,424 hearings, and 63,826 dispositions. The new caseload reflected a 9.44% increase, or 5,649 additional new cases over 1977. The added number of cases was a result of gains in all three categories. The total number of hearings (67,424) showed a decline of 3,232 hearings from the 1977 level. The largest gain in new cases occurred in traffic which increased 2,684 cases or 6.67%. Traffic hearings, however, decreased by 7,859 as a consequence of drivers waiving their hearings under the traffic infraction law. The civil caseload recorded the largest percentage gain in new cases—27.89% (2,671 cases)—with a corresponding 24.40% in hearings (2,810). The criminal caseload rose by 2.92% (294 cases) and gained 11.87% in hearings (1,817).

The distribution of new cases in the Fifteenth District was 15.82% criminal, 65.49% traffic, and 18.70% civil. These percentages were somewhat different from the state's composition of a lower traffic percentage, 56.60%, and higher criminal and civil percentages of 17.90% and 25.50%, respectively. The district hearing percentages of 25.40% criminal, 53.36% traffic, and 21.25% civil were more consistent with the state's hearing percentages of 26.05% criminal, 46.12% traffic, and 27.83% civil.

The largest changes in new caseload in the localities occurred in Stafford

County and Fredericksburg City. Stafford's gain of 2,908 cases resulted from growth in the traffic category, up 1,894 cases. Fredericksburg's increase in civil new cases of 1,631 was largely responsible for the overall of 2,098 cases.

The caseload per full-time equivalent general district judge of 14,891 new cases and 15,324 hearings ranked the district ninth of the eighteen rural districts. The rural district average was 14,191 new cases and 15,949 hearings.

During 1978, the two juvenile and domestic relations judges, Judge Hardwick and Judge Cox, handled 6,558 new cases and 10,654 hearings. The gain in new cases of 758, or 13.07%, and 1,047 hearings, or 10.90%, was principally a result of growth in Caroline, Spotsylvania, and Stafford J&DR courts. The composition of new cases, 73.51% juvenile and 26.48% adult, was consistent with the state's percentages.

The juvenile hearings in the district were 40.47% criminal, 11.95% status, 30.13% traffic, and 25.14% custody. This distribution contained higher percentages of traffic, custody, and status than the state percentages of 26.87% traffic, 18.66% custody, and 7.02% status. The state's percentage of criminal hearings, 47.44%, exceeded the district's percentage. The district's adult hearings were equally split between criminal and custody and therefore similar to the state breakdown of hearings. The 1978 caseload per juvenile judge for the Fifteenth was 3,279 new cases and 5,327 hearings and ranked the district fourth in new cases and eighth in hearings out of the eighteen rural districts. The state average for the rural districts was 2,589 new cases and 4,819 hearings per judge.

SIXTEENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Sixteenth Judicial District is composed of eight counties: Albemarle, Culpeper, Fluvanna, Goochland, Greene, Louisa, Madison, Orange, and the city of Charlottesville. The district is currently authorized four general district and two juvenile and domestic relations judgeships. During 1978, the general district courts were served by three full-time judges: Basil C. Burke, Jr., Fletcher W. Harkrader, and D. B. Marshall, and two part-time judges: Brian J. Donato and Joel F. Jenkins. Judge Donato, although considered part-time, sat five days per week in Albemarle County and was equivalent to a full-time judge. Judge Jenkins sat three days per week in Goochland County, handling both general district and juvenile and domestic relations cases. The remaining J&DR courts of the Sixteenth were served by two full-time judges, William D. Reams, Jr., and Ralph P. Zehler. Judge Burke sat in the counties of Culpeper, Madison, and Greene while Judge Harkrader held court in Louisa and Orange. Charlottesville and Fluvanna were served by Judge Marshall. Judge Zehler sat in the juvenile and domestic relations courts in Charlottesville, Albemarle, and Fluvanna. The J&DR courts in the five counties of Culpeper, Greene, Louisa, Madison, and Orange were handled by Judge Reams. Effective July 1, 1979, Judge Harkrader will transfer to the circuit court to replace Harold H. Purcell who is retiring.

The most recent population estimate of the district by the Tayloe Murphy Institute was 184,100. The population based on 4.5 full-time general district court judges of 40,911 was below the state average of 54,104; however, the district contains nine localities and covers an area of 3,075 square miles making it one of the state's largest. The total population per full-time juvenile and domestic relations judge of 87,667 was above the juvenile judge average of 84,868. The juvenile population in the district of 52,900, based on 2.1 F.T.E. judges, was similar to the state average of 25,507 per judge.

The general district caseload in 1978 was 55,097 new cases, 62,253 hearings, and 53,890 dispositions. The new caseload increased 1,783 cases over the 1977 level. The percent increase of 3.34% was very similar to the gain from 1976 to 1977 of 3.52%, or 1,813 cases. The number of hearings declined by less than one percent from the number of hearings in 1977. The reduction may be attributed to 9,635 hearings waived under the traffic infraction law.

The Sixteenth's criminal caseload increased by 930 cases (7.8%) while the number of hearings rose by 1,826 (9.59%). These increases paralleled the criminal increase between 1976 and 1977 when the caseload rose by 951 new cases and 2,570 hearings. The number of traffic cases in 1978 also increased by 456; however, the number of hearings declined 2,469 due to the waiving of hearings. The district's civil caseload rose by 397 new cases and 1,228 hearings for 3.59% and 9.87% increases respectively. The change in venue statute contributed to 699 more civil cases and 1,241 more hearings in Charlottesville.

The district's distribution of new cases was 23.33% criminal, 55.88% traffic, and 20.79% civil, containing a higher percentage of criminal cases than the state's percentage of 17.90% and a lower percentage of civil cases than the state level of 25.50%. The traffic percentages were very similar. The general district caseload per F.T.E. judge of 12,244 new cases and 13,834 hearings was somewhat below the average for rural districts of 14,191 new cases and 15,949 hearings.

The juvenile and domestic relations caseload for the Sixteenth was 5,184 new cases, 9,533 hearings, and 5,402 dispositions. The number of new cases rose 143 or 2.84% over the 1977 caseload. The number of hearings increased by 1,058 for a 12.48% gain. The growth in new cases occurred in the juvenile caseload while the number of new adult cases remained stable The number of hearings rose significantly in both categories, juvenile up by 11.22% and adult up by 14.92%.

The distribution of 75.27% juvenile new cases and 24.73% adult contained a higher percentage of juvenile cases than the state's 71.97%. The district's adult percentage was correspondingly less than the state value of 28.03%. The juvenile hearings in the district consisted of 47.70% criminal, 28.06% traffic, 5.02% status, and 19.10% custody. These percentages were consistent with those of the state. The adult hearings also were similar to the state percentages and were split evenly between criminal and non-support. The caseload per F.T.E. judge of 2,469 new cases and 4,540 hearings was fairly consistent with the rural district average of 2,589 new cases and 4,819 hearings per judge.

SEVENTEENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

Arlington County in northern Virginia is the only locality designated in the Seventeenth Judicial District. The district is currently authorized three general district and two juvenile and domestic relations judgeships. Arlington is served by three full-time general district judges: Richard W. Corman, Joseph C. Gwaltney, and Thomas R. Monroe. The two juvenile and domestic relations judges are Andrew B. Ferrari and Berton V. Kramer. Judge Corman and Judge Ferrari serve as the district's chief judges. During 1978, the three general district judges used a total of 77 substitute days. The two juvenile and domestic relations judges used 52 substitute days during this same period.

The most recent estimate by the Tayloe Murphy Institute of Arlington County's population was 154,800. In 1970, the county's population was 174,284. The 1977 population per general district judge of 51,600 was slightly lower than the state average of 54,104, ranking the district eighteenth of the thirty-two districts in this category. The total population per juvenile and domestic judge of 77,400 was also less than the state average of 84,868 and ranked the district nineteenth of the thirty-two districts. The juvenile population of Arlington of 26,600 averaged 13,300 per J&DR judge while the state averaged 25,507 per judge.

The geneal district courts of the Seventeenth reported a total of 41,731 new cases, 52,117 hearings, and 39,535 dispositions. The new caseload exceeded 1977's by 10,531 new cases. The number of hearings also experienced an increase of 2,599. The overall ratio of hearings to new cases of 1.25 was consistent with that of other urban districts which averaged 1.22. The largest change in new cases occurred in traffic which increased by 9,984 to 32,939 new cases. Arlington had the fifth largest traffic caseload of all Virginia localities. The traffic infraction law aided Arlington in maintaining the level of hearings despite the rise in caseload; 12,961 traffic hearings were waived by the public. The volume of criminal cases increased by 321 (8.56%) with 984 more hearings (up 9.24%). The civil caseload also showed gains in both new cases, 226, and hearings, up 738, for 5.03% and 7.47% increases respectively. The district's caseload per judge of 13,910 new cases and 17,372 hearings compared with the urban district average of 19,486 new cases and 23,692 hearings per judge. The state average was 16,825 new cases and 19,800 hearings.

The composition of the 1978 general district caseload was 9.76% criminal, 78.93% traffic, and 11.31% civil. Consistent with Arlington's high volume of traffic cases, the percentage of traffic cases was considerably higher than the state's 56.60%. Correspondingly, the district's criminal and civil percentages were lower than the state's 17.90% and 25.50' respectively.

Arlington's Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court reported a caseload increase of 402 new cases and 1,443 hearings. These gains of 15.27% and 15.88% set the 1978 caseload at 3,035 new cases; 10,564 hearings; and 2,651 dispositions. The ratio of hearings to new cases of 3.48 was considerably higher than the urban district figure of 1.98 or the state value of 1.93. Although both juvenile and adult caseloads increased, the rise in juvenile cases and hearings was more significant. Juvenile cases in 1978 numbered 2,423, 373 more than in 1977, reflecting an 18.20% increase. The number of juvenile hearings was up 17.66% over the previous year, reaching 8,083. The number of juvenile cases accounted for 79.84% of the total new cases while the adult caseload contributed the remaining 20.16%. These values represented a higher proportion of juvenile cases than the state's 71.97% and a correspondingly lower proportion of adult cases. Arlington's juvenile hearings were distributed as follows: 51.82% criminal, 18.06% traffic, 11.51% status, and 18.61% custody. The state percentages were 47.44% criminal, 26.87% traffic, 7.02% status, and 18.66% custody. The adult hearings in Arlington of 33.86% criminal and 66.14% non-support split differently from the state which were equally divided between criminal and non-support, 49.52% and 50.48% respectively. The district's caseload per juvenile and domestic relations judge of 1,518 new cases and 5,282 hearings was well below the urban district average of 3,215 new cases and 6,370 hearings per judge.

EIGHTEENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The city of Alexandria is the only locality designated in the Eighteenth District. The general district court is authorized two judgeships and is served by Robert T. S. Colby and D. F. O'Flaherty. The juvenile and domestic relations court is authorized one judgeship and currently Joseph L. Peters, Jr., fills the position. Judge O'Flaherty and Judge Peters are the chief judges. The two general district judges used a total of 95 substitute days while Judge Peters used 38 days during 1978.

The population of Alexandria was recently estimated at 104,800 or 52,400 per judge. This was slightly less than the general district court average of 54,104 and ranked the district sixteenth out of the thirty-two districts. The total population per juvenile judge value of 104,800 ranked fifth among the districts. The juvenile population of 21,000 per J&DR judge was below the state average for juvenile judges of 25,507 and ranked the district twenty-sixth in this category.

Alexandria General District Court reported a total of 30,738 new cases, 38,952 hearings, and 30,454 dispositions. The number of new cases decreased by 1,533 or 4.75% from the 1977 level. Hearings declined by 3,052 or 7.27%. The declines in new cases and hearings were caused primarily by reductions in the traffic and civil caseloads. Despite the drop in traffic cases, Alexandria had the tenth largest traffic caseload of all Virginia localities. The decline in traffic hearings was brought about by the waiving of 5,448 hearings under the traffic infraction law. The criminal caseload experienced increases in both new cases, up 165 or 3.99%, and in hearings, up 1,322 or 16.27%. The caseload per general district judge of 15,369 new cases and 19,476 hearings was less than the urban district average of 19,486 cases and 23,692 hearings, but was closer to the state average of 16,825 new cases and 19,800 hearings. Of the fourteen urban districts, Alexandria ranked eleventh in both new cases and hearings per judge.

Alexandria's 1978 general district caseload was composed of 13.99% criminal, 63.66% traffic, and 22.35% civil cases, containing a higher percentage of traffic than the state's 56.60% and lower percentages of criminal and civil. The state percentage of criminal cases was 17.90% and of civil cases, 25.50%.

The Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court had a total of 2,376 new cases and 7,936 hearings. The number of new cases experienced a slight increase of 60 cases while the number of hearings rose 528 for a 7.13% increase. The change in new cases occurred on the adult side while both the juvenile and adult caseloads experienced growth in the number hearings. The new caseload was composed of 71.34% juvenile and 28.66% adult cases and was very similar to the state composition. The juvenile hearings were distributed as follows: 52.90% criminal, 3.74% status, 18.57% traffic, and 24.79% custody. The percentages of criminal and custody hearings were both below the state percentages of 47.44% criminal and 18.66% custody. Correspondingly, the district percentages of traffic and status hearings were lower than the state values of 26.87% and 7.02% respectively. The adult hearings were split similarly to the state, dividing equally between criminal and non-support. The caseload per J&DR judge of 2,376 new cases ranked tenth among the fourteen urban districts while the 7,936 hearings ranked fourth. The urban district mean was 3,215 new cases and 6,370 hearings per judge while the median was 2,981 new cases and 6,387 hearings. The Eighteenth's ratio of hearings per case of 3.34 was considerably higher than the urban district mean of 1.98 or the state mean of 1.93.

NINETEENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Nineteenth Judicial District is comprised of Fairfax County and the cities of Fairfax and Falls Church. The district is currently authorized seven general district judgeships. The seventh judgeship was created by the 1978 Legislature and was filled with the appointment of F. Bruce Bach effective April 1, 1978. The other general district judges serving in 1978 were Robert M. Hurst, Martin E. Morris, John A. Rothrock, Lewis H. Griffith, G. William Hammer, and J. Mason Grove. Judge Griffith was elected by the 1979 Legislature to replace Circuit Judge James Keith who retired December 31, 1978. J. Conrad Waters, Jr., replaced Judge Griffith effective March 1, 1979. Another vacancy will occur when Judge Bach fills the additional circuit judgeship granted by the 1979 General Assembly effective July 1, 1979. Frank B. Perry, III, was elected to replace Judge Bach in the general district court. The juvenile and domestic relations court is authorized four judges and is served by Philip N. Brophy, Frank L. Deierhoi, Thomas J. Fortkort, and Arnold B. Kassabian. Judges Hurst and Brophy are the chief judges. The seven general district court judges used a total of 250 substitute days in 1978 while the four juvenile and domestic relations judges used a total of 131.

The most recent population estimate of the district by the Tayloe Murphy Institute was 568,200 for 1977. The population of the district in 1970 was 487,774 and has been increasing at greater than two percent annually. The population per general district judge of 81,171 ranked first out of the thirty-two districts. The state average was 54,104 persons per judge. The juvenile population of the district of 197,900 averaged 49,475 per judge and ranked the district second among the thirty-two districts. The state value of juveniles per judge was 25,507.

The general district courts of the Nineteenth reported 128,277 new cases, 149,125 hearings, and 126,846 dispositions in 1978. The ratio of hearings to new cases was 1.16 which was consistent with the urban district and state values. The new caseload increased by 3,621 new cases over the 1977 level for a 2.90% gain. Most of the growth occurred in criminal (up 7.52%) and civil cases (up 12.32%), although traffic also increased but by less than one percent. The total number of hearings declined by 8,695 or 5.51%. The drop in hearings was caused by waiving of 29,998 traffic hearings resulting in a net loss of 16,164 traffic hearings. While traffic hearings decreased by 15.30%, the number of criminal and civil hearings were up by 12.06% and 16.99% respectively.

In comparison with other Virginia localities, the county of Fairfax ranked within the top four in new cases for all categories: criminal, traffic, civil, total general district, and juvenile and domestic relations. Fairfax County was first in traffic and J&DR new cases. The district's caseload per general district judge of 18,325 new cases and 21,304 hearings was less than the urban district average of 19,486 cases and 23,692 hearings, but higher than the state average of 16,825 new cases and 19,800 hearings.

The composition of the Nineteenth's general district caseload in 1978 was 14.12% criminal, 73.35% traffic, and 12.53% civil, containing a significantly higher percentage of traffic cases than the state 56.60%. Correspondingly, the district's criminal and civil percentages were below the state percentages of 17.90 and 25.50 respectively. The district's distribution of hearings although closer to the state's still contained a higher traffic percentage.

The juvenile and domestic relations caseload for 1978 was 18,860 new cases, 25,141 hearings, and 16,994 dispositions, reflecting a 2.08% increase in new cases and a 5.61% increase in hearings. The new caseload was 85.84% juvenile and 14.16% adult. These values contained a higher percentage of juvenile cases than the state's 71.97%. The ratio of hearings per case of 1.33 was significantly less than the state value of 1.93. The juvenile hearings for the district consisted of 37.95% criminal, 3.79% status, 51.25% traffic, and 7.00% custody. These percentages revealed a pattern similar to the general district in that a large percentage of hearings involve traffic cases. The state percentages were 47.44% criminal, 7.02% status, 26.87% traffic, and 18.66% custody. The 1978 caseload of 4,715 new cases per judge ranked second while the 6,285 hearings per judge ranked eighth of the fourteen urban districts. Fairfax County's juvenile and domestic court had the highest juvenile caseload of any court in the state and was 7,289 new cases higher than the next court, Virginia Beach.

TWENTIETH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Twentieth Judicial District serves the three counties of Fauquier, Loudoun, and Rappahannock located in the northern part of the state. The district is currently authorized two general district and one juvenile and domestic relations judges. The two general district judges are Archibald M. Aiken and William W. Carson. The juvenile and domestic relations courts are served by William F. Moffett, Jr. For 1978, the three judges used a total of 75 substitute judge days. The district covers an area of 1,560 square miles.

The population of the Twentieth District was estimated at 68,724 in 1970; however, the most recent estimate by the Tayloe Murphy Institute put the population at 88,300. The growth in population was caused principally by the growth in Loudoun County which made up almost 60% of the district's population. Loudoun County, because of its proximity to the Washington, D.C. area, has been increasing at almost a 5.5% annual rate since 1970. The population per general district judge of 44,150 was somewhat below the state average of 54,104 and ranked twenty-eighth of thirty-two districts. The juvenile population of the area estimated at 30,800 for the single judge ranked eighth in this category. The state mean was 25,507 juveniles per judge.

The three general district courts in the Twentieth District reported a total of 21,110 new cases, 25,365 hearings, and 21,096 dispositions during 1978. The new caseload increased 648 cases or 3.17% in 1977. This increase resulted primarily from 355 additional criminal cases, although traffic and civil also showed gains. The number of hearings declined by a net 1,357 hearings. The reduction was a direct result of a 14.5% loss in traffic hearings. The waiving of 6,470 traffic hearings contributed to the decline in traffic hearings. The number of criminal and civil hearings both increased. The caseload per general district judge of 10,555 new cases and 12,683 hearings were both below the rural means of 14,191 new cases and 15,949 hearings. The number of hearings per case of 1.20 was consistent with the state value of 1.18.

The composition of the caseload in the district was 15.16% criminal, 70.10% traffic, and 14.74% civil. The state's traffic percentage of 56.60% was less than the district percentage while the state percentages of criminal, 17.90%, and civil, 25.50%, were above the district's values.

The Twentieth District reported 2,453 new juvenile cases and 587 new adult cases. The total number of new cases, 3,040, exceeded the 1977 value by 386 or 14.54%. The total number of hearings, 5,946, reflected an increase of 11.68% or 622 additional cases over the 1977 level. The juvenile caseload increased by 12.06% in new cases and 9.76% in hearings. The adult caseload rose by 26.24% in new cases and 17.40% in hearings. The hearings per case, 1.96, was consistent with the state value of 1.93. The distribution of new cases, 80.69% juvenile and 19.31% adult, contained a higher percentage of juvenile cases than the state percentages of 71.97% juvenile and 28.03% adult. The juvenile hearings in the district, 60.86% criminal, 0.29% status, 26.69% traffic, and 12.16% custody, contained a higher percentage of criminal cases, comparable percents of traffic cases, and lower percents of status and custody than the state percentages.

The caseload for Judge Moffett of 3,040 new cases and 5,946 hearings ranked the Twentieth District seventh in new cases and fourth in hearings of all eighteen rural districts. The mean for the rural districts was 2,589 new cases and 4,819 hearings per judge. Judge Moffett's caseload was similar to the average for all judges of 2,910 new cases and 5,614 hearings.

TWENTY-FIRST JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Twenty-First Judicial District consists of Henry and Patrick Counties and the city of Martinsville. The district is authorized two general district judges and one juvenile and domestic relations judge. Currently, the district has two general district judges: Kenneth M. Covington and J. Frank Greenwalt, Jr. The juvenile and domestic relations courts are served by J. English Ford. Judge Covington and Judge Ford are designated as the district's chief district court judges. Judge Covington serves primarily in Henry County while Judge Greenwalt sits in Martinsville and Patrick County. The three judges used a total of 104 substitute days in 1978.

The population of the district was recently estimated by the Tayloe Murphy Institute at 89,500. The population of Henry County, 55,700, represented 62% of the district's population. Martinsville at 17,600 and Patrick at 16,200 represented 20% and 18% respectively. The population per judge of the district, 44,750, ranked twenty-seventh out of the thirty-two districts. The juvenile population for Judge Ford of 27,000 ranked twelfth out of the thirty-two districts, highest ranked first, in juvenile population per judge. The state juvenile population per judge was 25,507.

In 1978, the general district courts had 15,959 new cases, 18,108 hearings, and 15,917 dispositions. The number of new cases rose by 1,312 during the year for an 8.96% increase. The new criminal caseload, 3,686, represented a decline of 344 cases from the 1977 level. The traffic caseload offset the criminal decline by increasing 340 cases. The civil caseload rose by 1,316 cases representing a 31.35% increase. The additional new civil cases occurred in Henry, up 591 cases, and Martinsville, up 686 cases. The total number hearings in the district was up 583 from the previous year and thus reflected a 3.33% increase. The only increase in hearings took place in the civil caseload as the number of criminal and traffic hearings declined. Henry County continued to make up 55% of the district's new caseload and 54% of the hearings.

The distribution of the new caseload was 23.10% criminal, 42.35% traffic, and 34.55% civil. The state percentages included a higher percent of traffic cases, 56.60% and lower percentages of criminal, 17.90%, and civil, 25.50%. The district's caseload per judge of 7,980 new cases and 9,054 hearings was below the rural district average of 14,191 new cases and 15,949 hearings. The average number of hearings per new cases, 1.13, was consistent with the rural district average.

The juvenile and domestic caseload in the district during 1978 was 3,174 new cases, 4,355 hearings, and 2,739 dispositions. This caseload reflected an increase of 205 new cases; however, the number of hearings declined by 134. Henry and Martinsville both experienced slight declines in their juvenile and domestic relations new cases and hearings; Patrick County caseload grew in both new cases and hearings.

The distribution of juvenile hearings was 56.64% criminal, 2.64% status, 23.46% traffic, and 17.26% custody. The state percentage of criminal hearings, 47.44%, was less while the state's percentage of status hearings, 7.02%, was higher. The state's percentage of traffic, 26.87%, and custody, 18.66%, were similar to the Twenty-First's. Of the two types of cases, juvenile and adult, the district's percentage of adult cases, 39.98%, was higher than the state value, 28.03%. Thus the juvenile percentage for the district of 60.02% was less than the state percentage, 71.97%.

The district's juvenile and domestic relations caseload per judge of 3,174 new cases ranked fifth while the hearings per judge of 4,355 ranked thirteenth of the eighteen rural district courts. The rural district average was 2,589 new cases and 4,819 hearings per judge. The hearings per case for the district of 1.37 was below the rural district average of 1.86.

TWENTY-SECOND JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Twenty-Second Judicial District consists of the counties of Franklin and Pittsylvania and the city of Danville. The district is currently authorized two general district and two juvenile and domestic relations judgeships. The district is currently served by four full-time judges. The two general district judges are F. Nelson Light, the chief judge, and T. Ryland Dodson. Judge Dodson replaced Judge Land who retired effective June 30, 1978. The juvenile and domestic relations courts are served by Judges Spiros B. Skenderis and Robert F. Ward. The two general district judges used a total of 74 substitute judge days, while the two juvenile judges used a total of 53 substitute days.

The population of the district was recently estimated by the Tayloe Murphy Institute at 140,700. Pittsylvania County's population of 63,500 made up 45% of the total, while Danville City with 44,400 contributed 32% and Franklin County added the remaining 32,800 or 23%. The population per general district judge of 70,350 ranked fifth out of the thirty-two districts. The state average was 54,104. The juvenile population of the district was 41,900 and equaled a per judge value of 20,950 which was somewhat below the state average of 25,507.

The district's general district caseload for 1978 was 32,329 new cases, 38,884 hearings, and 30,555 dispositions. The number of new cases was consistent with the 1977 level of 32,471. While overall the new cases remained constant, there was some shift in the caseload. The criminal and traffic cases both declined; however, these declines were offset by an increase in the civil caseload. The total number of hearings decreased 8.77% or by 3,739 hearings. This loss was caused principally by the waiving of traffic hearings and was aided by the decline in the total number of new traffic cases.

The composition of the district's 1978 new caseload was 24.82% criminal, 44.96% traffic, and 30.22% civil. This caseload contained higher percentages of criminal and civil cases than the state percentages of 17.90% and 25.50% respectively. The state's percentage of traffic cases, 56.60%, was above the district percentage. The state caseload per judge for rural districts in 1978 was 14,191 new cases and 15,949 hearings. The Twenty-Second District's average of 16,165 new cases per judge ranked sixth and the 19,442 hearings per judge ranked fifth out of the eighteen rural districts. The hearings per case ratio for the district of 1.20 was consistent with both the rural district ratio, 1.12, and the state value, 1.18.

During 1978, Judge Skenderis and Judge Ward heard a total of 5,606 new cases, held a total of 10,733 hearings, and disposed of 4,793 cases. The ratio of hearings to new cases of 1.91 was consistent with the state ratio of 1.93. The juvenile caseload increased in both new cases (up 65 or 1.81%) and hearings (up 488 or 8.35%). The adult new cases declined by 345 cases (15.03%) while the hearings decreased by 168 (3.67%). The net effect of juvenile and adult changes was 280 fewer new cases and 318 more hearings than occurred in 1977. The distribution of the caseload, 65.20% juvenile and 34.80% adult, continued to have a larger share of adult cases than the state's percentage. The juvenile hearings were distributed as follows: 54.02% criminal, 20.78% traffic, 2.73% status, and 22.47% custody. The district's percentages of criminal and custody hearings were somewhat higher than the state while the status and traffic hearings were lower. The state percentages were 47.44% criminal, 26.87% traffic, 7.02% status, and 18.66% custody. The district adult hearings were split 56.11% criminal and 43.89% custody. The state adult hearings were equally split. The caseload per judge for the district of 2,803 new cases and 5,367 hearings was higher than the rural district average, 2,589 new cases and 4,819 hearings but less than the state average of 2,910 new cases and 5,614 hearings.

TWENTY-THIRD JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Twenty-Third Judicial District serves the Roanoke Valley. The localities in the district are Roanoke County, Roanoke City, and Salem City. The district is currently authorized five general district and three juvenile and domestic relations judgeships. The 1978 Legislature increased the juvenile and domestic relations authorization to three judges effective July 1, 1978. The general district courts are served by James P. Brice, Beverly T. Fitzpatrick, W. Byron Gochenour, Edward S. Kidd, Jr., and Norman P. Moore. Judge Kidd replaced George B. Dillard who retired September 15, 1978. The three juvenile judges are James W. Flippin, Frederick L. Hoback, Jr., and Roy B. Willett. Judge Hoback filled the newly authorized judgeship. The two chief judges are Judge Fitzpatrick for the general district courts and Judge Flippin for the juvenile and domestic relations courts. The five general district judges used only 67 substitute days during 1978 while the three juvenile judges also limited their substitute days to 29.

The population of the district was 181,436 in 1970 and was recently estimated at 190,500 for 1977. Roanoke City's population represented 50% of the district's population while Roanoke County and Salem contributed 36% and 14%, respectively. The population per general district judge of 38,100 was significantly lower than the state average; however, the Roanoke area is a business center used by many in the surrounding counties. The juvenile population of the district was estimated at 54,900 or 18,300 per judge which was below the state average of 25,507.

During 1978, the Twenty-Third District experienced increases in all three categories of new cases: criminal was up 6.86%, traffic rose by 5.52%, and civil grew by 12.42%. The total number of new cases, 58,114, was 4,252 more cases than the 1977 level. Hearings declined slightly from 68,298 in 1977 to 67,622 in 1978. The decline in traffic hearings of 6,876 more than offset the increases in criminal, up 3,050, and civil, up 3,150. The primary reason for the decline in traffic hearings was defendants waiving their right to trial, pleading guilty, and prepaying the fine. The caseload per judge for the district was 11,623 new cases and 13,524 hearings. The district's caseload per judge was less than both the urban district and state means. The hearings per case ratio of 1.16 was consistent with the state value of 1.18.

The composition of the new caseload for the district was 25.32% criminal, 44.02% traffic, and 30.67% civil. The district's percentages of criminal and civil cases were both higher than the state values of 17.90% and 25.50%, respectively, while the traffic percentage was less than the state's, 56.60%. Roanoke City as a locality was fifth in both criminal caseload and civil caseload for all the courts in the state. Overall in general district cases, the city ranked seventh.

The juvenile and domestic relations caseload in the district for 1978 reflected 10,755 new cases, 15,077 hearings, and 7,583 dispositions. The increase of 1,556 new cases over 1977 occurred in both the juvenile and adult sides. The percentages of juvenile and adult cases were consistent with the state. The growth in new cases was accompanied by a similar increase in the number of hearings as the juvenile hearings grew by 1,854 or 19.43% and the adult hearings rose by 849 or 29.96%. The juvenile hearings were distributed as follows: 50.95% criminal, 21.99% traffic, 20.46% custody, and 6.60% status. This distribution was similar to the state percentages. The Twenty-Third District commenced 3,585 new cases per judge and 5,026 hearings per judge. While the new caseload per judge ranked fifth, the hearings per judge ranked thirteenth out of the fourteen urban districts. The urban district average was 3,215 new cases and 6,370 hearings per judge. The ratio of hearings to new cases of 1.40 was less than the urban mean of 1.98.

TWENTY-FOURTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Twenty-Fourth Judicial District consists of the counties of Amherst, Bedford, Campbell, Nelson, and the cities of Bedford, Lynchburg, and Waynesboro. The district is one of the state's largest in area, covering 2,248 square miles. The general district courts are authorized three judgeships and are served by Leroy E. Glass, J. Samuel Johnson, Jr., and C. M. Kiser. Judge Johnston replaced W. H. Overby who retired February 1, 1978. Judge A. A. Rucker, a part-time judge, served in Bedford's general and juvenile courts until his retirement June 1, 1978. The juvenile and domestic relations courts two authorized judges in 1978 were Harold B. Singleton and Earl W. Wingo. The 1977 Legislature authorized a third juvenile judgeship for the area effective July 1, 1977. Judge Kiser and Judge Singleton serve as the district's two chief judges. During 1978, the three authorized general district judgeships used a total of 84 substitute days while the two juvenile judges called on substitute judges 54 days.

The combined population of the Twenty-Fourth District was 184,622 in 1970 and grew to 199,000 as of 1977. The City of Lynchburg with 32% and Campbell County with 22% made up the majority of the district's population. Amherst and Bedford Counties contributed an additional 14% and 15%, respectively. Nelson County, Bedford City and Waynesboro made up the remaining 17%. The population per judge for the three general district judges of 66,333 ranked seventh out of the thirty-two districts. The state average was 54,104 per judge. The juvenile population, 58,400, equaled 29,200 per judge, ranking the district tenth in a statewide comparison. The state average was 25,507 juveniles per judge.

The total number of new cases for this district in 1978 of 59,283 was 11,421 more cases than in 1977. The 23.86% increase was primarily caused by 7,810 additional traffic cases. However, the criminal caseload, 11,989, rose by 1,682 new cases and the civil caseload experienced a similar increase of 1,929 to reach 12,657 new cases for 1978. The total number of hearings, 61,643, also reflected an increase of 5,564 hearings. The increase in hearings would have been greater had not 10,889 traffic hearings been waived. The number of hearings increased in all three categories with the largest increase, 2,570 hearings or 20.27%, occurring in the civil category. Criminal hearings rose by 922 (5.65%) while the traffic hearings increased 2,072 or 7.65%. The courts reported disposing of 55,920 cases during 1978. The caseload per judge for the district of 19,761 new cases and 20,548 hearings was significantly above the rural district average of 14,191 new cases and 15,949 hearings, and the state average of 16,825 new cases and 19,500 hearings. The district's per judge values ranked second in new cases and fourth in hearings of all eighteen rural districts. The composition of the new cases was: 58.43% traffic, 20.22% criminal, and 21.35% civil. These percentages were similar to the Commonwealth distribution.

The juvenile and domestic relations caseload increased from 7,162 new cases, 14,092 hearings, and 6,361 dispositions in 1977 to 7,873 new cases, 16,253 hearings, and 7,483 dispositions in 1978. This reflected a 9.93% increase in new cases and a 15.33% increase in hearings. The juvenile caseload rose by 734 new cases and 1,708 hearings. Adult new cases remained constant; however, the number of hearings increased by 453 or 8.30%. The juvenile hearings consisted of 49.57% criminal, 7.83% status, 25.50% traffic, and 17.10% custody. These percentages were consistent with those of the state. The adult hearings were similar to the state, 45.74% criminal and 54.26% non-support. The hearings per case ratio of 2.06 was slightly above the state value of 1.93. The district's caseload per judge of 3,937 new cases and 8,127 hearings ranked first in both categories of the eighteen rural districts. The rural district average per judge was 2,589 new cases and 4,819 hearings for 1978. The third judgeship should prove a valuable asset in meeting the public demand for judicial services.

TWENTY-FIFTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Twenty-Fifth Judicial District consists of the central western counties of Alleghany, Augusta, Bath, Botetourt, Craig, Highland, Rockbridge, and the cities of Buena Vista, Clifton Forge, Covington, Lexington, and Staunton. The district covers 3,898 square miles and is the state's second largest in terms of area. The district is currently authorized four general district judgeships and is served by Duncan M. Byrd, B. C. Goodloe, Joseph E. Hess, and Elmer C. Westerman, Jr. Judge Westerman was elected to the vacancy created by John F. Eakin's retirement April 1, 1978. Judge Westerman sits in the southern part of the district in Botetourt and Craig Counties. Judge Byrd, the chief district judge, currently sits in the counties of Alleghany, Bath, Highland, and the city of Clifton Forge. Judges Hess sits principally in Lexington, Rockbridge, and Buena Vista. In addition, Judge Hess handles the civil cases in Augusta County. Judge Goodloe sits in Staunton and also hears the Augusta County criminal and traffic cases. The four judges used a total of 91 substitute days in 1978.

The district is also served by three juvenile and domestic relations judges: William S. Goode, A. L. Larkum, and James M. Davidson. Judge Goode sits in Alleghany, Bath, Craig, and Clifton Forge. Judge Davidson hears cases in Botetourt, Rockbridge, Lexington, and Buena Vista. Judge Larkum serves in Augusta, Staunton, and Highland County. The three juvenile judges used a total of 37 substitute days during the year.

The population of the Twenty-Fifth District was recently estimated at 164,800. Augusta County with 51,900 made up approximately 31% of the district's population. Staunton with 22,000 and Botetourt with 21,400 were the second the third largest localities in the district. The population per judge for the district of 41,200 was below the state average of 54,104. The juvenile population of 47,300 averages 15,767 juveniles per judge. The state average was 25,507 juveniles per judge.

During 1978, the Twenty-Fifth District reported 46,105 new cases, 50,209 hearings, and 45,157 dispositions. The growth in new cases of 879 (1.94%) was caused by an increase in the number of traffic cases which offset declines in criminal and civil cases. The total number of hearings in 1978 represented a slight reduction (2.60%) from the 1977 level. The decrease was caused principally by a reduction in the number of traffic hearings as more defendants pleaded guilty and waived their right to trial. The composition of the new caseload was 18.60% criminal, 65.53% traffic, and 15.87% civil. Due to the existence of Interstate 81 through the entire length of the district, the traffic caseload represented a higher percentage of the new cases than occurred in the state's distribution. The 1978 composition varied little from the district's 1977 percentages. The caseload in the district of 11,526 new cases per judge ranked fourteenth, while the 12,552 hearings per judge ranked fifteenth out of the eighteen rural districts. The rural district mean was 14,191 new cases and 15,949 hearings per judge. The 1.09 hearings per case ratio of the district was comparable to the rural district ratio of 1.12.

During 1978, the three juvenile judges heard a total of 4,668 new cases, 8,076 hearings and disposed of 4,291 cases. The same figures for 1977 were 4,604 new cases, 8,033 hearings, and 4,005 dispositions. Therefore, the caseload experienced no significant change from that of 1977. There was an offsetting shift of cases and hearings from the adult side to the juvenile side. The mix of cases, 71.62% juvenile and 28.38% adult, reflected the slight increase. These percentages were within a half percentage point of the state values. The juvenile hearings distribution of 54.87% criminal, 5.33% status, 25.35% traffic, and 14.57% custody contained more criminal than the state percentage, 47.44%, while the other hearing types for the district were slightly less. The district's adult hearings also contained a higher percentage of criminal, 54%, than the state which was equally split between criminal and non-support. The 1978 caseload per judge of 1,556 new cases and 2,692 hearings was considerably less than the rural district means of 2,589 new cases and 4,819 hearings.

TWENTY-SIXTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Twenty-Sixth Judicial District is comprised of the counties of Clarke, Frederick, Page, Rockingham, Shenandoah, and Warren. The cities of Harrisonburg and Winchester are also located in this district. The district is one of the largest in Virginia, covering 2,522 square miles in the upper Shenandoah Valley. The Twenty-Sixth District is authorized three full-time general district and two full-time juvenile and domestic relations judgeships. The general district courts are served by one full-time judge, John A. Paul, and four part-time judges: Robert E. Hayes, Harold G. Potts, Kermit L. Racey, and David G. Simpson. Judges Beverly B. Bowers and Carle F. Germelman, Jr., serve on a full-time basis as the J&DR judges. The five judges of the general district courts used 110 substitute judge days. The juvenile judges had only 20 substitute days.

The Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the district's 1977 population at 196,900 or 2,300 above the 1976 estimate. The population per F.T.E. judge was 49,200. This was below the state average of 54,104 and ranked the district twenty-first among the Commonwealth's thirty-two districts. The juvenile population was 57,800 which averaged 28,900 per judge. The state average per judge was 25,507 and the district ranked eleventh on this measure.

The general district courts of the Twenty-Sixth reported 60,200 new cases and 67,[illegible] hearings for 1978 as compared with 58,601 new cases and 75,143 hearings in 1977. The primary change was the 20% jump in civil cases. Even though traffic cases showed a slight increase, hearings were reduced almost 20%. This was due to the effect of the traffic infraction law which allowed for the prepayment of many minor traffic violations. The district ranked ninth in criminal, fifth in traffic, and thirteenth in new civil cases. The average number of cases per general district judge of 15,050 was below the state average (16,825) but above the rural average (14,191). The 16,985 hearings per judge compared to the state and rural averages in a similar manner.

The composition of the 1978 caseload in the general district courts was 17.0% criminal, 64.8% traffic, and 18.2% civil. The 1977 composition was 18.4% criminal, 66.0% traffic, and 15.6% civil. The makeup of the state's caseload for 1978 consisted of 17.9% criminal, 56.6% traffic, and 25.5% civil.

The juvenile judges had a total of 5,494 new cases and 8,399 hearings. Cases were divided between 3,835 juvenile and 1,659 adult. Cases increased in both categories. Total cases and were up almost seven percent. Hearings decreased slightly in juvenile (3.3%) and rose a small amount (1.1%) in adult. The total number of hearings was down 1.6%. The 1978 caseload per J&DR judge was 2,747 new cases and 4,200 hearings as compared to the rural means of 2,589 and 4,819. The per judge averages on a statewide basis were 2,910 cases and 5,614 hearings.

TWENTY-SEVENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Twenty-Seventh Judicial District consists of the counties of Carroll, Floyd, Grayson, Montgomery, Pulaski, Wythe, and the cities of Galax and Radford. The district is currently authorized three general district court judges and has three full-time judges sitting: George B. Cooley, James H. Joines, John C. Snidow, Jr. The district is also served by one part-time judge, Richard Davis, who sits two afternoons per week in Radford City. Judge Joines, the chief district judge, serves in Wythe County, Grayson County, and the city of Galax. Judge Snidow sat in Montgomery and Floyd Counties. Judge Cooley replaced Judge LaRue, who served the district during 1977 and was appointed by the 1978 Legislature to a circuit court judgeship. Judge Cooley's term began April 1, 1978, and he sat principally in Pulaski and Carroll Counties. The district is also served by two juvenile and domestic relations judges: William F. Thomas, Jr., and G. Garland Wilson, both full-time. Judge Wilson is the chief district court judge. The four judges used a total of 191 substitute days during 1978.

The population of the district was recently estimated by the Tayloe Murphy Institute at 184,600. Montgomery County was the largest locality in terms of population. With the exception of Montgomery County, the district's localities were not expected to experience any significant growth in population up to 1980. The recent population per general district court judges of 57,688 was slightly above the state value of 54,104. The juvenile population of the district, 51,900, averaged 25,950 per juvenile judges which was also slightly higher than the state mean of 25,507 per judge.

The general district courts had 41,761 new cases and 47,437 hearings in 1978. These figures were 6.5% and 3.1% increases, respectively, over the 39,214 new cases and 46,005 hearings that composed the caseload during 1977. The caseload grew in all categories with a significant 16.6% increase in civil cases. Criminal and traffic cases experienced positive changes of 2.2% and 4.8%, respectively. Total hearings jumped 3.1% with the primary change again an almost 16% growth in civil. Criminal hearings rose by nine percent while traffic hearings were down 5.5%. The caseload per full-time equivalent judge was 13,050 cases and 14,824 hearings. Both caseload measures were below the corresponding state and rural means. The district ranked eleventh among the eighteen rural districts on both averages.

The caseload was broken down into 23.4% criminal, 54.7% traffic, and 21.9% civil cases. Traffic caseload was close to the state mix of 56.6% of total caseload. Civil cases were four and one half percentage points less than the state percentage while criminal was three and one half percentage points less.

The juvenile and domestic relations caseload consisted of 6,112 new cases and 10,840 hearings. There were 4,014 juvenile cases and 2,098 adult cases, both of which rose sharply over the previous year. Total cases showed a rise of 14.1% and hearings had an increase of 8.7%. The judges averaged 3,056 cases and 5,420 hearings each. The rural averages per judge were less at 2,589 and 4,819, respectively. The state averages were 2,910 cases and 5,614 hearings per judge.

TWENTY-EIGHTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Twenty-Eighth District is comprised of the counties of Smyth, Washington, and the city of Bristol. The district covers an area of 1,017 square miles in the southwestern part of the state. Currently, the Twenty-Eighth is authorized two general district judgeships. In 1978, the district was served by two full-time judges, Francis M. Hoge and T. L. Hutton, Jr. Judge Hoge sat in Smyth County and the city of Bristol. Judge Hutton sat principally in Washington County two days per week. He also assisted Judge Hoge in the city of Bristol. Judge Hutton's term as a part-time judge expired June 30, 1978; and Judge Mathews, the circuit court judge, did not reappoint the part-time judgeship. The full-time vacancy was certified in April 1978, and Judge Hutton became full-time. One juvenile and domestic relations judgeship is authorized for the Twenty-Eighth District and is held by Charles H. Smith, Jr. The district's three judges used a total of 69 substitute days for an average of 23 days each.

The Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the 1976 population at 93,500. The 1977 population was 95,000. Washington County had the largest population of the three localities, followed by Smyth County and the city of Bristol. The population per general district judge of 47,500 was below the state average of 54,104 persons per judge. The district ranked twenty-third on this measure. The district's juvenile population was 26,100 which ranked thirteenth among the thirty-two judicial districts.

The 1978 caseload for the general district courts was 22,298 new cases and 22,046 hearings. There was almost no change in new cases and an eight percent decline in hearings when compared with the previous year. Traffic and civil cases were up while criminal cases declined. Hearings decreased a small amount in criminal but dropped fourteen percent in traffic as the traffic infractions law began to take a noticeable effect. Civil hearings rose 4.67%. The caseload resulted in averages of 11,149 cases and 11,023 hearings per judge using 2.0 F.T.E. judges for 1978. These were well below the rural averages of 14,191 cases and 15,949 hearings per judge. The district ranked sixteenth and seventeenth, respectively, on the caseload averages when compared to the eighteen rural districts.

The general district caseload was made up of 24% criminal, 61.9% traffic, and 14.1% civil cases. The mix of criminal and traffic cases was above that of the state. The civil case proportion was below. The state caseload consisted of 17.9% criminal, 56.5% traffic, and 25.5% civil.

Judge Smith heard 3,665 new cases and held 6,212 hearings during 1978. Juvenile cases increased from 2,107 in 1977 to 2,609 in 1978 for almost a 24% increase. Adult cases rose 2.4% to 1,056. Total cases were up 16.8% with hearings showing a growth of 19%. The caseload per judge of 3,665 new cases and 6,212 hearings was above both the rural and state means. The J&DR cases per judge ranked second and hearings per judge ranked third among the eighteen rural districts.

TWENTY-NINTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Twenty-Ninth Judicial District includes the counties of Bland, Buchanan, Dickenson, Giles, Russell, and Tazewell. The district covers 2,580 square miles of southwest Virginia. The general district courts are authorized three judges. Judges Pat B. Hale, Thomas J. Bondurant, and Wade S. Coates sit in the general district courts. Judge Coates replaced Judge Percy in March 1977. There are two juvenile and domestic relations judges designated. Judges Charles B. Andrews and Susan Bundy are the J&DR judges. Judge Bundy was appointed February 1977 to the position held previously by Judge Hansel Fleming.

The district had a 1977 population of 155,200 of which an estimated 50,000 were juveniles. The population per general district judge was 51,773 which ranked seventeenth in the state. The juvenile popualtion of 25,000 per judge was just under the state average of 25,507 and also ranked seventeenth.

The caseload of the general district courts consisted of 34,106 new cases and 40,868 hearings. New cases grew by less than one percent. Hearings declined just under five percent from 1977. Criminal cases declined 3.3% while hearings also decreased six percent. Traffic cases were stable but hearings, reflecting the full year under the traffic infractions law, dropped seven percent. Civil cases rose five percent and hearings rose by 1.9%. The 11,369 cases and 13,623 hearings per judge ranked fifteenth and thirteenth, respectively, among rural districts. The rural averages per judge were 14,191 cases and 15,949 hearings.

The 1978 caseload was composed of 24.8% criminal, 52.1% traffic, and 23.1% civil cases. The previous year was almost exactly the same with 25.8% criminal, 52.1% traffic, and 22.1% civil. The composition of the total state caseload for the year 1978 was 17.9% criminal, 56.5% traffic, and 25.5% civil.

The juvenile and domestic relations judges heard 3,687 new cases and held 7,337 hearings in 1978. The corresponding figures for 1977 were 3,507 new cases and 6,072 hearings. Thus, while new cases rose by slightly more than five percent, hearings had a tremendous spurt of 20.8%. The caseload per judge in the Twenty-Ninth District's juvenile courts was 1,884 cases and 3,669 hearings. Both caseload measures were significantly under the rural figures of 2,589 cases and 4,819 hearings per judge. The district ranked last in cases per judge and next to last in hearings per judge among the eighteen rural districts.

THIRTEENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

Located in the southwestern part of the state, the Thirtieth Judicial District consists of Lee, Scott, and Wise Counties. Currently, the Thirtieth is authorized two general and one juvenile and domestic relations judgeships. In 1978, the district was served by two full-time general district judges: Montie S. Meeks and Albert M. Shelton. Judge Shelton replaced Emory H. Crockett who retired in December of 1977. Judge Shelton died January 30, 1979. Judge William C. Fugate, who served as the district's juvenile judge in 1978, replaced Judge Shelton effective March 1, 1979. Richard E. Smith was appointed to fill the J&DR judgeship left vacant by the transfer of Judge Fugate. The three judges in the Thirtieth averaged 16 substitute days each in 1978.

Tayloe Murphy estimated the district's 1977 total population at 100,200 which equaled a population per general district judge value of 50,100. This was somewhat less than the state average of 54,104. With a juvenile population of 29,800 and one J&DR judge, the Thirtieth District ranked ninth among all thirty-two districts in this comparison.

In 1978, the general district courts reported 25,490 new cases, 35,721 hearings, and 24,747 dispositions. These figures represented a significant increase over the 1977 caseload with new cases up by 3,643 or 16.68% and hearings up by 3,602 or 11.21%. The criminal caseload underwent little change: 7,371 cases and 11,805 hearings in 1978 compared with 7,384 cases and 11,797 hearings in 1977. The rising 1978 caseload was the result of significant increases in the traffic and civil categories. A sharp gain of 3,059 in new traffic cases (30.21%) was primarily responsible for the increase in total cases, although civil cases also jumped 13.77% or 597. Traffic and civil hearings rose 16.77% (2,401) and 19.88% (1,193), respectively, to contribute to the 1978 total hearings.

The composition of the 1978 new caseload was 28.92% criminal, 51.72% traffic, and 19.36% civil which varied from the average rural distribution of 19.33% criminal, 60.09% traffic, and 20.58% civil. The Thirtieth District's average caseload per general district judge of 12,745 new cases and 17,861 hearings was lower in new cases and higher in hearings than the rural mean of 14,191 new cases and 15,949 hearings.

The 1978 juvenile and domestic relations caseload was 2,540 new cases, 5,552 hearings, and 2,616 dispositions. The number of new cases was 8.24% or 228 less than 1977 with the number of hearings undergoing little change. A sharp decline of 34.64% in adult cases more than cancelled out a 12.61% increase in juvenile cases. Juvenile hearings also increased by 14.38% but adult hearings dropped 14.85% to result in an increase in total hearings of 27. The number of hearings per case increased from 2.00 in 1977 to 2.19 which was higher than the 1978 state average of 1.93.

The distribution of new cases for 1978 was 68.58% juvenile and 31.42% adult. The rise in juvenile cases coupled with the adult decrease changed the composition significantly from 1977's 55.89% juvenile and 44.11% adult. The 1978 district values were also more in line with the state percentages of 71.97% juvenile and 28.03% adult. In a caseload per judge comparison with the eighteen other rural districts, the Thirtieth District ranked eleventh in new cases and fifth in hearings.

THIRTY-FIRST JUDICIAL DISTRICT

Prince William County and the cities of Manassas and Manassas Park are designated as the Thirty-First Judicial District. Formed on July 1, 1977, the Thirty-First is authorized two each general district and juvenile and domestic relations judges. Currently, Prince William is served by two full-time general district judges, William R. Murphy and Frank A. Hoss, Jr. Judge Hoss replaced W. W. May who retired January 31, 1978. The juvenile and domestic relations judges in 1978 were Raymond O. Kellam and Herman Whisenant, Jr. The two general district judges each averaged 24.5 substitute days and the J&DR judges 30 days each.

The population of the district was estimated by the Tayloe Murphy Institute at 153,800 for 1977. The population per general district judge of 76,900 ranked third among the thirty-two districts and was considerable above the state average of 54,104. The juvenile population of the Thirty-First was 62,000. With two J&DR judges, the per judge average of 31,000 was above the state mean of 25,507 and ranked the district sixth in the state on this measure.

The 1978 caseload of 39,129 new cases, 46,818 hearings, and 35,228 dispositions showed a 9.83% increase in new cases and a 7.80% increase in hearings over 1977. Of the 3,502 more cases, 2,004 were traffic, 888 were civil, and 610 were criminal. The sharpest percentage increase was in the civil caseload which was 23.48% higher in new cases and 21.65% higher in hearings. Criminal cases rose 13.68% while criminal hearings jumped by 18.66% or 1,379. Traffic percentage increases were more modest, 7.32% more cases and 2.06% more hearings.

The composition of the 1978 new caseload was 12.95% criminal, 75.11% traffic, and 11.94% civil. Prince William had the sixth highest traffic caseload in 1978 among all Virginia localities, and therefore its percentage of traffic cases was considerably higher than the state's 56.60%. Correspondingly, the district's criminal and civil percentages were lower than the state's 17.90% and 25.50%, respectively. The caseload per judge of 19,565 new cases and 23,409 hearings was similar to the urban mean of 19,486 cases and 23,692 hearings, ranking the Thirty-First District sixth in new cases and seventh in hearings among the fourteen urban districts.

In 1978, the district's juvenile judges handled 7,591 new cases with 16,965 hearings. Small percentage declines of 6.18% in adult cases and 4.68% in hearings were offset by sharp increases in the juvenile category. A 22.25% gain of 1,169 new juvenile cases, accompanied by a 20.65% rise in hearings of 3,556 resulted in a 1978 total caseload which increased considerably over 1977, up 16.8% in new cases and 25.29% in hearings.

The district's 2.23 hearings per case was also higher than the state average of 1.93. Prince William's 1978 J&DR caseload was the sixth highest among Virginia localities, and the district ranked fourth in new cases (3,796) and third in hearings (8,483) per judge among the fourteen urban districts. The 1978 distribution of J&DR cases was 84.60% juvenile and 15.40% adult. The Thirty-First had a significantly higher percentage of juvenile cases than did the state (71.97%) and a correspondingly lower adult percentage than the state's 28.03%.

JUDICIAL DISTRICT IIA

District 2A on the Virginia Eastern Shore consists of the counties of Accomack and Northampton. Presently, the district is authorized one full-time judge to handle both general and juvenile and domestic relations cases. Judge Wescott B. Northam was appointed by the 1979 General Assembly to replace George Willis, III, who had served the district as a full-time judge since July 1, 1978. Previously, the Accomack and Northampton combined caseload was handled by the then part-time Judge Willis and Ben T. Gunter, Jr. Judge Gunter retired September 30, 1978. Since the district's single judge handles both types of cases, he is equivalent to .8 of a full-time general district judge and .2 of a full-time J&DR judge.

The Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the 1977 total population of the two counties as 47,100 which was equal to 58,875 per F.T.E. judge. This figure was above the state average of 54,104. The juvenile population of 13,100 with the equivalent of a .2 J&DR judgeship equaled 65,500 persons per full-time J&DR judge, ranking the district highest in this comparison.

In 1978 the general district courts reported 10,854 new cases, 9,727 hearings, and 10,755 dispositions. This represented a 15.89% increase over the 9,366 new cases reported in 1977. Of the 1,488 additional cases, 1,439 were new traffic cases. The district's criminal caseload increased by 6.88% while the number of civil cases fell by 3.96%. Thus the growth of new caseload in 1978 was primarily the result of a 22.67% increase in the traffic category. Total hearings declined 2.54%. The increase in criminal caseload was accompanied by a similar increase in the number of criminal hearings (6.57%) while civil hearings fell 2.36% to correspond with the reduced number of civil cases. The traffic infraction law allowing prepayment of minor violations kept the number of traffic hearings from rising in conjunction with the sharp increase in new traffic cases; traffic hearings actually declined 5.58%.

The composition of the district's 1978 caseload was 15.31% criminal, 71.73% traffic, and 12.96% civil. Given the large proportion of traffic cases, this distribution varied considerably from the state's percentages of 17.90% criminal, 56.60% traffic, and 25.50% civil. The caseload per F.T.E. general district judge in 1978 was 13,568 new cases and 12,159 hearings which compared to a rural mean of 14,191 new cases and 15,949 hearings.

The 1978 J&DR caseload was 564 new cases, 1,057 hearings, and 570 dispositions. These figures represented a twenty percent increase in both new cases and hearings over 1977. The juvenile caseload rose 18.79% while hearings increased almost thirty percent. Adult new cases were up by 23.23% while adult hearings did not rise as sharply, increasing by a modest 2.47%. The composition of the district's J&DR caseload was 66.13% juvenile and 33.87% adult which compared to the state's 71.97% juvenile and 28.03% adult. The caseload per F.T.E. judge was 2,820 new cases and 5,285 hearings which was more than the rural average of 2,589 cases and 4,819 hearings.

MAGISTRATE SYSTEM

HISTORY OF THE OFFICE[1]

Similar to other aspects of the law, the office of Magistrate reflects many centuries of development. The current Virginia magistrate is quite different from his English ancestor and even more so from his colonial forerunner. There are still passages in today's law which can best be understood by reference to the history of the office.

By the twelfth century in England the idea of a national "King's peace" seemed to become well established. The Crown extended its protection from the church and certain royal offices to all subjects. During 1195, the king's justician proclaimed that certain knights were to assist in maintaining the "King's peace". The knights were given the task of summoning before them all men over fifteen years of age in their district. They required these men to swear that they would not be criminals and that they would pursue, according to the ancient hue and cry, all offenders against the king's peace. Offenders would be delivered to the knight. The knight would then surrender the prisoners to the sheriff for safekeeping until trial. The knights were the origin of the keepers or conservators of the peace, who in turn are the ancestors of the justice of peace and magistrates.

During the beginning of the thirteenth century, first "custodians" and then conservators of the peace were appointed. Because of the lawlessness and social disorder brought about by the Black Death, which killed off much of the laboring population, the duties of the conservators were constantly expanded. This was at the start of Edward III's reign in 1326. Because of the distrust of the powers of the sheriff, the justice began to assume more of his duties. Edward III became king when he was only 14 years of age. Fearing an outbreak of lawlessness, Parliment immediately passed a statute declaring:

> For the better keeping and maintenance of the peace, the king will, that in every county good men and lawful which be (no maintainers of evil) shall be assigned to keep the peace.[2]

Prior to 1344, the conservator was given the power not only to receive prisoners but to try them. The need for a local office to maintain order and administer the kings law resulted in the basic Justice of the Peace Act of 1361. It was so ordered that there be assigned one lord and with him three or four of the most worthy who were to act as "justices" in administering the king's law and in arresting and punishing offenders.

Over the next 300 years the office was continually expanded by the addition of administrative, police, and judicial duties.

Some of the tasks of the office included supervising riots and rebellions, enforcing price and wage laws, and trying all sorts of criminal offenders. They even could levy the death penalty when sitting together in their quarter session courts.

The office reached its height early in the eighteenth century when it became an office for wealthy country gentlemen. The compensation was meager. However, good men could be found as it was considered a great honor and politically valuable to secure the office. Since that time the office has declined in importance. Many of the administrative duties have been taken over by local officials, while the police duties have been transferred to trained police forces. Today in England, the justice of the peace remains in the form of a magistrate who for the most part is untrained in the law; however, they still try petty criminal cases.

The development of the justice of the peace in Virginia was very similar to that in England. There was a gradual development of the office, an extension of duties, and then a decline. The need for control and social order in the struggling colonial government lent itself quickly to the use of the justice of the peace office. In 1623 one of the first General Asemblies enacted a law requiring the commanders of the places (plantations) to hold monthly courts in Charles City and Elizabeth City. The commander could try petty cases of less than one hundred pounds of tobacco. Later judges, called "commissioners", were appointed and the name of the courts were changed to County Courts. In 1661, these commissioners were formally called Justices of the Peace.

These early justices of the peace took the same oath as that of a justice in England and were given the same duties, except they could not sentence an offender to loss of life or limb. Only the governor and his council in Jamestown could impose this sort of sentence. This power was later given to the general court located in Jamestown and in 1818 passed on to the circuit court. The colonial justices of the peace were appointed by the governor and his council. The early duties involved trials of criminal cases, supervision of building warehouses and courthouses, licensing ferries, the regulation of the medical and legal professions, and prices charged by innkeepers. In many respects the justice of the peace was the local governing authority.

The office became elective in 1851 and remained so until January 1, 1974. The justice's of the peace powers began to decline in 1851 when the circuit court was reorganized and many of the justices' powers were taken over by the higher court and other local officials. The justices of the peace continued to try petty criminal offenses until 1934 when this power was removed. There also was a short time during reconstruction when the county court was presided over by a paid county judge and the magistrate was made a township official. The trial jurisdiction was transferred to the trial justice, a forerunner of the present district court judge.

In comparison, while the justice in England had extensive criminal jurisdiction, the justice in Virginia never had such power. More important, since 1934 the Virginia justice of the peace, now magistrate, no longer has the power to act as a judge. He has no power to "try" a case.

With the passage of the Trial Act of 1934, the Virginia justice of the peace became primarily a committing and issuing official with limited civil and criminal jurisdiction. Effective January 1, 1974, the General Assembly of Virginia abolished the office of Justice of the Peace and replaced it with the office of Magistrate, which is similar to its predecessor in many respects.

FUNCTIONS OF THE OFFICE OF THE MAGISTRATE

The principal function of the magistrates in the Commonwealth is to provide an independent, unbiased review of police officers, sheriffs, deputies, and citizens' charges or complaints. In addition, the magistrate must determine if there is probable cause to believe that, first, a violation of the law occurred and, second, the individual suspected committed the unlawful act. In the accomplishment of this function magistrates are given the responsibility to issue arrest warrants, summonses, and search warrants.

Another important function of the magistrate is the setting of bail and determining whether or not a secured or unsecured bond should be written. As a part of the arrest and bail process, the magistrate is also given the responsibility to issue committal and release orders. Further, many magistrates in the state currently issue civil warrants. As a result of the enactment of the Traffic Infraction Law, most magistrates' offices now accept prepayment for minor traffic violations.

Another important function of the magistrate is to provide the public with information pertinent to the office and to extend assistance whenever possible. Often at night, on weekends, or holidays the magistrates handle problems which otherwise would have to be taken before a judge. The most important and unique aspect of the magistrate, as a judicial officer, is to provide an independent review and therefore serve as a buffer between the police and the public.

MAGISTRATE SYSTEM

At the close of 1978 there were four hundred and nine authorized magistrate positions within the Magistrate System. This was one position less than existed in 1977. Two hundred and forty-one of these positions, 58.9%, were considered full time. These positions are classified as Magistrate IV or above. Of the full-time magistrates, 100 were classified Magistrate IV, 23 were Magistrate V, 88 were Magistrate VI, 2 were Administrative Magistrate, and the remaining 28 were Chief Magistrates. The remaining one hundred and sixty-eight positions are considered part time. These positions are almost evenly divided among the first three classifications.

During 1978 the state magistrates reported being available or "on call" 1,425,917 hours. This reflects over a five percent decline from that of 1977 which is indicative of better scheduling of personnel by chief magistrates. The magistrates utilized 515,450 activity hours providing magistrate services to the public. The activity hours reflect the actual time used in handling transactions, answering questions, issuing processes, and other required activities. The total number of activity hours reflects less than a one percent gain over the 1977 level. Since many of the magistrates work "on call" or on an availability basis, these magistrates report the number of miles driven to and from the magistrate office above the first trip per day. Chief magistrates are assigned to each district and must travel around these districts in supervising and training their assigned magistrates. This mileage is also reported. During 1978, the magistrates reported traveling 744,121 miles in the performance of their duties. This was twenty-five percent above the mileage reported in 1977; however, part of the increase can be attributed to better reporting by the magistrates.

The magistrates reported the demand for their services during 1978 in terms of the number of incoming phone calls, 467,363, the number of in-person inquiries, 167,564, and the number of transactions or requests for processes, 963,224. The combined total of these, 1,598,151, represented the number of times magistrates had to respond to the public with magistrate services. The year 1978 was the first year magistrates were required to report incoming phone calls and in-person inquiries. The number of transactions, 963,224, represented an increase of 1.2% above the level in 1977.

The reported transactions and processes issued are arrest warrants, bonds, summonses, search warrants, civil warrants, subpoena, committals, releases, traffic infractions, and class four misdemeanors. During 1978 the number of processes issued reached 900,990. This total was over four percent higher than that of 1977. Table B summarizes the total processes issued while Table C gives a summary of the processes by district.

There were a total of 356,570 transactions requesting arrest warrants which resulted in the issuance of 278,859 arrest warrants and 35,410 summonses. These figures mean that statewide approximately 88% of the warrants requested were issued. Of the warrants issued 12.95% were for felonies while 87.05% were for misdemeanors. The number of felony warrants, 36,118, was 8.76% above the level in 1977. The number of misdemeanor warrants, 242,741, was down four and a half percent. The number of summonses, 35,410, is consistent with the 1977 level. Arrest warrants made up 30.95% of all processes issued.

Magistrates reported a total of 290,795 bond transactions during the year. Of this total 178,920 bonds were processed. During 1978 magistrates kept data concerning bonds according to type: felony or misdemeanor, and as to whether it was secured or unsecured. Of the total bonds processed 19,710 were for felonies and 159,210 involved misdemeanors. Thus the 11% felony and 89% misdemeanors are very consistent with the percentages of arrest warrants issued. There was a total of 74,241 unsecured bonds of 41.49% of the total. The secured bonds made up the remaining 104,679 or 58.51%. Of all the felony bonds issued thirty percent of the defendants were released without security. The misdemeanor defendants released without security was forty-three percent. It should be noted that while the total number of bonds processed, 178,920, was 14.22% less than that of 1977 this was offset by increases in the number of prepaid traffic infractions and prepaid class four misdemeanors. Overall bonds made up 19.86% of all magistrate processes. Combined with arrest warrants these two processes contributed 50.8% of all processes issued.

The magistrates issued a total of 3,572 search warrants during 1978. This value is up significantly, 56.19%, above the 1977 level of 2,287. Committal and release orders made up a significant percentage of the magistrate's overall workload. During 1978 the magistrates reported the issuance of 102,207 committals and 87,473 release orders. The combined total of committal and release orders was fourteen percent above the 1977 level.

The year 1978 was the first year magistrates were required to keep data on the numbers of persons subpoenaed for court appearance. During the year the magistrates reported the issuance of 27,285 subpoenas. With the traffic infraction law legislation of 1977 magistrates were able to accept prepayments starting July 1, 1977. During 1978, the first full year magistrates were able to accept prepayments, they processed 23,981 traffic infractions. This value is over two and a half times the 9,112 traffic infractions taken during the last half of 1977.

In addition magistrates were able to accept prepayments for class four misdemeanors during the year. They reported accepting 8,683 of these prepayments. In both the traffic infraction and class four misdemeanor prepayments the defendant pleads guilty, waives his right to a hearing, and prepays based on a set fine schedule. If the defendant wants to change his plea he must notify the court on or before his scheduled court appearance.

Civil warrants are issued by magistrates in many districts, however, in many parts of the state these warrants are issued only in the clerk's office. In those areas where magistrates do issue civil warrants the issuance of civil warrants constitutes a significant part of the magistrates' workload. During 1978 the magistrates reported the issuance of 154,596 civil warrants. This total was very consistent with that of 1977 and reflected less than a one percent increase.

Contained on the following pages are charts and tables relating to the number of authorized magistrates, expenditures, and processes issued for 1978. Table A provides a detailed comparison of the number of personnel, expenditures, population, number of square miles, and number of processes issued. Table B provides a summary of the magistrate activity listing the hours worked, miles driven, transactions and types of processed issued. Table D is a detailed listing providing information by district, locality, and magistrate.

It is important to understand that magistrates work as either "shift" or "availability" magistrates. The large urban areas generally utilize full-time magistrates who work on a shift basis to maintain an office twenty-four hours a day. In contrast, in the rural areas, the majority of the magistrates work on an availability basis and are contacted as needed. In some counties availability magistrates serve a fixed schedule during the day and serve on an "on call" basis at night.

FINANCIAL ANALYSIS

Franklin County Courthouse
Rocky Mount, Virginia

AUTOMATED BUDGET TRACKING SYSTEM

July 1978 began a new biennial budget cycle for the Commonwealth of Virginia. This budget marks the first time since the 1973 reorganization of the court system that all departments of the Judicial Branch will be on a fixed dollar budget. Previously, the district courts and Committee on District Courts were carried as sum-sufficient. Preparation for the conversion from sum-sufficient to fixed budget began in early 1975 with development of the Automated Budget Tracking System (ABTS). At that time, ABTS provided information necessary for the preparation of the 1976-78 budget, and henceforth has tracked expenditures by court against that same budget. With the experience of one complete budget cycle, the Office of the Executive Secretary submitted all fixed budgets for 1978. The 1980-82 biennial budget will follow a similar pattern.

The purpose of the ABTS is to lend automated assistance in the analysis of all Commonwealth expenditures versus the fiscal year budget, and to track all district court revenues to both the Commonwealth and the localities. "Commonwealth expenditures" includes monies expended by the State originating from payments made by certain localities and from federal grants awarded to Virginia. All budget, expenditure, and revenue records are maintained by the Budget Tracking System at the individual court level, which is considerably more detail than required or provided by the current accounting system. It is interesting to note that under the programmatic budget, another first for the 1978-80 biennial budget, individual courts will be the required accounting level for all expenditures and revenues. Thus, the experience gained in 1976 and 1977 under ABTS eased the transition from line-item to program budgeting and accounting.

The Revenue Function

All revenues such as fines, court costs, special program fees, etc. collected by the Virginia district courts are reported monthly by each clerk to the Office of the Executive Secretary. These reports denote which of the monies ultimately are an income to the Commonwealth and which are retained locally. ABTS accumulates these reports for each court, and can provide for any given time period a statement by court of Commonwealth and local revenues. In FY77, the Virginia district courts collected $22,838,589 which remained with the Commonwealth and distributed $15,006,589 to Virginia localities. The statement of Commonwealth revenues also has the capability of presenting the court's expenditures for the same period. For the fiscal year 77-78, the Commonwealth spent $17,931,125 on the District Court System, which is a .79 ratio of expenditures to revenues.

Exhibits of the Monthly Report to the Supreme Court of Disbursement of Revenue form, the Commonwealth and Local Revenues Summary reports follow in Exhibits 14-17, respectively.

The Expenditures Function

The expenditure function maintains records for each court or other accountable unit in the Judicial branch (such as the Judicial Council) of all expense and payroll vouchers processed by the Office of the Executive Secretary. Expense vouchers include invoices for goods or services, travel vouchers, and transferral of funds among accounts. Payroll vouchers include payroll warrants for permanently employed judges, clerks, and magistrates, substitute and recalled-retired judges vouchers, and wage employees vouchers. The expenditure records are then analyzed in conjunction with the budget to track and actual against planned expenditures.

From July 1977 to June 1978, expenditure transactions were processed against the courts for a total of $20,394,140. $16,244,114 of the total, or 73%, was spent for personal services, such as salaries and wages, and the balance on supplies, equipment, travel, etc.

In Fiscal Year 1979, the Office of the Executive Secretary took over processing certain expenditures, such as court appointed attorney fee claims, which have heretofore been processed by the Department of Accounts. It is estimated that this additional workload will increase the number of expenditure transactions in ABTS by 181 percent.

Two reports on expenditures of general interest are presented as Exhibit 17, Commonwealth Expenditures Summary, and Exhibit 18, Financial Analysis Report.

The Budget Function

The Office of the Executive Secretary prepared mailings to the chief judges and magistrate supervising authorities of each district. They were asked to project any additional positions needed as well as any contemplated upgrading of existing positions and to submit these with approximate effective dates. All budgetary requests returned to the Executive Secretary's Office were reviewed from both a quantitative and qualitative stance. The Committee on District Courts considered information received from the courts and magistrates concerning their needs, projected caseloads, anticipated population or industrial growth in various areas in the state, and subjective knowledge of each area in making its budgetary decisions. Financial impact statements were prepared comparing the costs associated with continuing status quo as of April 30, 1979, with the costs associated with the requested changes. Included in these computations were the results of merit increases, an overall adjustment to the salary scale from the fiscal year ending June 30, 1979, and the additional cost of merit increases resulting from possible salary scale adjustments in the 1980-1982 biennium.

Part-time judges were also contacted to make their salary requests known for the coming biennium. A series of mathematical formulas were developed which gave weight to caseload of the court served, the number of years as a judge, and the number of days per week spent in court. These formulas and the legislative requirements for judicial salaries were then applied to each judge's individual salary situation in making budgetary decisions.

Additionally, the Committee considered court requests for wage employees for the 1980-1982 biennium to assist the court during absences. The hours authorized for substitute employees during the absences of the permanent staff were inversely proportional to the number of personnel in each court with the largest offices receiving no substitute hours. The rates to be paid to wage employees were limited by the classifications approved.

For planning purposes, the anticipated expenditures for substitute judges were based on forecasts made from past experience.

In the second phase of the budgeting process, the Office of the Executive Secretary surveyed each court concerning its anticipated needs for operating expenses. Since the magistrates obtain supplies through the clerks' offices, one document reported the projected requisitions for the magistrates and the courts. The major categories were travel expenses, postage, and office supplies. Financial impact statements were developed for each court and magisterial subdivision within a district, each district, and for the state as a whole.

The Fiscal Office prepared the budget document with a narrative justification for the amounts requested. These and a computerized listing of all employees and vacancies for each classification as of April 30, 1979, new positions projected for the remainder of the current biennium, new positions requested for the coming biennium, and the costs associated with each were forwarded to the Division of the Budget for presentation to the General Assembly at its 1980 session.

Upon passage of the 1980-82 budget appropriations by the General Assembly, differences in monies requested and those received will be noted, and changes reflected accordingly. The net result of this procedure will establish a biennial budget for each court or other accountable unit in the Judicial Branch. In July 1980, each court will be notified of its fiscal year budget and then monthly thereafter will be appraised of the status of their budget by means of the Financial Analysis Report (Exhibit 18).

An enhancement to the Financial Analysis Report planned for 1979 is to include encumbered funds, as well as expended funds, reflected against the budget. In this way, any obligated funds will also be deducted from the budgeted sum, giving a truer picture of balance remaining.

COMMONWEALTH EXPENDITURES SUMMARY
JULY, 1977-JUNE, 1978

The Commonwealth Expenditures Summary contains two sections:

—Magistrate Expenditures
—District Court Expenditures

Magistrate expenditures include the salaries for the Commonwealth Magistrates and expenses incurred for unemployment compensation for the Magistrate System. Expenses of the Special Magistrates in Districts 13, 17, 18, and 19, which are paid by the localities served, are not reflected. Expenses of maintaining the offices of the Commonwealth Magistrates, such as stationery, etc., are reported as part of the expenses of the General District Court of the corresponding locality.

District court expenditures include the salaries and expenses of the District Court judges and clerks' offices, and the expenses of the Commonwealth Magistrates. Included under the "Salaries" heading are the following:

- Salaries of full-time judges;
- Salaries and any local supplements of salaries of part-time judges;
- Salaries and any local supplements of salaries of full-time clerical employees and regular part-time or temporary clerical employees;
- Service awards to certain court employees;
- Reimbursement by the respective localities for the local supplements paid to judges and clerks.

The "Wages" column contains the cost of wages paid to hourly employees of the courts and the per diem compensation of substitute judges.

The detailed expenditures reported in this Summary are only those expenditures paid through the Office of the Executive Secretary. In addition, the Department of Accounts handles payments for other court expenses, such as payments to court-appointed attorneys, fees for blood test analysis, medical examinations, etc. Also, certain localities make payments to the State Treasurer to off-set the costs to the Commonwealth of the 1973 reorganization of the courts.

Magistrates	$ 2,993,015.55
District Courts	14,938,110.15
Other Court Expenses	2,463,051.00
	$20,394,140.70

COMMONWEALTH REVENUE SUMMARY
JULY, 1977 - JUNE, 1978

The Commonwealth Revenue Summary reflects all monies collected by the District Courts that are paid to the Commonwealth. In addition, the expenditure paid by the state to support the District Courts in each locality is provided, and the relationship of this expenditure to the revenue is calculated.

The total Commonwealth Revenue for each court is listed, as well as a detail breakdown by revenue category. Miscellaneous revenues include confiscated money, liquidated damages, weighing fees, game replacement, blood tests, etc. The total expenditures include both district court and magistrate expenses (see Commonwealth Expenditures Summary). The "% EXP OF REV" column is calculated by dividing the total expenditure by the total revenue; i.e., any court whose expenditures exceed revenues will show a percentage of over 100.

Please note that for the purposes of this report, all dollar figures have been rounded to the nearest whole dollar amount. Therefore, due to rounding in some instances it may appear that figures are not totalled accurately.

STATE OF THE JUDICIARY REPORT

On August 30, 1979 the Supreme Court of Virgina commemorated its 200th anniversary by holding a special session giving recognition to the proud history of the court. The occasion was marked by many reflections on the distinguished justices who have served on the court, but equally as important was the recognition of the establishment of the court, which insured the separation of powers and the independence of the judiciary. In order for our government to operate effectively, the judiciary must be independent. With this independence, however, comes responsibility and accountability. This fifth annual State of the Judiciary Report is presented to review and to analyze the efforts of the judicial branch of government in discharging the responsibilities conferred upon it by the people.

During the past year, the caseloads at every level of our court system continued to increase. In 1979, 1,863 petitions were filed in the Supreme Court, as compared to 1,185 filed just ten years ago. On the circuit court level, 130,461 cases were commenced in 1979 as compared to 73,614 in 1969. Whereas in 1969 the average number of cases commenced per circuit judge was 767, in 1979 that figure had risen to 1,214. During this period, filings increased by 77.2 percent while judicial resources increased by only 12.4 percent.

In 1979, 1,699,919 general district court cases and 186,614 juvenile and domestic relations district court cases were filed. These figures represent an annual increase of 6.5 percent and 6.0 percent, respectively. The future will likely present even higher caseloads. Projections indicate that the number of circuit court cases will rise at a rate of 5.1 percent per year while the number of district court cases will increase by 5.8 percent annually.

BUDGET

The court system must receive sufficient financial support to permit it to perform effectively as a coordinate branch of government. The capacity of the court system to perform its functions is determined by the financial resources available. The judicial branch budget for the 1980-82 biennium is $102,671,950. The availability of these funds should insure that judicial branch personnel are compensated in an equitable manner and that the judicial branch can institute new programs and projects concerning the rapid changes in business technology and judicial administration. It should be noted that this new budget represents the first budget cycle in which the state will completely finance the courts. All grandfathering provisions of the 1973 court reorganization will end on July 1, 1980, and, with the exception of the circuit court clerks' offices and all court facilities and equipment, the court system will be a unified, state-financed system.

It is of interest to note that at the present time Virginia ranks seventh among the states in salaries of its circuit court judges and fifteenth in salaries for supreme court justices. I want to assure you that the court is doing all it can, within reason, to increase judicial salaries.

AREAS FOR CONCENTRATION

As I reported last year, the Judicial Council commissioned the National Center for State Courts to conduct a major study of our court system. The staff work on this study was presented to an ad hoc advisory committee of council members in mid 1979. Since that time, the ad hoc committee has reviewed the section dealing with the creation of an intermediate appellate court, one of the five major sections of the report, and has reported to the Council on that section. Based upon the study and an extensive review of the study findings, the Judicial Council presented a draft proposal for an intermediate appellate court to the bench and bar for review and comment and will make a recommendation concerning the intermediate appellate court after receiving comments from members of the bench and bar. I again reiterate my support for the creation of an intermediate appellate court. Since the workload of the Supreme Court continues to grow, the time necessary to complete the appellate process and to examine the complex issues of modern day appeals has lengthened greatly. If our appellate capacity is going to keep pace with the trial structure established in 1973, and if the length of the appellate process is to be shortened, an intermediate appellate court must be created. The facts support it, and justice to litigants demands it. Thirty-four states now have, or have provided for, an intermediate appellate court.

In conjunction with the creation of an intermediate appellate court, the staff of the Executive Secretary's Office will proceed with plans to conduct an appellate rules study. The purpose of this study will be to develop the specific practices and procedures to be utilized by such a court, should it be established. Furthermore, the study will review the existing rules for appellate practice in the Supreme Court in order to update these rules and to coordinate them with the rules of an intermediate court, if the court of appeals is established. Several judges and lawyers will serve as an advisory committee to the staff in conducting the appellate rules study.

While the ad hoc committee of the Judicial Council during 1979 confined its work to the study of the need for an intermediate appellate court, the National Center for State Courts has addressed many other areas of court reform. I shall list some of the National Center's recommendations, many of which are controversial and will be under discussion during the years ahead.

1. Circuit court clerks should be appointed rather than elected officials.
2. A statewide personnel system should be established for all circuit court personnel.
3. Circuit court clerks office personnel should be salaried state employees, and the fee system of compensation should be eliminated. All fees and commissions of circuit court clerks should be paid into the state treasury.
4. Circuit administrators should be established, where necessary, to assist each chief judge in discharging his duties and in coordinating the activities of the courts in each circuit.
5. All circuit court judges should have access to secretaries and law clerks funded by the state.
6. Each judge should have a law library allowance funded by the state.
7. A study regarding the use of court reporters and court recording technology should be conducted.
8. The Judicial Council should be reconstituted with a broader membership and should be the sole policy-making body for the judicial system. The functions of the Committee on District Courts should be merged into the Judicial Council.
9. The Judicial Council should work through a committee structure which parallels that of the judicial conference, and the chairmen of various conference committees should be members of the respective judicial council committees.
10. A judicial nominations commission should be created.
11. Each circuit should have a circuit judicial council, to be composed of the chief judges of the circuit, general district, and juvenile and domestic relations district courts. Each supreme court justice should be an ex-officio member of an equal number of circuit judicial councils throughout the state.
12. A study should be conducted to determine whether trial de novo remains a valid concept in Virginia.
13. District court substitute judges should not be allowed to practice law before the courts where they sit as judges.

14. Substitute judges should receive special training and should sit on only one side of the district court.

15. Magistrates should be organized as a division of the general district court.

17. Magistrates should perform their functions at a centralized office at each county seat.

18. Magistrates should receive required training and pass a certification examination in order to continue service as a magistrate.

19. The use of automation in the courts should be expanded to provide for better services and more accurate and reliable information.

The sensitive nature of these recommendations should not delay their consideration. Conference committees should attack the problems discovered by the evaluation study of the National Center for State Courts and find solutions which are viable, acceptable, and enduring. I encourage open debate of these issues in the years ahead in order that those recommendations determined to be sound can be adopted.

In conclusion, the court system of Virginia is sound; however, continued improvement is necessary. Within a dynamic and rapidly changing society, to remain constant is to regress. As society alters, the courts must be responsive and adapt to these changes. Such modification is a part of life and is intrinsic to any judicial system. It is our responsibility to guide these alterations in view of our experience so that change and continuity can go hand in hand. With this thought in mind, we look to the future as a challenge, and we rededicate ourselves to providing a court system worthy of the Virginia tradition.

SUPREME COURT OF VIRGINIA

On the occasion of the 200th Anniversary of the founding of the Supreme Court of Virginia, Lewis F. Powell, III, spoke for his father, Justice Powell, when he said:

> "In large part, the early political history of our country is history made and shaped by Virginians. Certainly this is true with respect to the development of our judicial system. Many of the doctrines that have given our system its distinctive character were forged by Virginians, including those on federal and state courts. And the Supreme Court of Virginia, then called the Court of Appeals, played an instrumental part in these developments."

The history of the Supreme Court of Virginia fills many volumes, but the following is a synopsis of important events.

The Supreme Court of Virginia commemorated its 200th Anniversary on August 30, 1979. The Court's illustrious history had its initial foundation in seventeenth century Jamestown. A judiciary was created in 1623 by the House of Burgesses consisting of monthly or county courts, composed of persons appointed by the Governor with the advice of his Council. The Governor's Council, with any five constituting a quorum, formed the appellate court. They heard appeals from the county courts and sat on the first day of March, June, September and December. The first appeals court was known as the Quarter Court.

By 1661, the number of terms was reduced to three and the Quarter Court became the General Court with original and appellate jurisdiction in both civil and criminal matters. Members of the General Court were appointed by the King on the basis of social standing, property and the proximity of their estates to the Williamsburg capital. By 1684, the General Court met only twice a year in April and October and continued to operate in this manner until the American Revolution.

After the Revolutionary War, the Virginia Court System was reorganized, and four superior courts were created. These were the Supreme Court of Appeals, the General Court, the High Court of Chancery and the Court of Admiralty. The Supreme Court of Appeals was composed of all of the judges of the other three courts sitting together, any five of whom constituted a quorum for transaction of business.

In May 1779, the legislature passed another act constituting the Court of Appeals, repealing for the most part the earlier act. Under this provision, Edmund Pendleton, George Wythe, John Blair, Benjamin Waller, Richard Cary and William R.W. Curle convened in Williamsburg on Monday, August 30, 1779, for the purpose of organizing the first Court of Appeals. Pendleton and Wythe were members of the High Court of Chancery. Judge Blair sat on the General Court. Waller, Cary and Curle sat on the Court of Admiralty. The judges were not issued new commissions as the legislature had determined that their commissions for seats in the lower courts were sufficient.

George Wythe and John Blair administered the prescribed oath of office to Edumund Pendleton, the President. Pendleton then administered the oath to the other five judges. The Clerk of Court, the Cryer and the Bailiff (Tipstaff) were also appointed.

Interrupted by the British invasion of Virginia at the end of the Revolution, the Court adjourned until December 16, 1779. On this date, the Court heard its first actual case involving claims to land under survey. The Court thereafter convened on the tenth day of April and met continuously for twenty-four secular days unless it was able to complete its business sooner.

It has been suggested that the first Virginia Court of Appeals served in many ways as a model for the United States Supreme Court. The Court of Appeals later was moved to Richmond and held its sessions in the old Henrico County Courthouse at the corner of 22nd and Main Streets. The court's jurisdiction was primarily appellate, and its members were elected by the legislature. Most judges were not trained in the law, and those who received legal training studied at the College of William and Mary under George Wythe.

Until 1788, the judges did not render written opinions or give reasons for their decisions. Pendleton felt that the policy of no written opinions preserved a semblance of unity for the court and lent more credence to its decisions. The cases decided by the first Court of Appeals at its August 1779 term through 1788 were reported by Daniel Call. Since the endeavor was undertaken as a private enterprise, the decisions were not published until 1833.

The first case in which there is a written opinion by the judges (Pendleton and Wythe) was that of Commonwealth v. Caton, et al, 4 Call, page 5, which was decided in November 1782. In this appeal Pendleton cautiously absolved the House of Delegates of any intention to violate the Constitution by single-handedly issuing a pardon. Wythe went further and in a concurring opinion he stated emphatically that "if the whole legislature . . . should attempt to overleap the bounds prescribed to them by the people, I, in administering the public justice of the country, will meet the united powers at my seat in this tribunal; and, pointing to the Constitution, will say to them 'here is the limit of your authority, and hither shall you go, and no further.' " All judges concurred in holding that the Court had power to declare any resolution or act of the legislature unconstitutional and void.

Under the Constitution of 1830, the number of judges was not established, but the legislature fixed it at five. By the reformed Constitution of 1851, the judges of all the courts were "elected by the people." Those on the Court of Appeals were elected for 12 years. That Constitution was never abolished as such but was destroyed as the result of the Civil War. Our Supreme Court Justices continue today to be elected for 12 year terms, but there has been no popular election of judges since the Civil War.

When the General Court was abolished by the Constitution of 1851, its appellate jurisdiction was transferred to the Court of Appeals which previously had had no criminal jurisdiction. This Court thus became and continues to be the supreme civil and criminal tribunal of Virginia. It can take cognizance of all cases, common law and chancery, civil and criminal, which are brought before it by appeal, writ of error or supersedes from the circuit courts throughout the state. It also has original jurisdiction in cases involving writs of habeas corpus, mandamus and prohibition.

In 1864 representatives from only a few counties, but claiming to represent the state, met in convention in Alexandria and adopted an amended Constitution which reduced the number of judges of the court of appeals to three. It provided for their election by the legislature upon nomination of the Governor but did not change their tenure.

The Constitution of 1870 restored the number of judges to five. In 1870 the court began electing one of its members President of the Court and began requiring that at least one member reside at the seat of government. The first court members elected under the Constitution of 1870 began their terms in January 1871.

The Constitution of 1870 reestablished election by joint vote of both houses of the legislature, the method which remains in effect today. This Constitution also required that annual sessions be held away from Richmond in the localities of Wytheville, Staunton and Winchester. This mandate from the days of horse and buggy travel continued until recently with sessions being held in Staunton as late as September 1970.

By constitutional amendment in 1928, the number of justices was increased to seven and the title of the presiding officer of the Court was changed from President to Chief Justice. Judge Robert R. Prentis, who had been the President of the Court since March 1925, became the first Chief Justice under the amendment. At the same time, the amendment significantly increased the power given the Supreme Court.

The current Supreme Court sits in Richmond. It consists of seven Justices. The Justice senior in service is the Chief Justice. The Court currently has original jurisdiction in cases of habeas corpus, mandamus, prohibition and additionally in matters of judicial censure, retirement or removal. Its appellate jurisdiction includes all constitutional cases and those cases involving the life and liberty of any person. The Court also hears appeals from judgments or findings of the State Corporation and the Industrial Commission.

The Supreme Court of Appeals which first met 200 years ago was distinguished in its membership. Edmund Pendleton, who served Virginia as a delegate to the First Continental Congress, was selected by the judges as its first President. George Wythe, the mentor of Jefferson and signer of the Declaration of Independence and John Blair, who later served on the U.S. Supreme Court, were also members of Virginia's first Supreme Court.

The record of service of the Supreme Court of Appeals is a proud one, and it has continued for the 200 years of its existence.

> "I pay tribute especially to this Court. I have known personally every member of your bench since the early 1930s, and until I became a federal judge, I followed your decisions with some care. The Supreme Court of Virginia has an unbroken record, extending now for two hundred years, of serving justice fairly and honorably."

YEAR IN SUMMARY

Petitions filed with the Supreme Court of Virginia in 1979 numbered 1,862. This figure is consistent with 1978's 1,846 petitions filed. In the years 1974 through 1977, the workload of the Court rose sharply. Petitions filed increased by 53.8% in that three year period. For 1977 through 1979, filings appear to have leveled off.

The Court acted upon 1,726 of those petitions filed, a decrease of 8.7% from the 1,891 acted upon in 1978.

Included with petitions acted upon were a total of 1,410 appeals. This represented a 12.96% decline from 1978's 1,620 appeals and is consistent with the 1,431 appeals acted upon in 1977. Of the 1,410 total appeals, 552 were civil, 797 were criminal, and 61 were habeas corpus. Consistent with the overall decrease in 1979, civil appeals were down 62 from 1978, criminal dropped 128, and habeas corpus fell by 20. Over the last ten years, however, civil appeals have increased by 114.0% while criminal appeals have also risen by 69.2%. The number of civil and criminal appeals acted upon from 1969 through 1979 are graphically represented in Chart II.

Original jurisdiction cases numbered 316 in 1979 increasing by 45 or 16.6% over the previous year's 271. Writs of habeas corpus accounted for most of the increase, up 33 from 1978 to reach 252 cases. Writs of mandamus increased by 13 while writs of prohibition decreased by 5, numbering only 2 in 1979.

In 1979, there were 56 petitions withdrawn before being acted upon, an increase of 19.2% from 1978. The 1979 figure is consistent with that of 1977's 58.

The Supreme Court had 640 petitions pending at the end of 1979, an increase in the pending workload of 9.8%. At the close of 1978, there were 583 petitions pending and in 1977, 612 petitions pending. Of the 640 pending from 1979, the Chief Justice and Justices had 137 (21.4%), the Chief Staff's Attorney's Office had 376

(58.8%), and the Clerk's Office accounted for 127 (19.8%). Of the 127 pending in the Clerk's Office, 76 were awaiting "brief in opposition," 23 were awaiting answer and 28 were in various stages of preparation.

Of the 640 petitions pending, only 550 were actually awaiting decision—the remainder consist of those files received during December and those decided cases which are being processed by the Clerk's Office.

Since the Court acted upon 1,726 petitions in 1979, it can be inferred that the 550 pending petitions would take approximately 3.8 months to complete and therefore a new petition would normally be acted upon in 114 days. The change in this figure from 1975 (88) to 1976 (92) to 1977 (110) to 1978 (86) to 1979 (114) reflects the increasing workload of the Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court sampled processing time in January 1977. The average time to answer a petition was 114 days for criminal cases and 151 days for civil cases. These averages compare with the 109-day average in 1973-74. The average time span from first filing to announcement of decision was 306 days for criminal cases and 310 days for civil cases. The Court allows 40 days for transcription and opening brief. The average time for the sample was 89 days. The time allowed for filing a petition is four months[1] and averages 121 days. If the time required for filing all briefs and the time required to act on the petition are excluded, the Court reaches its final decision on the average in 103 days for criminal cases and 70 days for civil cases. This compares favorably with the 133 days reported for all cases in 1973-74.

The Court granted 237 petitions in 1977, 254 in 1978, and 266 in 1979. Of the cases disposed of during the past year, 187 were by written opinions and 76 through orders. Of the cases decided by written opinions, 89 affirmed the judgment of the lower courts and 98 reversed in total or in part those decisions.

Many of the activities of the Court are enumerated in the tables that follow. Included are the detailed statistics for 1979.

CIRCUIT COURT SYSTEM

The I'Anson Commission made specific recommendations in 1971 regarding the Commonwealth's courts of record. The 1973 Virginia General Assembly reorganized and restructured the circuit court as the trial court of general jurisdiction in the Commonwealth. The circuit court has exclusive original criminal jurisdiction in all cases involving a possible sentence to the State Penitentiary. Its exclusive jurisdiction extends to all civil controversies where the claim exceeds $5,000. It exercises concurrent civil jurisdiction with the district court when the claim is between $1,000 and $5,000. Circuit courts have jurisdiction of proceedings by quo warranto and to issue writs of mandamus, prohibition, and certiorari to all tribunals. They also issue writs of mandamus in all matters or proceedings arising from or pertaining to the actions of the board of supervisors or other governing body of any county. The appellate jurisdiction extends to all cases, civil and criminal, in which appeal may, as provided by law, be taken from the judgment of any inferior tribunal.

The Judicial Council revised and enlarged the circuit courts as part of the reorganization. The General Assembly established thirty-one judicial circuits. The Thirteenth Judicial Circuit was subdivided into two divisions by statute. The number of judges authorized per circuit was set by statute. Legislation provided for 108 circuit court judges in 1979. The number of judges per circuit ranged from a minimum of two in twelve circuits to a maximum of nine in the Fourth (Norfolk City) and Nineteenth (Fairfax) Circuits. In each circuit, a chief judge is selected by peer vote for a two-year term. The chief judge of a circuit is authorized to assign the work of the circuit among judges, and, in so doing, may consider the nature and categories of cases to be assigned.

The Judicial Council is charged with the obligation to study the need for additional circuit court judges. In 1975 the Judicial Council altered its procedures for determining the need for additional circuit court judges and for changes in circuit lines. Prior to this change, cases commenced and population were the primary guidelines. Recognizing the inadequacies of total reliance on these criteria, the Council adopted a dual analysis mechanism.

As the administrative office for the judicial system, the Office of the Executive Secretary was advised that in addition to providing a thorough statistical evaluation of the judicial workload, visits should be conducted to each circuit requesting an additional judge. Court dockets should be reviewed and judges, clerks, commonwealth attorneys, members of the bar, and other such individuals having a knowledge of the court system in that circuit should be interviewed. The Council concluded that additional judges should be authorized in a circuit whenever all procedures short of adding a judge have been exhausted; whenever the administrative efficiency of the court was at a high level; and whenever the existing judges were working to maximum capacity and yet were still unable to handle the caseload in the expeditious fashion desired by the bar and general public. The only way to assure the sound, effective, and speedy administration of justice was to insure that sufficient judicial resources were available.

During 1978 the Council received two requests for additional circuit court judgeships. One request was made by the Nineteenth Judicial Circuit, while the other was submitted by the Thirty-First Judicial Circuit. The Judicial Council received a comprehensive report of the workload of the judges in the Nineteenth Circuit, both as to statistical data and as to the more subjective personal views of the individuals involved. Based upon the Council's recommendation, the General Assembly approved the creation of an additional circuit court judgeship in the Nineteenth Judicial Circuit effective July 1, 1979. F. Bruce Bach transferred from the General District Court to fill the vacancy.

After further study during 1979, the Council recommended an additional judgeship for the Thirty-First Circuit. Additional judgeships were also requested by the Second and Ninth Judicial Circuits. Following the recommendations of the Judicial Council, the 1980 General Assembly approved the creation of additional judgeships for the Second, Ninth, and Thirty-First Circuits to become effective July 1, 1980. Bernard G. Barrow, Gordon D. Holloway, and H. Selwyn Smith, Jr., were elected to fill the new positions in the Second, Ninth, and Thirty-First Circuits, respectively.

YEAR IN SUMMARY

Caseload Analysis

In 1979, Virginia's circuit courts commenced 130,461 new cases. This figure represents a 4.3% increase over the 1978 commenced caseload of 125,058. Between 1977 and 1978, the caseload grew 6.6% and from 1976 to 1977 the increase was 9.9%. From 1970 to 1979, the caseload of the circuit courts increased approximately 64%.

Since the 1979 General Assembly authorized an additional judge for the Nineteenth Circuit, the total number of circuit judges serving in the state was 108. Judge Bach's appointment was not effective until July 1, therefore the full-time equivalent number of judges for 1979 was actually 107.5. This number was used to compute all caseload per judge figures in the following text, tables, and charts.

On the average, circuit judges commenced 1,214 cases in 1979. This was 3.9% or 45 more than the 1978 figure of 1,169. This was the eleventh straight annual increase in the caseload of the circuit judges. The urban mean was 1,235 while the rural average was 1,185.

Terminations in 1979 numbered 122,100, an increase of 6.0%. The judges concluded an average of 1,136 or 59 more than 1978's 1,077. A comparison of cases commenced and cases concluded is graphically represented by Chart I.

The 1979 commenced caseload was composed of 57.7% civil cases and 42% criminal. This composition has remained unchanged since 1977. In 1975 and 1976, there was a gradual shift of civil to criminal cases which appears to have stabilized in the past three years. The 1979 commenced caseload can be further broken down into 22.4% law, 35.3% equity, 24.5% felony, 17.5% misdemeanor, and 0.3% habeas corpus/post conviction cases. The distribution of civil cases was essentially unchanged from that of 1978 while within the 1979 criminal caseload there was a slightly higher percentage of felony cases with a corresponding decrease in misdemeanors when compared with 1978's 23.5% felony and 18.6% misdemeanor.

Law cases commenced in 1979 were 1,297 or 4.6% more than in 1978. Equity cases showed a similar increase of 4.7% from 44,025 in 1978 to 46,094 cases in 1979. Of this number 33,252 were divorce cases. Divorces per 100 persons were at the rate of .65.

The number of misdemeanor cases declined by 428 or 1.8% in 1979, 22,839 compared with 1978's 23,267. Felonies, however, increased by 8.7% or an additional 2,542 above 1978's 29,354 felony cases. This increase in felony cases accounted for 47% of the overall increase of 5,403 in the total number of cases. With 31,896 felonies commenced in 1979, felonies per hundred persons rose from .47 in 1976 to .55 in 1977, to .57 in 1978, and .62 in 1979.

The average population per judge in 1979 was 47,666 based on a total population of 5,147,900 and 108 judges. In 1970, this figure was 46,984; thus with the addition of four judgeships, the population per judge has remained fairly stable. In 1960, there were 1.37 commenced cases per every one hundred persons in Virginia. By 1970, this ratio had increased to 1.71. In 1978 this figure was 2.44 and in 1979 increased to 2.53 commenced cases per hundred persons. Every year since 1966 has demonstrated an increase in the relative frequency of court involvement by Virginia's citizens.

Pending Caseload

Despite the increase in concluded cases for the circuit courts during the past year, the number of concluded cases was less than the number of new cases. This has been the trend since 1966, and therefore, the number of pending cases has constantly increased. The pending caseload at the close of 1979 was 7.3% greater than at the end of 1978. The total pending cases numbered 123,249. Chart II shows the pending caseload from 1969 through 1979. The relative size of the 1979 pending caseload was more than the previous year. Relative pending caseload is found by dividing the absolute pending caseload at the end of the year by the number of cases disposed of during the year, or 1.01 for 1979. This ratio was .96 in 1978, .91 in 1977, .92 in 1976, .93 in 1975, and .96 in 1974.

The pending caseload may appear to be large. However, it does not necessarily indicate a burden upon court time, nor does it reveal delay in case processing. In order to better understand the pending caseload, it is necessary to realize that whether out of preference or strategy, some cases simply "mature" on the docket until a more favorable time. These cases may not represent an immediate demand of judicial resources but merely a deferred normal expenditure of bench time. It should be remembered that courts must have pending caseloads. The court's inventory of cases is a natural level of pending cases. Cases awaiting the next term of court, divorces which require a time delay, involved civil cases, and criminal cases involving fugitives, all represent pending cases through no fault of the court. Many factors must therefore be considered in any analysis of pending caseload.

Jury Trials

In 1979, the circuit courts reported 2,884 jury trials involving criminal cases and 12,627 jury trials involving law actions. A total of 4,543 jury trials for 1979 was 3.7% more than the 4,382 in 1978. Criminal jury trials increased by 165 to 2,884 while civil jury trials declined by 103. Jury trials for misdemeanors actually decreased by 16; therefore, the criminal increase was the result of a rise in felony jury trials from 2,001 in 1978 to 2,182 in 1979. This corresponds to the increase in felony commenced cases for 1979.

The ratio of jury trials to concluded cases establishes the frequency of cases involving jury trials. In 1976 these ratios were 8.6 jury trials per 100 law cases concluded, 8.1 jury trials per 100 felony cases concluded, and 3.8 jury trials per 100 misdemeanor cases concluded. These figures shifted to 8.3 for law, 6.7 for felony, and 3.7 for misdemeanor cases in 1977 and to 6.8, 7.2, and 3.2, respectively, in 1978.

In 1979, there was a further shift to less frequent jury trials in law and felony cases with the frequency in misdemeanor cases remaining unchanged. The 1979 figures were 6.3 for law, 7.0 for felony, and 3.2 for misdemeanor cases.

Corresponding to the increase in felony jury trials, the number of days Virginia judges spent hearing those trials also increased from 1,849 days in 1978 to 2,084 in 1979. Misdemeanor jury trials took 463 days (less than 1978's 565) and law jury proceedings occupied 2,340 days (again, less than 1978's 2,453 days).

Appeals

Appeals from the general district court in 1979 amounted to 18,645 new criminal cases. In addition, there were 2,350 appeals from the juvenile and domestic relations courts. In civil actions, 2,538 were appeals from the lower court. Thus a total of 23,533 new cases or 18.0% of the total commenced caseload of 130,461 resulted from cases appealed from the lower courts. This percentage was essentially unchanged from the 1978 figure of 18.7%.

A PROFILE OF THE CIRCUITS

The judicial circuits of Virginia represent different geographic and varying demographic areas. Many demographic factors such as population density, income level, racial composition, and industrialization contribute to the number, type, and complexity of cases. While some circuits are mostly urban in nature, other circuits are basically rural. In an urban circuit, the judge sits in only one court, while in a rural circuit the judge usually sits in two or more courts and must therefore travel.

While absolute caseload figures give some degree of comparison for understanding court burdens, they are not ideal. By examining circuits of similar caseload composition, one can improve the comparison. The thirty-one circuits have been divided into two groups: one-half with the highest percentage of new civil cases and the other half with the highest percentage of new criminal cases. After performing this separation of the circuits, the following observations hold true: the circuits with the highest percentage of civil cases have a lower commenced caseload per judge, a lower concluded caseload per judge, and a higher pending caseload per judge than the second group of circuits. The second group of circuits has a higher percentage of criminal cases and a higher concluded and lower pending caseload. Criminal cases proceed through the judicial system faster than civil cases, and therefore criminal cases would contribute to more concluded cases and leave fewer pending cases.

Further, if one compares the fourteen urban circuits with the seventeen rural circuits, it appears the urban circuit judges average a higher commenced, concluded, and pending caseload than their rural counterparts. This is understandable, since rural circuit judges usually serve multiple localities and therefore are required to travel. If one takes into account both the composition of a circuit's caseload and the fact that it is a rural or an urban circuit, a more equitable comparison can be made.

A Note

A reader of this report may directly compare the workload of one court with another or one judge with another. Caution should be used in so doing. No one standard of performance can be fairly applied in such a comparison. Judges are highly trained in the law. Few of them come to the bench with any experience or training in the field of administration. It is a tribute to the judges that they are able to manage their courts and dispense justice simultaneously. The fruit of the judicial process is a high quality of justice. That degree of justice cannot be measured but must be maintained. In some particular situations, the following statistics will show a high volume of cases and a relatively long period of time until trial. This is not to criticize judicial ability but merely to highlight those courts in need of assistance or attention in order to maintain a high quality of justice.

Although it is true that "justice delayed is justice denied," it is equally true that the courts cannot sacrifice the quality of justice for mere quantity of cases processed. Any method developed to speed up the judicial process must be done in a manner to insure that justice is not denied for the sake of expediency and efficiency in handling an ever increasing volume of cases.

FIRST JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The First Judicial Circuit serves the city of Chesapeake. The circuit was authorized two judgeships. The 1979 judges were Jerry G. Bray and William H. Hodges. Judge Bray retired effective March 1, 1980 and was replaced by General District Judge William L. Forbes.

The population of the First Circuit was 89,850 according to the 1970 Census. The 1978 population estimated by the Tayloe Murphy Institute was 112,500 and is projected to reach 118,000 in 1980. This continued population increase demonstrated a trend toward doubling the 1960 Census of 66,447. The 1979 population per judge, 56,250, was much higher than the state average of 47,666 to rank it ninth among the thirty-one circuits, highest ranked first.

The commenced caseload for 1979 of 2,463 was an insignificant decrease of 22 cases or 0.9% from 1978. The decrease resulted from 71 fewer criminal cases commenced (down 8.6%), somewhat offset by the slight increase of 49 civil filings (3.0%). The First Circuit's caseload per judge of 1,232 paralleled the state mean of 1,235 for the fourteen urban circuits to rank it eighth among them.

The 1979 caseload composition was 31.2% law, 38.2% equity, 20.4% felony, and 10.2% misdemeanor. Law cases were high relative to the state average of 22.4% while misdemeanors were significantly lower than the state mean of 17.5%.

The judges concluded 2,452 cases in 1979 compared to 2,245 for 1978, an increase of 207 or 9.2%. This increase in terminations did not drop the 1979 pending caseload of 2,676 cases since there were a greater number of new cases.

Jury trials continued to rise gradually from 1977 (95), 1978 (105), to 1979's 110, still below the 156 cases heard in 1976. The 55 jury trials averaged per judge was somewhat higher than the state's mean of 42. The two judges spent 100 days hearing jury trials, 43.0% in criminal and 57.0% in civil cases.

For the 739 law cases commenced, 15.8% were given trial dates more than ninety days ahead. In criminal cases, 58.8% or 758 of 1,290 could not be heard in the present term. Of these criminal cases assigned past the present term, 62.1% were felonies and 48.2% were misdemeanors.

The termination history of the First Circuit's 1,676 civil cases shows 713 or 43.8% were completed within one year. Of the 825 criminal cases concluded, 779 or 94.4% were disposed of within five months of filing.

SECOND JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Second Judicial Circuit consists of the Eastern Shore counties of Accomack and Northampton and the Tidewater city of Virginia Beach. In 1979 the circuit was authorized six judgeships and was served by Judges Whitehurst, Russo, Jacob, Owen, Lam and Vakos. The 1980 Legislature created an additional judgeship effective July 1, 1980 and elected Bernard G. Barrow to fill the new position.

The population of Virginia Beach has grown rapidly since 1960, from 85,218 to 172,106 in 1970. The city's 1978 population was estimated at 242,000 and the Second Circuit at 254,800. The population per judge based on the last figure was 48,217 which was consistent with the state average of 47,666.

The Second Circuit commenced 8,102 cases in 1979, 4.8% more than 1978's 7,729 cases. Civil filings went up 5.5% while the criminal caseload rose 3.9%. An 18.8% decrease in misdemeanors (down 306 cases) was more than offset by a 27.4% increase in the felony caseload, up 439 to reach 2,041 in 1979. Virginia Beach comprised 89.5% of the circuit's commenced caseload and rose 3.3% in 1979, primarily the result of an additional 371 felony cases. A 23.3% increase in Accomack's new cases and a 12.2% rise in Northampton's commenced caseload accounted for only 138 additional cases due to the relatively small size of their caseloads.

The six judges averaged 1,350 commenced cases in 1979 which was well above both the urban and state means of 1,235 and 1,214 respectively. The circuit ranked fourth among the fourteen urban circuits and ninth among all thirty-one, highest ranked first.

The composition of the 1979 commenced caseload was 22.2% law, 36.2% equity, 25.2% felony and 16.4% misdemeanor. Consistent with the increased number of felonies and decreased misdemeanors in 1979, there was a shift from misdemeanor to felony when compared with the previous year's case distribution of 20.7% felony and 19.9% misdemeanor. The circuit's 1979 composition was similar to that year's state percentages.

The circuit disposed of 7,778 cases in 1979, 4.3% more than 1978's 7,459 terminations. The pending caseload at the close of 1979 was 7,422 cases, an average of 1,237 per judge.

In 1979, there were 79 civil jury trials and 46 criminal jury trials, totaling 125. These took a total of 180 days to hear. The six judges averaged 21 jury trials each, one half the state mean of 42 jury trials per judge.

In assigning trial dates for 1,600 law cases, 27.2% or 435 were given dates more than ninety days ahead. Of the 8,312 criminal cases assigned, 3,827 or 46.0% could not be set for the present term. The history of terminations revealed 42.9% of the 4,487 civil cases were concluded within one year of filing. Of the 3,291 criminal dispositions, 63.7% or 2,098 cases were terminated within five months.

THIRD JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Third Judicial Circuit serves the city of Portsmouth. The circuit was authorized three judges in 1979. The resident judges were R. Winston Bain, William H. Oast, Jr., and Lester E. Schlitz who replaced Robert F. McMurran effective February 1, 1979.

The population of Portsmouth continued to decline based on the 1970 Census of 110,963 and the Tayloe Murphy Institute estimates of 109,300 in 1977 and 107,900 in 1978. It was projected to decline further to 107,000 in 1980. The population per judge of 48,217 was slightly higher than the state mean of 47,666 to rank the Third Circuit sixteenth among the thirty-one circuits.

In 1979 the circuit commenced 3,651 cases, 361 or 9.0% less than in 1978. New criminal cases declined 21.6%. This decrease reflected 231 (23.6%) fewer felony and 254 (24.3%) less misdemeanor cases. Per judge, the circuit averaged 1,217 new cases, down from 1,337 in 1978. This ranked the Third Circuit ninth among the state's fourteen urban circuits who averaged 1,235 commenced cases per judge.

The commenced caseload composition for the Third Circuit was 26.7% law, 24.5% equity, 24.7% felony and 21.7% misdemeanor. The Third Circuit was more heavily weighted with criminal cases, 46.4%, compared with the state's 42.0%. The percentage of equity filings was significantly lower than the state average of 35.3%. Also, a higher percentage of the circuit's caseload was composed of misdemeanors, 21.7%, compared with 17.5%.

The judges disposed of 3,701 cases in 1979, 361 cases or 8.9% less than in 1978. Criminal terminations decreased 386 or 17.0% while civil terminations rose by 2.7% or 47 cases to account for the overall decrease in dispositions. Pending cases were 6,348 at the end of 1979, up 124 from 1978.

Jury trials in 1979 numbered 190, 34 fewer than in 1978. Law trials were 85 or 44.7% while criminal jury trials involved 105 or 55.3%. The judges averaged 63 jury trials compared to the state mean of 42. They spent 158 days hearing jury trials.

Trial dates were assigned to 1,603 criminal cases. Of these, 409 were not assigned dates in the present term. The history of terminated cases shows 968 or 53.2% of the 1,819 civil cases were disposed of within a year of filing. On the criminal side, 1,694 or 90.0% of the 1,882 terminated cases were concluded within five months.

FOURTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

Norfolk is the only locality designated in the Fourth Judicial Circuit. The circuit was authorized nine judgeships. Judges Guerry, Gutterman, Ryan, Harper, Whitehurst, Winston, McNamara, and Baker were resident judges of the Fourth Circuit. Judge Baker replaced Spencer G. Gill, Jr., who retired effective August 1, 1979.

Population in the Fourth Circuit continued to decrease based on 1970 Census figures of 307,951. The Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated 280,200 for 1978, and the 1980 projection was 278,000. Population per judge was 31,133 to tie with the Fifth Circuit at twenty-ninth among the thirty-one circuits and was well below the state mean of 47,666.

In 1979 the nine judges commenced 15,148 cases, up 495 from the previous year. Civil filings increased 297 or 5.1% and criminal cases kept pace with 1978 with 2.3% more filings. The new cases per judge figure of 1,683 was higher than the state average of 1,235 and the circuit ranked first among the urban circuits. Criminal cases per judge of 999 nearly doubled the state mean of 513, while civil cases, 684, were slightly lower than the 701 state average.

The composition of the 1979 new caseload was 17.4% law, 23.3% equity, 26.0% felony, and 33.1% misdemeanor. Compared to the state's criminal case percentage of 42.0, the Fourth's 59.1% was significant due to a much higher percentage of misdemeanor cases than the state's 17.5%. In civil cases, the Fourth's 40.6% was correspondingly lower than the state mean of 57.8% with both equity and law percentages below the state's average. The circuit's 1979 distribution was consistent with that of 1978.

The Fourth Circuit concluded 13,672 cases, up 1,363 or 11.1% from 1978. Pending cases at the close of 1979 were 10,701, an increase of 1,473 cases or 16.0% since more cases were commenced than concluded.

Jury trials numbered 256 in 1979, nine less than the previous year, and were composed of 122 civil and 134 criminal. The judges averaged 28 jury trials compared to the state average of 42 per judge. Days spent hearing these trials were 306.

Trial dates were assigned to 1,941 civil and 18,459 criminal cases in 1979. Of the civil cases set, 14.1% were assigned trial dates more than ninety days ahead. In the criminal area, 30.4% were not set in the present term.

For the 9,127 criminal terminations, 85.3% were disposed of within five months of filing while 40.2% of the civil were concluded within one year.

FIFTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Fifth Judicial Circuit is comprised of Suffolk and Franklin cities and the counties of Southampton and Isle of Wight. The circuit is authorized three judgeships. The third judge was added to the circuit effective July 1, 1977. Judges Godwin, Williams, and Bagnell serve in the three jurisdictions of the circuit.

The population of the circuit was 88,771 according to the 1970 Census. The Tayloe Murphy Institute in Charlottesville estimated the 1978 population of the circuit at 94,000 with the city of Suffolk accounting for about 50% of the total population. The 1980 population is projected to reach 95,700. The 1978 population per judge was 31,333 which ranked the Fifth Circuit twenty-ninth among the thirty-one circuits.

The judges of the Fifth Circuit commenced 2,885 cases in 1979, 612 more than in 1978. This represents a significant increase of 26.9%. All of this increase is the result of a 56.2% rise in Suffolk's commenced caseload for 1979. Suffolk commenced 669 more cases, evenly split between civil and criminal, than in 1978. Isle of Wight and Southampton caseloads actually declined. The number of commenced cases per judge was 962 which ranked the Fifth Circuit next to last among the seventeen rural circuits whose average was 1,185.

Terminations numbered 2,534 in 1979, a 26.8% increase which corresponds to the rise in commenced caseload. The pending caseload at the close of 1979 was 2,540 which also was higher than 1978's 2,084 pending cases.

The 1979 new caseload consisted of 21.3% law, 31.5% equity, 30.8% felony, and 15.9% misdemeanor. When compared with the state's 22.4% law, 35.3% equity, 24.4% felony, and 17.5% misdemeanor, the Fifth Circuit's 1979 caseload contains a significantly higher percentage of felony cases.

There were 91 jury trials held in 1979, 50 more than the previous year. The judges of the Fifth averaged 30 jury trials each compared with a statewide average of 42. A total of 84 days were spent hearing these jury trials.

Trial dates were assigned for 380 law cases. Of these, 34.5% were set ninety days ahead. A total of 2,175 criminal cases were given trial dates. Criminal cases were disposed of at a rate of 74.0% within five months of filing. Civil cases were terminated at a rate of 52.4% within one year of setting.

SIXTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Sixth Circuit is comprised of five counties: Brunswick, Greensville, Prince George, Surry, Sussex, and the city of Hopewell. The circuit currently has two authorized judgeships. The judges are Ligon L. Jones and Robert G. O'Hara, Jr.

The population of the circuit as determined by the 1970 Census was 96,264. The 1978 population was estimated at 93,400 by the Tayloe Murphy Institute. The 1980 population is projected to reach 94,100. Based on population per judge figures, the Sixth Circuit ranked nineteenth among the thirty-one circuits with 46,700 persons per judge. The state average was 47,666.

There were 2,061 cases commenced in 1979, which was a 13.3% increase over the 1,819 new cases in 1978. Both civil and criminal cases rose, up 8.8% and 22.5%, respectively. All jurisdictions within the circuit experienced an increase except Prince George which remained stable. The judges averaged 1,031 commenced cases each which ranked the Circuit fourteenth among the seventeen rural circuits whose judges averaged 1,185 new cases.

In 1979, the judges of the circuit disposed of 1,702 cases compared with 1,806 in 1978. The pending caseload at the close of 1979 was 2,070 of which 83.7% were civil cases while only 293 criminal cases were pending.

The 1979 commenced caseload was composed of 19.9% law, 44.7% equity, 25.4% felony, and 9.9% misdemeanor. This distribution varies considerably from the state's 22.4% law, 35.3% equity, 24.5% felony, and 17.5% misdemeanor cases. The Sixth Circuit has a much higher percentage of equity cases and a correspondingly lower percentage of misdemeanor cases.

Jury trials totaled 47 in 1976, 50 in 1977, 28 in 1978, and increased once again to 57 in 1979. Days spent hearing these jury trials numbered 45 in 1979 with criminal jury trials occupying 30 days and civil taking 15 jury days.

In 1979, 649 criminal and 263 civil cases were assigned trial dates. Only 14.5% of the criminal cases were not assigned in the present term. Of 263 civil cases assigned, 39.2% were given dates more than ninety days ahead. Of the criminal cases terminated in 1979, 88.5% were disposed of within five months while in the civil category, 79.6% were concluded within one year.

SEVENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The City of Newport News is the only locality designated in the Seventh Judicial Circuit. The circuit was authorized three judgeships in 1979. The resident judges were Douglas M. Smith, Henry D. Garnett, and J. Warren Stephens.

Population for the Seventh District continued to gradually increase based on the 1970 census figure of 138,177, the Tayloe Murphy Institute's estimate of 143,700 in 1978, and the projected figure of 145,100 for 1980. The population per judge of 47,900 paralleled the 47,666 average for the state.

Commenced cases for the circuit totaled 3,943, a decrease of 137 or 3.4% from 1978. This was the result of slight declines in both civil (53 or 2.5%) and criminal cases (84 or 4.4%). The 1,314 new cases per judge was higher than the state mean of 1,214. This ranked the circuit sixth among those fourteen circuits designated as urban whose average was 1,235 new cases.

The composition of the 1979 commenced caseload was 18.4% law, 35.0% equity, 22.1% felony, and 24.4% misdemeanor. Compared to the state averages of 22.4% law, 35.3% equity, 24.5% felony, and 17.5% misdemeanor, this distribution varied most dramatically in the percentage of misdemeanors to weight the caseload toward criminal although the felony percentage fell slightly below the state mean.

The judges disposed of 4,248 cases resulting in 389 or 10.1% more terminations than in 1978. Civil rose by 213 cases and criminal by 176. Pending cases at the close of 1979 were 2,252, a decrease of 223 cases.

There were 60 jury trials held in 1979, 14 more than the previous year. Each judge averaged 20 jury trials, the lowest in the state, when compared to the state mean of 42. The three judges spent 62 days hearing these trials.

Trial dates were assigned for 497 civil and 2,515 criminal cases. Of the law cases, 68.8% received dates ninety days ahead while 21.6% of the criminal were not set for the present term. Of the cases disposed, 87.6% of the criminal were terminated within five months while 40.9% of the civil were concluded within one year.

EIGHTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The City of Hampton is the designated locality in the Eighth Judicial Circuit. The circuit was authorized two judgeships in 1979, and was served by Judges Edgar A. Massenburg and Nelson T. Overton.

The population of Hampton was 120,779 by the 1970 census. The Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the 1978 population at 124,300 and the Department of Planning and Budget projected a continued gradual increase to 129,000 in 1980. Based on the 1978 estimate, the population per judge was 62,150, ranking Hampton seventh among all the circuits. This was much higher than the state mean of 47,666.

Commenced cases were 2,723 for 1979, 254 or a 10.3% increase. This increase was in criminal cases where there were 299 or 42.4% more than in 1978. Within criminal, felonies were up 153 or 53.1% and misdemeanors rose 108 or 30.9%. Per judge, 1,362 cases were filed to rank the Eighth fifth among the state's fourteen urban circuits whose mean was 1,235. Among all circuits, it again ranked tenth in this comparison as it had in 1978.

The caseload composition for 1979 was 23.5% law, 39.6% equity, 19.4% felony, and 16.8% misdemeanor. Despite the increase in criminal cases, the Eighth commenced a much lower percentage (36.2) than the state's 46.5. Felonies compared as much lower to the state percentage of 24.5, with misdemeanors slightly lower than the state's 17.5. Civil cases (63.1%) compared to the state's 57.8%, with equity distribution being 4.3 percentage points higher.

The circuit concluded 2,487 cases in 1979, 10.7% or 240 more terminations than the previous year. This increase occurred largely in criminal cases with the judges disposing of an additional 212, or 31.0% more than in 1978. Pending cases at the end of 1979 numbered 2,511 or 1,256 per judge.

Jury trials totaled 55 for 1979, 14 more than in 1978, or an average of 28 for each judge. This was significantly lower than the state mean of 42 per judge. The two judges spent 57 days hearing these trials.

Trial dates were assigned to 502 civil cases in 1979, of which 84 or 16.7% were set beyond ninety days. For the 872 criminal cases set, trial dates in the present term were not assigned to only eleven or 1.3%. Of the 1,591 civil cases terminated, 736 or 46.3% were disposed of within one year. Of the 896 criminal cases concluded, 863 or 96.3% were terminated within five months of filing.

NINTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Ninth Judicial Circuit serves ten localities covering 1,876 square miles in the middle peninsula area. The localities are Charles City, Gloucester, King and Queen, King William, Mathews, Middlesex, New Kent, York and James City counties, Williamsburg and Poquoson cities. The circuit is authorized two judgeships. The judges for 1979 were John E. DeHardit and Russell M. Carneal.

The population of the circuit has demonstrated continuous growth in recent years with the 1978 population estimated at 138,000 by the Tayloe Murphy Institute. Since the last census in 1970, the circuit's population has increased by 25% with the 1980 population projected to reach 145,500. In population per judge, the circuit ranked fourth among the thirty-one circuits, highest ranked first. This figure of 69,000 compares with a state mean of 47,666.

In 1979, the judges of the circuit commenced 2,796 cases which reflects no change from the previous year's 2,792. Civil new caseload actually rose by 10.0% but this increase was offset by a 14.9% decline in the criminal new caseload. The judges averaged 1,398 commenced cases which was above both the state (1,214) and rural (1,185) averages. In caseload per judge, the Ninth Circuit ranked seventh among the thirty-one circuits. The 1980 General Assembly approved an additional judgeship for the Ninth Circuit effective July 1, 1980.

The composition of the Ninth Circuit's commenced caseload was 24.3% law, 41.3% equity, 21.0% felony, and 12.7% misdemeanor cases. This distribution varies considerably from the state's equity (35.3) and misdemeanor (17.5) percentages.

Terminations numbered 2,717 in 1979, 208 or 8.3% more than in 1978. Although the number of cases concluded rose, the Ninth Circuit still commenced more cases than it disposed of, resulting in a further increase of the pending caseload to 2,889 at the close of 1979. Civil cases accounted for 86.1% of that pending caseload.

Jury trials have increased from 69 in 1977, 87 in 1978, to 100 in 1979. The judges averaged 50 each which was more than the 1979 state mean of 42 jury trials per judge. A total of 67 days were spent hearing jury trials in 1979.

Trial dates were assigned to 989 criminal cases and 355 civil cases. In the civil category, 72.4% of those cases were given trial dates more than ninety days ahead while 73.4% of the criminal cases were assigned dates for the present term. Of the 1,726 terminated civil cases, 45.8% or 790 were concluded within one year. On the criminal side, 82.9% of the 991 terminations reached disposition within five months from the date of setting.

TENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Tenth Judicial Circuit of Virginia consists of Appomattox, Buckingham, Charlotte, Cumberland, Halifax, Lunenburg, Mecklenburg, and Prince Edward counties along with the city of South Boston. The circuit is authorized two judgeships. The judges in 1979 were Meredith C. Dortch, and John R. Snoddy, Jr.

The population of the Tenth Judicial Circuit has remained relatively stable over the last twenty years. The 1970 census found the population to be 131,383 while the Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the 1978 population at 138,600. The population per judge was 69,300. The circuit ranked third among the thirty-one circuits and was more than 21,000 above the state average population per judge, 47,666.

In 1979, the two judges of the Tenth Circuit commenced 2,216 cases, 181 more than in 1978. Though both the number of civil and criminal cases rose, most of the 8.9% increase occurred in the civil category. The commenced caseload per judge was 1,108 which was somewhat less than the rural average of 1,185. The composition of the 1979 commenced caseload was 24.8% law, 39.3% equity, 23.8% felony, and 11.9% misdemeanor. This varies from the state distribution with a higher percentage of equity cases and a lower percentage of misdemeanor cases.

The judges of the Tenth terminated 2,117 cases in 1979, a 16.1% increase in dispositions over the previous year's 1,824. Despite the increase in terminations, more cases were commenced in 1979 than were concluded. By the close of 1979, there were 2,528 cases pending. This was higher than 1978's.

Jury trials in 1979 numbered 51, two less than the previous year. Of these, 17 involved law cases and 34 were criminal jury trials. The judges spent 64 days in jury proceedings.

Trial dates were assigned to 720 criminal cases and 281 civil cases. Of these, only 31.7% of the civil dates were set more than ninety days ahead. Of the criminal cases set, 164 or 22.8% were not given dates in the present term. Of the 723 criminal terminations, 76.8% were concluded within five months of filing. In the civil category, 47.1% were disposed of within one year of filing.

ELEVENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Eleventh Judicial Circuit is comprised of the counties of Amelia, Dinwiddie, Nottoway, Powhatan, and the city of Petersburg. The circuit is currently authorized two judgeships and is served by Oliver Pollard and Thomas Warren. Judge Pollard sits in the city of Petersburg while Judge Warren travels the circuit to hold court in the four counties.

The population of the circuit was 90,697 according to the 1970 census and was estimated at 99,400 in 1978 by the Tayloe Murphy Institute in Charlottesville. Petersburg with 43,100 people and Dinwiddie County with 21,400 were the two largest localities in the circuit and represented two thirds of the total population. Based on the Tayloe Murphy estimate, the population per judge was 49,700 which ranked the Eleventh Circuit fourteenth in the state, highest ranked first. The state mean was 47,666 persons per judge.

In 1979, the Eleventh Circuit commenced 2,083 cases which represents an 11.2% increase over the previous year's 1,873 new cases. A 14.5% increase in Petersburg's caseload accounted for 157 of the 210 additional cases. The circuit's caseload per judge average of 1,042 compared with the rural mean of 1,185 to rank the Eleventh Circuit at fourteenth among the seventeen rural circuits, highest ranked first.

Concluded cases for 1979 totaled 1,935, an increase of 14.4% over the number of terminations in 1978, 1,692.

The 1977 pending caseload of 1,190 increased 341 or 21.7% over 1976 (1,569). This apparent increase was the result of a recounting of pending cases in the city of Petersburg in January 1977. The pending caseload at the close of 1979 was 1,519 cases.

The composition of the 1979 commenced caseload was 16.3% law, 33.5% equity, 38.8% felony, and 11.2% misdemeanor. This distribution varies considerably from that of the state as a whole with 22.4% law, 35.3% equity, 24.5% felony, and 17.5% misdemeanor. A higher percentage of the Eleventh Circuit's caseload is criminal (50%) than the state percentage of 42%. In addition, a much higher percentage of these cases involve felonies, 38.8%, compared with the state's 24.5%. Correspondingly, in the Eleventh Circuit there are .81 felonies commenced per hundred persons compared with a state average of .62 per hundred. It should be noted that criminal cases generally require more judicial time than do civil, and a high criminal caseload contributes significantly to judicial workload.

Jury trials in 1979 totaled 80, nineteen less than in 1978. Judges Pollard and Warren averaged 40 each which was consistent with the state average of 42 jury trials per judge.

Trial dates were assigned for 191 civil cases. Of these 108 or 56.5% were given dates more than ninety days in advance. In criminal cases 1,558 trial dates were set. Only 161, or 10.3%, were not set for the present term. The history of terminations revealed that 56.1% of civil cases were concluded within one year. Of the 964 criminal cases terminated in 1979, 85.9% or 828 reached disposition within five months of filing.

TWELFTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

Chesterfield County and the city of Colonial Heights constitute the Twelfth Judicial Circuit. The circuit has two judges, Ernest P. Gates and D. W. Murphey.

The population of the circuit has experienced tremendous growth since 1960. At that time the population was 53,442. By 1970 the population had increased by 72% to 92,142. The Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the 1978 population at 145,200 which represents another 57.6% increase since the last census. The 1980 population is projected at 157,000. The population per judge based on the 1978 figure was 72,600 which was well above the state average of 47,666 and ranked the circuit second among the thirty-one circuits in that measure.

The 1979 commenced caseload of 2,984 represents a 16.8% increase over the previous year's 2,554 cases. The circuit's criminal caseload rose 32.3% to account for 215 of the additional cases while the civil caseload also went up 11.4% to account for the other half of the overall increase. Significant increases in both Chesterfield's civil and criminal caseloads were primarily responsible for the circuit's rising caseload although the caseload for Colonial Heights also experienced some increase. The average commenced caseload per judge was 1,492 which was higher than the urban mean of 1,235. The Twelfth Circuit ranked second among the fourteen urban circuits and third in the state in caseload per judge.

The composition of the 1979 caseload was 17.1% law, 53.4% equity, 18.7% felony, and 9.9% misdemeanor cases. There was a slight shift in 1979 from civil to criminal when compared with 1978's 16.8% law, 57.1% equity, 16.4% felony, and 7.8% misdemeanor. The 1979 caseload was still heavily weighted civil, 70.5%, compared with the state's 57.8% civil. Divorce cases numbered 1,225 in 1979 and accounted for 41% of the circuit's total caseload; divorces statewide account for only 25.5% of the 1979 commenced caseload. Divorces in the state average .65 per one hundred persons but in the Twelfth Circuit divorces average .84 per one hundred persons.

Terminations also increased in 1979 but at a slower rate than filings. The judges of the Twelfth concluded 177, or 6.6%, more cases in 1979 to total 2,870 compared with 1978's 2,693 terminations. The pending caseload for the circuit at the close of 1979 was 1,430 cases.

In 1979, the Twelfth Circuit had 47 jury trials, averaging 24 per judge. The total of 47 was eleven less than 1978. Jury trials in 1979 occupied 53 days.

Of the 289 law actions assigned trial dates, 234 or 81% were given dates more than ninety days in advance. Of the 122 criminal cases set for trial, only 22 or 18% were not set in the present term. History of terminations revealed that 51.2% of 1,992 concluded civil cases were disposed of within one year. Of the 878 criminal dispositions, 804 or 91.6% were concluded within five months of filing.

THIRTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Thirteenth Judicial Circuit of Virginia serves the City of Richmond. The circuit is divided into two divisions. Division I holds court in the John Marshall Courts Building. The Division II court serves the Southside section of Richmond. The circuit in 1979 was authorized eight judgeships. Judges J. Randolph Tucker, Jr., James B. Wilkinson, James M. Lumpkin, James E. Sheffield, Marvin F. Cole, and Willard I. Walker sat in Division I and Judges William E. Spain and Frank A. S. Wright served in Division II.

The judges in Division I heard cases by type, civil or criminal. Three judges handled primarily criminal cases and three heard primarily civil cases. Division II judges handled both types of cases. Both divisions of the circuit utilized Commissioners in Chancery references in chancery causes other than divorce.

The population of the City of Richmond has declined steadily since 1970. The population as determined by the 1970 census was 249,431. The Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the 1978 population at 219,600. The Department of Planning and Budget projected the 1980 population to be 213,500. The population per judge based on the 1978 data was 27,450. The Thirteenth Circuit ranked last among the thirty-one circuits with the state average per judge being 47,666.

In 1979, the Thirteenth Circuit commenced 7,898 cases. The caseload declined 4.2% in 1979 and 5.5% in 1978. Division I commenced 4.0% or 266 less cases in 1978 while Division II's caseload decreased by 5.1% or 79. In both divisions, the criminal caseload remained constant with a decrease in civil filings accounting for the drop in the circuit's overall caseload. The commenced caseload per judge was 987 which was well below both the urban and state averages of 1,235 and 1,214 respectively. The circuit ranked eleventh among the fourteen urban circuits and twenty-sixth among all the circuits.

The composition of the circuit's 1979 commenced caseload was 32.1% law, 29.9% equity, 27.5% felony, and 10.0% misdemeanor. This distribution varied considerably from the state's with a much higher percentage of law cases than the state's 22.4% and a somewhat higher percentage of felonies compared with the state's 24.5%. The state's misdemeanor percentage of 17.5 was correspondingly much higher than Richmond's 10.0%, and the state equity percentage of 35.3 was also higher.

The judges of the circuit terminated 7,284 cases in 1979 which was 218 or 2.9% less than 1978's 7,507 dispositions. Terminations in 1977 numbered 8,357. The pending caseload at the close of 1979 was 6,243, an average of 780 cases per judge.

Jury trials in 1979 totaled 347, seventy more than 1978's 277. For the year, the judges spent 452 days hearing jury trials. They averaged 43 jury trials each which was consistent with the state average of 42.

In assigning trial dates for the 1,674 law actions, 75.6% or 1,265 were set for more than ninety days in advance. Of the 2,966 criminal cases set for trial, 42.3% or 1,224 were not set for the present term. The history of terminated cases revealed that 2,383 or 51.9% of the 4,593 civil cases were concluded within one year of filing. On the criminal side, 90.9% of the 2,691 were disposed of within five months.

FOURTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

Henrico County is the only locality designated in the Fourteenth Judicial Circuit. In 1979, the circuit had four judgeships authorized and was served by Judges Edmund Waller Hening, Jr., E. Ballard Baker, L. Paul Byrne, and Robert M. Wallace.

Henrico's population as determined by the 1970 U.S. Census was 154,364. The Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the 1978 population at 173,900. Based on the Institute's estimate for 1978, the population per judge was 43,475 which ranked Henrico twenty-fourth among the thirty-one circuits. The state average population per judge was 47,666.

In 1979, the Fourteenth commenced 3,700 cases, 84 less than in 1978 representing a decrease of 2.2%. The criminal caseload remained essentially unchanged while civil filings fell 4.2%. Henrico County's caseload per judge in 1979 was 925 which was well below both the urban and state averages of 1,235 and 1,214 respectively. The circuit ranked next to last among the fourteen urban circuits and twenty-ninth among all thirty-one circuits.

The composition of the 1979 commenced caseload was 19.1% law, 43.2% equity, 17.2% felony, and 20.5% misdemeanor. A relatively large percentage of the Fourteenth's 1979 caseload was divorces, 37.8% compared with a state percentage of 25.5%. Statewide, there were .65 divorces per hundred persons while in Henrico County there were .81 divorces per hundred persons. Due to the large number of divorce cases, the Fourteenth's caseload composition varied considerably from the state's 22.4% law, 33.5% equity, 24.5% felony, and 17.5% misdemeanor.

The four judges concluded 3,158 cases in 1979, fifty-six less than in 1978. Pending cases rose to 4,620 at the close of 1979 which averaged 1,155 per judge.

Jury trials totaled 112 in 1979, five less than the previous year. Henrico judges spent a total of 120 days hearing those trials. On an average, each judge heard 28 jury trials compared with a state mean of 42.

Trial dates were assigned for 415 law actions, all of which were set on dates more than ninety days in advance. Of the 1,379 criminal cases given trial dates, 78.8% or 1,087 were not set for the present term. The history of terminated cases showed that less than half (46.5%) of the 2,005 civil cases were concluded within one year. Of the 1,153 criminal dispositions, almost all (97.3%) were disposed of within five months of filing.

FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Fifteenth Judicial Circuit is comprised of ten counties: Caroline, Essex, Hanover, King George, Northumberland, Richmond, Spotsylvania, Stafford, Westmoreland, and the city of Fredericksburg. The circuit has four authorized judgeships. John A. Jamison, Dixon L. Foster, J. M. H. Willis, Jr. and Richard H. C. Taylor are the resident judges.

The Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the 1978 population at 211,000. Since the 1970 Census which placed the circuit's population at 158,351, the population has increased 33.3%. The 1980 population is projected to reach 220,700. The largest population growth is expected in Hanover and Stafford counties. The population per judge based on the 1978 figure was 52,750 which was above the state mean of 47,666 and ranked the circuit eleventh among the thirty-one circuits, highest ranked first.

In 1979, the circuit commenced 4,174 cases, a decline of 1.8% from 1978's 4,250 cases. The Fifteenth Circuit experienced significant increases in caseload in 1973 through 1975, and more modest increases from 1976 through 1978. The civil caseload for 1979 of 2,714 was essentially unchanged from 1978's 2,717. Responsible for the slight decline in the total commenced caseload was a 4.8% decrease in criminal filings which amounted to 73 cases less than the previous year's 1,533 criminal cases. The largest courts in terms of caseload were Hanover (851), Stafford (839), Spotsylvania (586), and Fredericksburg (426). Stafford's criminal caseload dropped 32% or 114 cases and was primarily responsible for the decrease in the circuit's commenced caseload.

The four judges of the Fifteenth averaged 1,044 commenced cases for 1979 which was less than the rural average of 1,185. The circuit ranked twelfth among the seventeen rural circuits and twenty-first among the thirty-one circuits, highest ranked first.

The composition of the 1979 caseload was 25.8% law, 39.2% equity, 18.2% felony, and 16.7% misdemeanor. This compared to the state distribution of 22.4% law, 35.3% equity, 24.5% felony, and 17.5% misdemeanor. The Fifteenth Circuit had a higher percentage of civil cases (65.0%) and a corresponding lower percentage of criminal cases (34.9%) compared with the state's 57.8% civil and 42.0% criminal.

In 1979, 4,004 cases were concluded, 122 less than in 1978, representing a 3.0% decline in terminations. At the close of 1979, the pending caseload was 3,172 cases, 77.9% or 2,470 of which were civil cases.

Jury trials totaled 282 for the circuit in 1979, twenty-five less than reported in 1978. The four judges of the Fifteenth averaged 71 jury trials each compared with a state mean of 42. The circuit ranked third in the state in the number of jury trials per judge. These jury trials required a total of 290 days, averaging 73 days per judge.

Trial dates were assigned for 628 law, 643 felony, and 489 misdemeanor cases. Of the total number of law cases assigned, 66.4% or 417 were given dates more than ninety days ahead. In criminal cases assigned, 33.8% or 382 cases could not be assigned in the present term. Of the 1,317 criminal terminations, 82.9% were disposed of within five months of filing. Of the civil cases concluded in 1979, 46.1% were terminated within one year of filing.

SIXTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The counties of Albemarle, Culpeper, Fluvanna, Goochland, Greene, Louisa, Madison, Orange and the city of Charlottesville form the Sixteenth Judicial Circuit. The circuit was authorized four judges. Judges Berry, Fry, Pickford and Harkrader are the resident judges. Judge Purcell also served in the Sixteenth, resigning from his position in June of 1979. He was replaced by Judge Harkrader who transferred from the general district court July 1, 1979.

The 1970 Census determined the circuit's population to be 154,250. The Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the 1978 population at 183,700, and the 1980 population is projected to reach 194,800. The population per judge based on the 1978 population estimate was 45,925 which was less than the state mean of 47,666. The circuit ranked twenty-first among the thirty-one circuits, highest ranked first.

The commenced caseload for 1979 was 4,233, up 7.1% from 1978's 3,951 cases. While the civil new caseload rose by 67 cases, the major portion of the increase was due to a 14.1% increase in the criminal caseload, 218 more cases than in 1978. Furthermore, these additional cases were for the most part felonies rather than misdemeanors. Charlottesville and Albemarle accounted for approximately one-half of the circuit's caseload and both jurisdictions experienced a rise in caseload for 1979. Culpeper, Fluvanna, Goochland, Louisa, and Madison also experienced increases in commenced cases. The new caseloads of Greene and Orange counties declined in 1979.

The commenced caseload per judge of 1,058 was less than the state and rural means of 1,214 and 1,185 respectively. The circuit ranked eleventh among the seventeen rural circuits in this measure, highest ranked first.

The 1979 commenced caseload was distributed as 18.2% law, 40.1% equity, 29.3% felony, and 12.3% msidemeanor. This varied from the state composition of 22.4% law, 35.3% equity, 24.5% felony, and 17.5% misdemeanor.

There were 158 jury trials during 1979, 26 more than the previous year. The four judges averaged 40 jury trials which was comparable to the state average of 42. Of the total, 51 jury trials involved civil cases and 107 were criminal jury trials. Jury proceedings occupied 167 days in 1979.

Trial dates were set for 1,731 criminal cases and 403 law cases. Slightly more than one third of the civil cases (146) were set more than ninety days ahead. On the criminal side, 628 cases or 36.3% of the cases set could not be assigned in the present term. Of the 2,106 civil terminations, 1,113 cases or 52.9% were concluded within one year of filing. Of the 1,711 criminal terminations, 1,416 or 82.8% were disposed of within five months.

SEVENTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

Arlington County is the only locality designated in the Seventeenth Judicial Circuit. The circuit was authorized four judgeships in 1979 and was served by Judges William L. Winston, Paul D. Brown, Charles S. Russell, and Charles H. Duff.

The Bureau of the Census determined Arlington's population in 1970 as 174,284. By 1978 the area's population had decreased to 149,400 in an estimate by the Tayloe Murphy Institute. Based on the Institute's 1978 estimate, the population per judge was 37,350, well below the state average of 47,666. Arlington ranked twenty-fifth among the thirty-one circuits of the state, with highest ranked first.

In 1979, the circuit commenced 3,674 cases which represented a 13.4% increase or 435 cases above the 1978 level. The civil caseload was essentially unchanged, increasing by a single case over 1978's 1,915. Thus the circuit's rise in caseload was the result of a 32.8% increase in criminal cases. Misdemeanors were up from 94 in 1978 to 141 in 1979. There were 401 more felony cases in 1979 than in 1978, accounting for the major portion of the circuit's increase in caseload.

Despite a significant increase in Arlington's caseload, the circuit still ranked last among the fourteen urban circuits and thirtieth among all the circuits in a caseload per judge comparison. The Seventeenth Circuit averaged 919 cases per judge compared to urban and state means of 1,234 and 1,214 respectively.

The composition of the 1979 caseload was 20.5% law, 31.6% equity, 43.3% felony, and 3.8% misdemeanor. This distribution varied considerably from the state's criminal percentages of 24.5% felony and 17.5% misdemeanor. The circuit's percentage of felony cases was considerably higher while misdemeanors were correspondingly lower. Statewide, there were an average of .62 felonies per hundred persons. With 1,591 felony cases in 1979, Arlington commenced 1.06 felonies per hundred persons.

The four judges concluded a total of 2,591 cases in 1979, 5.1% less than the 2,730 terminations in 1978. The pending caseload at the close of 1979 was 5,425 or an average of 1,356 cases per judge.

Jury trials totaled 157 for 1979, 93 less than in 1978. The four judges in Arlington spent 131 days hearing civil jury trials, and 189 days involved criminal jury proceedings to total 320 days. Thus an average jury trial in Arlington took approximately two days compared with a one day average statewide. The judges of the circuit averaged 39 jury trials each which was similar to the state mean of 42.

Trial dates were assigned for 755 civil cases in 1979. Approximately 70.0% or 529 of those cases were given dates more than ninety days ahead. Of the 2,487 criminal cases set for trial, a little over one third or 851 were not set for the present term. The history of terminations revealed that 705 or 43.7% of the 1,615 civil cases were concluded within one year of filing. Of the 976 criminal dispositions, 73.2% were terminated within five months.

EIGHTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The city of Alexandria is the only locality designated in the Eighteenth Circuit. The circuit was authorized three judgeships in 1979 and was served by Judges Wright, Kent, and Grenadier. Judge Grenadier replaced Franklin P. Bachus who retired January 31, 1979.

Alexandria's population as determined by the 1970 Census was 110,927. By 1978 the city's population dropped to 104,700 as estimated by the Tayloe Murphy Institute. Based on this estimate, the population per judge was 34,900, well below the state average of 47,666. Alexandria ranked twenty-eighth among the thirty-one Virginia circuits, highest ranked first.

In 1979, the Eighteenth Circuit commenced 2,914 cases which represented a 3.5% increase over the previous year. The criminal caseload remained essentially unchanged, falling by eight cases to 1,333. Civil filings rose 7.3% from 1,474 in 1978 to 1,581 in 1979. Alexandria's commenced caseload per judge was 971 which was well below the urban and state averages of 1,235 and 1,214 respectively. The circuit ranked twelfth among the fourteen urban circuits and twenty-seventh among all thirty-one in this comparison.

The composition of the 1979 commenced caseload was 22.5% law, 31.8% equity, 30.8% felony, and 14.5% misdemeanor. This distribution of cases varied significantly from the state's criminal percentage of 24.5% felony and 17.5% misdemeanor, and was similar to the state's 22.4% law and 33.5% equity.

The three judges of the Eighteenth terminated 3,320 cases in 1979, 634 more than in 1978. This represented a substantial increase of 23.6% in dispositions. The pending caseload fell to 3,059 cases at the close of 1979 since there were more cases concluded than commenced for the year.

Jury trials totaled 97 for 1979, twenty-two more than in 1978. They spent the same number of days hearing those trials. The three judges averaged 32 jury trials each compared with a state mean of 42.

Trial dates were assigned for 321 civil cases, two-thirds of which were set more than ninety days ahead. Of the 982 criminal cases set for trial, 37.3% or 366 were not set for the present term. The history of terminations showed approximately one third of the 2,059 civil cases were concluded within one year of filing. On the criminal side, 81.8% or 1,031 cases were disposed of within five months.

NINETEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Nineteenth Judicial Circuit is comprised of Fairfax County and the cities of Fairfax and Falls Church. In 1979 the General Assembly created an additional judgeship effective July 1 to raise the number of judges authorized to nine. Judges Jennings, Plummer, Morris, Millsap, Cacheris, Middleton, Jamborsky and Griffith, with Judge Bach filling the new judgeship, served the circuit in 1979.

The 1970 Census recorded the population at 455,032 and the Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the 1978 figure at 545,500. The population is projected to further increase to 571,200 in 1980. Based on the 1978 estimate, population per judge was 63,867, significantly higher than the state average of 47,666 to rank the circuit sixth among all thirty-one, highest ranked first.

The Nineteenth commenced 10,637 cases in 1979, an increase of 809 or 8.2%. Civil filings were up 11.4% with an additional 17.4% law and 7.8% equity cases over the previous year. A 20.8% rise in felonies resulted in a criminal total of only six more new filings since misdemeanors decreased by 16.1%. Using 8.5 as the number of judges since Judge Bach served only one half year, the circuit commenced 1,251 cases per judge, slightly higher than the state mean of 1,235 for the fourteen urban circuits. This figure ranked the circuit seventh in 1979 compared to 1978's rank of eleventh.

The composition of the Nineteenth's commenced caseload of 73.9% civil and 25.8% criminal was weighted considerably to the civil side when compared with the state's distribution of 57.8% and 42.0%, respectively. Within the civil category, the circuit's 29.2% law compares to the state's 22.4% with the circuit's 44.7% equity much higher than the state's 17.5%.

In 1979, the nine judges disposed of 9,555 cases, an increase of 223 or 2.4%. The pending caseload of 12,913 at the close of 1979 was up 1,222 from 1978.

The judges heard 335 jury trials, 53 fewer than in 1978. The 8.5 judges averaged 39 jury trials each, slightly lower than the state mean of 42. Of the total, 157 involved civil cases while 178 were criminal. The jury proceedings occupied 571 days.

Trial dates were set for 1,710 civil and 3,235 criminal cases. Of these, 62.0% of the civil were assigned more than ninety days ahead and 26.3% of the criminal were given dates past the present term. For the 6,730 terminations, 2,819 or 41.9% were disposed of within one year of filing. The 2,289 criminal cases concluded within five months of filing were 81.0% of the 2,825 cases terminated in 1979.

TWENTIETH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Twentieth serves the three counties of Fauquier, Loudoun, and Rappahannock. The circuit had two judges in 1979: Rayner V. Snead and Carleton Penn. Judge Snead was the chief circuit judge, and announced his intention to retire effective January, 1980. He was replaced by William S. Robertson.

The population of the circuit has been rapidly expanding as the Washington suburbs extend outward. The population grew 27.3% between 1960 and 1970 and 28.5% in the first seven years of this decade. The 1978 population has been estimated at 90,400, and the circuit is projected to reach 98,000 by 1980, representing an increase of 4.2% yearly. The growth spurt was most evident in Loudoun County.

The commenced caseload increased by 20.4% for the circuit and 9.9% for the state from 1975 to 1976. However, this increase did not continue through 1977, and the number of new cases dropped by 57 to 1,707. In 1978 the trend again reversed and the caseload increased by 15.5% to 1,972. The 1979 commenced caseload was 1,814, representing an 8.0% decrease from the previous year. The circuit's civil caseload actually rose by 12.9% or 145 cases, but this increase was more than the offset by a drop of 35.9% (303 cases) in the criminal caseload. Felonies decreased by 84 and there were 218 less misdemeanors in 1979.

The large number of misdemeanor cases commenced in Loudoun County in 1978 (293) was primarily responsible for that year's 15.5% increase in the circuit's overall caseload. In 1979, new misdemeanor cases in Loudoun County dropped 229 to only 64. This decline in Loudoun County's misdemeanor caseload represented most of the decrease in total caseload though both Fauquier and Rappahannock showed small decline in criminal caseload.

Based on the commenced caseload for 1979, the per judge average of 907 new cases ranked the Twentieth Circuit as last among the seventeen rural circuits. The rural and state means were 1,185 and 1,214 commenced cases per judge, respectively.

The composition of the 1979 commenced caseload was 27.0% law, 43.2% equity, 21.9% felony, and 7.8% misdemeanor. The circuit's caseload varied from the state distribution of 22.4% law, 35.3% equity, 24.5% felony and 17.5% misdemeanor. The caseload of the Twentieth was more heavily weighted on the civil side, 70.2% compared with the state's 57.8% and, correspondingly, the judges of the Twentieth handled a smaller percentage of criminal cases, 29.7% compare with a state figure of 42.0%.

Terminations in 1979 numbered 1,619, representing a drop of 23.6% or 501 less cases than in 1978. This decline is not as substantial as it appears since 379 of the 1978 terminations were the result of purging under Virginia Code Section 8.01-335.

There were 89 jury trials in 1979, fourteen less than in 1978. The number of criminal jury trials remained stable, but there were only 35 civil jury trials in 1979 compared with 47 in 1978. The judges averaged 45 jury trials which is similar to the state mean of 42. The trials took a total of ninety days to hear those jury proceedings.

In assigning trial dates to 148 law cases, 34.5% or 51 cases were given dates more than ninety days from the date of setting. In the 240 criminal dates assigned, 24.6% or 59 were not given dates during the present term. The history of terminated cases revealed that 54.2% of the 1,105 civil terminations were concluded within one year. Of the 514 criminal terminations, 60.7% or 312 were disposed of within five months. An additional 104 or 20.2% were concluded within six to nine months of filing.

TWENTY-FIRST JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Twenty-First Judicial Circuit consists of Henry and Patrick counties and the city of Martinsville. John D. Hooker and Frank I. Richardson, Jr. were the resident judges in 1979.

The population of the circuit has increased by 4,164 persons since the 1970 Census placed the population at 85,836. The 1978 estimate by the Tayloe Murphy Institute was 90,000, and the population is projected to reach 91,600 by 1980. Using the 1978 estimate, the population per judge was 45,000. This figure was somewhat less than the state mean of 47,666.

The judges of the circuit commenced 3,186 cases in 1979, a slight increase of 46 cases or 1.5% from the previous year. The average number of cases commenced per judge was 1,593. On this measure the Twenty-First circuit ranked highest among the seventeen rural circuits and second among all thirty-one circuits. Only Norfolk had a higher caseload per judge ratio. The rural mean was 1,185 while the average statewide was 2,214.

The judges of the Twenty-First handled a large number of criminal cases in 1979 relative to the state as a whole—1,012 per judge compared with a state mean of 513. More than 60.0% of these cases (610) were misdemeanors which was almost three times the state average of 212. They also handled on the average 35.0% more felony cases, 402 compared with 297, respectively. Their civil caseload per judge of 581 was approximately 20.0% lower than the state mean of 701.

Corresponding to the large number of criminal cases, the composition of the 1979 caseload was weighted toward the criminal side with cases distributed as 16.8% law, 19.7% equity, 25.2% felony, and 38.3% misdemeanor. Consistent with the caseload per judge figures, the circuit's commenced caseload contained a significantly higher percentage of misdemeanors than the state figure of 17.5%. Of the 1,219 total misdemeanor cases, 968 were appeals from the lower courts. Martinsville accounted for 590 of the reported misdemeanor cases, Henry County for 551, and Patrick County for 78. Of the 802 felony cases commenced, Martinsville reported 455, Henry County 267, and Patrick County 80 felony cases. Civil cases accounted for only 207 or 16.5% of the Martinsville total commenced caseload, compared with a statewide percentage of 57.8%.

Terminations in 1979 were 2,836, 5.7% more than the 2,683 cases concluded in 1978. At the close of 1979 the pending caseload rose once again to reach 2,930.

Jury trials totaled 105 in 1979, averaging 53 per judge. The state average number of jury trials per judge was 42. In 1979, jury trials took 110 days to hear.

Trial dates were assigned to 181 law cases and 935 criminal cases. Of the civil cases, 30.9% were given dates more than ninety days in advance. Only 14.4% or 135 criminal cases were not assigned trial dates in the present term. The history of terminated cases revealed that 47.2% or 41 of the 871 civil cases were concluded within one year. Of the 1,965 criminal terminations, 71.2% or 1,398 cases were disposed of within five months of filing.

TWENTY-SECOND JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The counties of Franklin and Pittsylvania along with the city of Danville form the Twenty-Second Judicial Circuit of Virginia. William Carrington Thompson, Chief Circuit Judge, Beverly A. Davis, III, and James J. Ingram were the resident judges. Judge Thompson was elected to the Supreme Court of Virginia by the 1980 Legislature which elected Samuel M. Hairston to fill the vacancy.

The 1970 U.S. Census gave the circuit's population at 133,343. The 1978 population as determined by the Tayloe Murphy Institute was 139,600, and the Department of Planning and Budget projected the 1980 population would increase to 142,400. The population per judge based on the 1978 estimate was 46,533 and was similar to the state mean of 47,666.

During 1979 the courts of the Twenty-Second Circuit commenced 4,195 cases which represents a 7.3% increase from 1978's 3,906 new cases. Of the additional 287 cases, 271 were criminal. Misdemeanor cases actually dropped by 4% while felony cases increased by 341 over the previous year. While both Franklin County and the city of Danville had increasing caseloads, up 2.8% and 3.3%, respectively, it was the 74.8% increase in Pittsylvania's felony caseload which amounted to an additional 160 felony cases and contributed significantly to the overall increase in the circuit's caseload.

In caseload per judge, the circuit ranked fourth among the seventeen rural circuits with 1,398 cases per judge and ranked seventh among all thirty-one circuits. The state average was 1,214 and the rural average was 1,185. The judges of the Twenty-Second each handled an average of 811 new criminal cases compared with a state average of 513.

The composition of the 1979 caseload was 14.7% law, 27.3% equity, 30.9% felony, and 27.0% misdemeanor. In conjunction with the high number of criminal cases, the circuit's distribution was significantly more criminal than the state's 22.4% law, 35.3% equity, 24.5% felony, and 17.5% misdemeanor.

Terminations in 1979 numbered 4,436, an increase of 10.3% over 1978's 4,022 concluded cases. Since terminations were higher than the number of commenced cases (4,436 versus 4,195), the pending caseload was further reduced to 1,150 cases at the close of 1979.

Jury trials in 1979 amounted to 241, ten less than the previous year. The circuit averaged 5.7 jury trials per one hundred commenced cases compared with the state figure of 3.5. The judges each averaged 80 jury trials ranking them third highest among the thirty-one circuits and together spent a total of 165 days hearing those trials. The state mean was 42 jury trials per judge.

Trial dates were assigned to 493 law actions. Of these, only 13.2% or 65 were given dates more than ninety days ahead. For the 1,856 criminal cases set for trial, only 10.9% were not set for the present term. Of the 2,846 criminal cases concluded in 1979, 98.3% were disposed of within five months of filing. Civil cases were terminated at a rate of 70.8% within one year of filing.

TWENTY-THIRD JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Twenty-Third Judicial Circuit is comprised of Roanoke County, Roanoke City, and Salem City. The circuit was authorized five judgeships in 1979. Judges Ernest W. Ballou, Jack B. Coulter, and Kenneth E. Trabue sat in Roanoke City while Judges Frederick L. Hoback and Lawrence L. Koontz, Jr., held court in Roanoke County and the city of Salem.

The population of the circuit was 181,436 according to the 1970 census and was estimated at 185,200 in 1978 by the Tayloe Murphy Institute in Charlottesville. Roanoke City contained 53% of the total population with 98,700 persons; Roanoke County had over one third of the population; and the remaining 12% resided in the city of Salem. Based on the Tayloe Murphy estimates the population per judge was 37,040 which ranked the Twenty-Third Circuit twenty-sixth among the thirty-one circuits, highest ranked first. The circuit's population per judge was considerably lower than the state average of 47,666.

The Twenty-Third Circuit commenced 5,124 cases in 1979, 7.5% less than 1978's 5,542 cases. The civil caseload actually experienced a slight rise of 2.9% but this increase was more than offset by a significant drop of 19.7% in criminal cases, from 2,562 in 1978 to 2,058 in 1979. This decline was primarily the result of a 27.4% drop in Roanoke City's criminal caseload, amounting to 534 cases less than in 1978. Despite an increase in the number of commenced felony cases, the 1979 Roanoke misdemeanor caseload was less than half that of 1978 to account for the overall decrease in the circuit's commenced caseload. Roanoke City had 564 misdemeanors in 1978 compared with 1,146 in 1979. Roanoke County's caseload rose 4.8% or 64 cases while Salem's declined 3.3% or 20 cases.

The five judges of the Twenty-Third commenced an average of 1,025 cases well below both the urban and state means of 1,235 and 1,214 respectively. The circuit ranked tenth among the fourteen urban circuits and twenty-fourth among all the circuits.

The composition of the 1979 commenced caseload was 22.3% law, 37.6% equity, 25.5% felony, and 13.8% misdemeanor which varied only slightly from the state distribution of 22.4% law, 35.3% equity, 24.5% felony, and 17.5% misdemeanor. Consistent with the considerable decline in Roanoke City's misdemeanors, the 1979 percentage of misdemeanor cases was much less than the 1978 percentage of 23.2.

Concluded cases for 1979 numbered 5,467, 5.3% more than 1978's 5,193 terminations. The pending caseload at the close of 1979 was 4,550.

Jury trials totaled 109 for 1979, thirty less than in 1978. The judges of the circuit spent a total of 111 days in hearing those trials. The Twenty-Third Circuit averaged 22 jury trials per judge, about one half the state mean of 42.

Trial dates were assigned to 328 law actions: Only fourteen civil cases were set more than ninety days in advance. In 1979, there were 1,926 criminal cases set for trial. Of these, only 184 or 9.6% could not be set for the present term. The history of terminations revealed that 43.5% or 1,311 of the 3,011 civil cases were concluded within one year. Of the 2,456 criminal dispositions, 1,970 or 80.2% were disposed of within five months of filing.

TWENTY-FOURTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Twenty-Fourth Judicial Circuit is comprised of the counties of Amherst, Bedford, Campbell, Nelson, and the cities of Bedford, Lynchburg, and Waynesboro. In 1979 the circuit was authorized four judgeships and was served by Judges O. Raymond Cundiff, William W. Sweeney, Robert C. Goad, and Norman K. Moon. Judge Cundiff holds court in Lynchburg. Judge Moon sits in Campbell County while Judge Sweeney sits in Bedford. The counties of Amherst and Nelson along with the city of Waynesboro are handled by Judge Goad.

The population of the circuit was 184,622 according to the 1970 census and was estimated at 201,800 in 1978 by the Tayloe Murphy Institute. The city of Lynchburg and the surrounding Campbell County contained 54% of the total population with 109,000 people. Based on the Tayloe Murphy estimates, the population per judge was 50,450 which ranked the Twenty-Fourth Circuit as thirteenth among all the circuits, highest ranked first. The circuit's population per judge was higher than the state mean of 47,666.

In 1978 the circuit commenced 4,730 new cases, an increase of 14% over the 1977 caseload of 4,149. For 1979, the Twenty-Fourth Circuit reported 5,124 new cases, an increase of 8.3% from 1978. Criminal cases rose by 12.3% to account for 269 of the 394 additional cases while the civil caseload increased by a more modest 4.9%. There appeared to be no consistency in the individual courts which comprise the circuit; the caseloads of Nelson and Lynchburg rose significantly, up 36.9% and 19.7% respectively. There was little change in the overall commenced caseloads of Amherst, Bedford, and Waynesboro. The caseload of Campbell County dropped 8.8% due primarily to 91 less civil filings in 1979. Both Nelson County and the city of Lynchburg had increases in their civil caseload which accounted for 76 and 96 additional cases, respectively. The criminal caseload of Lynchburg also rose significantly by 24.4% or 283 cases.

The four judges of the Twenty-Fourth averaged 1,281 commenced cases in 1979, more than both the rural (1,185) and state (1,214) means. On this measure, the circuit ranked sixth among the seventeen rural circuits and twelfth among all the circuits, highest ranked first.

The composition of the 1979 commenced caseload was 19.5% law, 32.7% equity, 29.3% felony, and 17.6% misdemeanor. This compared to a state distribution of 22.4% law, 35.3% equity, 24.5% felony, and 17.5% misdemeanor. The percentage of felony cases in 1979 was higher than 1978's 25.5% and reflected the 24.4% increase of 295 cases over 1978's felony caseload.

Concluded cases for 1979 numbered 5,015 which was 11.7% more than the 4,491 cases terminated in 1978. At the close of 1979, the circuit's pending caseload was 2,361 cases.

In 1979, the four judges of the circuit held 275 jury trials, an average of 69 each. This figure was significantly higher than the state mean of 42 jury trials per judge. Together they spent 235 days hearing those trials.

Trial dates were assigned for 835 law actions. Dates more than ninety days ahead had to be given to 492 or 58.9% of those cases. Of the 2,273 criminal cases assigned dates for trial, only 291 or 12.8% were not given dates in the present term. The history of terminations revealed that 1,462 or 54.8% of 2,667 concluded civil cases were disposed of within one year of filing. Of the 2,348 criminal terminations, 94.3% or 2,214 were concluded within five months of filing.

TWENTY-FIFTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Twenty-Fifth Circuit is comprised of seven counties: Alleghany, Augusta, Bath, Botetourt, Craig, Highland, and Rockbridge. Also included in the circuit are the cities of Buena Vista, Clifton Forge, Covington, Lexington, and Staunton. There are courts in all of the above localities with the exception of the cities of Covington and Lexington which utilize the county courts. In 1979 the circuit was authorized three judgeships. Judges William S. Moffett, Jr., Roscoe B. Stephenson, Jr., and Rudolph Bumgardner, III, served the circuit.

The population of the circuit as determined by the 1970 Census was 156,843 and was estimated in 1978 by the Tayloe Murphy Institute at 164,800. The two localities experiencing the largest growth were Augusta and Botetourt Counties. Augusta County and Staunton together account for 44% of the circuit's total population. The population per judge based on the 1978 estimate was 54,933 which ranked the circuit tenth among the thirty-one circuits. The state average per judge in 1978 was 47,666.

The caseload of the circuit increased 6.3% in 1977 and 3.1% in 1978. In 1979, commenced caseload was 4,209 cases which represented an 18.2% increase over 1978's 3,560 new cases. There were 244 additional criminal cases in 1979, an increase of 15.7% to total 1,794 cases. The civil increase was even more substantial, up 20.2% or 405 cases to total 2,415 civil cases for the year. Of the jurisdictions which comprise the circuit, Alleghany, Augusta, Bath, Botetourt, Highland, and Clifton Forge experienced significant increases in commenced caseloads. Craig and Rockbridge counties along with Staunton remained stable while only the city of Buena Vista showed any decline in caseload (8.3%).

The three judges of the circuit commenced an average of 1,403 cases in 1979 which ranked the Twenty-Fifth second highest among the seventeen rural circuits and fifth among all thirty-one circuits. Their average was considerably above both the state and rural means of 1,214 and 1,185 respectively.

The composition of the 1979 caseload was 16.0% law, 41.4% equity, 23.1% felony, and 19.4% misdemeanor. This distribution showed little variation from that of 1978. Compared with the state percentages of 22.4% law, 35.3% equity, 24.5% felony, and 17.5% misdemeanor, the circuit had a significantly higher percentage of equity cases and a correspondingly lower percentage of law cases.

Jury trials totaled 85 in 1975, 111 in 1976, 88 in 1977, 69 in 1978, and 111 in 1979, an increase of 42 over the previous year. The three judges of the Twenty-Fifth averaged 37 jury trials, somewhat less than the state mean of 42 jury trials per judge. Jury trials occupied a total of 99 days in 1979.

In the assignment of trial dates for civil cases, 44.6% (152) of the 341 cases were set more than ninety days ahead. Of the 1,748 criminal cases set for trial, only 214 or 12.2% were not given dates within the present term. The history of terminations revealed that 53.9% of the total 1,803 civil cases were concluded within one year. Of the 1,715 criminal dispositions, 71.8% or 1,231 were terminated within five months.

TWENTY-SIXTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Twenty-Sixth Judicial Circuit is comprised of the counties of Clarke, Frederick, Page, Rockingham, Shenandoah, Warren and the cities of Harrisonburg and Winchester. The circuit was authorized three judgeships in 1979 and was served by Judges Robert K. Woltz, Joshua L. Robinson, and Duncan C. Gibb. Judge Robinson held court in Page and Rockingham Counties (includes Harrisonburg). Judge Woltz sat in Clarke and Frederick, while Judge Gibb handled the counties of Shenandoah and Warren along with the city of Winchester.

The population of the circuit was 168,867 according to the 1970 census and was estimated at 196,700 in 1978 by the Tayloe Murphy Institute. The two largest localities in terms of population are Rockingham County (54,500) and the Frederick-Winchester area (51,400) which account for 54% of the total population. Based on the Tayloe Murphy estimate, the population per judge was 65,567 which ranked the Twenty-Sixth Circuit as fifth in the state among all circuits, highest ranked first. The state mean was 47,666.

In 1978 the Twenty-Sixth Circuit commenced 3,237 new cases, an increase of 2.1% over the 1977 caseload of 3,170. The 1979 caseload of 3,439 was 6.2% higher than the previous year's. The civil caseload remained stable from 1978 to 1979, increasing by only 1.2%. Thus the overall increase is primarily the result of a 14.1% rise in the criminal caseload from 1,263 in 1978 to 1,441 in 1979. Felonies increased by 53 and misdemeanor cases were up by 129. Those courts within the circuit with significant increases in caseload were Frederick (21.7%), Rockingham (11.2%), and Warren (19.9%). Page and Shenandoah experienced declines of 15.3% and 7.3% respectively. Clarke County experienced a modest increase of 5.8% while Winchester decreased by 2.8%.

The judges in the Twenty-Sixth averaged 1,146 commenced cases which was comparable with the rural mean of 1,185. The circuit ranked ninth among the seventeen rural circuits and eighteenth among all thirty-one; highest ranked first.

The composition of the 1979 caseload was 20.2% law, 37.9% equity, 29.3% felony, and 12.5% misdemeanor. Compared to the state's distribution, the greatest variance was in the criminal caseload where the state percentage of felonies was 24.5 and of misdemeanors 17.5. The Twenty-Sixth Circuit handled a higher percentage of felony cases and a correspondingly lower percentage of misdemeanors.

Jury trials totaled 188 in 1979, 15 less than 1978's 203. There were 224 jury trials in 1977. Jury trials occupied a total of 191 days in 1979. The circuit averaged 69 jury trials per judge considerably above the state mean of 42.

Trial dates were assigned for 222 civil cases, 85 or 38.3% of which were set more than ninety days ahead. Of the 706 criminal cases set for trial, 42.9% or 303 were not set for the present term. The history of terminations revealed that 55.8% of the civil cases were concluded within one year of filing. Of the 1,334 criminal dispositions, 70.5% were concluded within five months.

TWENTY-SEVENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Twenty-Seventh Judicial Circuit serves the southwestern counties of Carroll, Floyd, Grayson, Montgomery, Pulaski, Wythe, and the cities of Galax and Radford. The circuit in 1979 was authorized three judgeships and was served by Judges R. William Arthur, Kenneth I. Devore, and Dale W. LaRue. Judge Arthur sat in Floyd, Montgomery, and Radford City, while Judge LaRue held court primarily in Carroll and Grayson Counties.

The population of the circuit as determined by the 1970 census was 165,040 and the 1978 population was recently estimated by the Tayloe Murphy Institute at 186,200. The circuit's 1980 population was projected at 192,600. Montgomery County was the largest county in terms of population with 59,800 and is expected to grow to approximately 63,200 by 1980. The population per judge, based on the 1978 population data, was approximately 62,067 which ranked eighth among the thirty-one circuits. The state average per judge was 47,666.

The 1978 caseload was 3,752 commenced cases which was approximately 17.7% higher than the 1977 total. In 1979, the commenced caseload of 3,797 changed very little from the previous year. The criminal caseload rose by approximately 4% from 1,531 cases in 1978 to 1,589 in 1979. These additional 58 cases were not sufficient to account for much of an overall increase. Within the circuit, Montgomery, Pulaski, and Wythe counties experienced moderate increases of 9.0%, 6.4%, and 8.6% respectively. The caseloads of Grayson and Radford declined significantly by 20.1% and 12.2% respectively. Floyd County's commenced cases rose 4.3% and Carroll County's decreased by 4.9%. The three judges commenced an average of 1,266 cases per judge which was higher than both the rural and state means of 1,185 and 1,214 respectively. The circuit ranked seventh among the seventeen rural circuits and thirteenth among all thirty-one.

The composition of the circuit's 1979 commenced caseload was 16.8% law, 41.4% equity, 27.6% felony, and 14.2% misdemeanor. These percentages vary somewhat from the 1979 state distribution of 22.4% law, 35.3% equity, 24.5% felony, and 17.5% misdemeanor.

In 1979 the circuit concluded 3,525 cases, 33 cases less than in 1978. Terminations on a statewide basis increased by 6%. The Twenty-Seventh's pending caseload at the close of 1979 was 2,616.

Jury trials totaled 133 in 1979, ten less than the preceeding year. The three judges averaged 44 jury trials each for the year which was similar to the state mean of 42.

In assigning trial dates for 356 law cases, 116 or 32.6% were given dates more than ninety days ahead. On the criminal side 1,478 cases were set for trial. Of these, 412 or 27.9% could not be set for the present term. The history of terminated cases revealed that 58.5% of the 2,018 civil dispositions were concluded within one year. Of the 1,507 criminal terminations, less than 10% took longer than five months to terminate.

TWENTY-EIGHTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Twenty-Eighth Judicial Circuit serves the counties of Smyth and Washington and the city of Bristol. The 1979 authorization for the circuit was two judges. Judges J. Aubrey Matthews and Wayne L. Bell are the resident judges.

The population of the circuit in 1970 was 87,041 and the Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the 1978 population at 94,800. The Department of Planning and Budget projected the 1980 population at 97,100. The population per judge based on the 1978 estimate was 47,400 which was consistent with the state average of 47,666.

The circuit commenced 1,976 cases in 1979 which represented a 10.6% increase over 1978's 1,786 new cases. The civil caseload remained constant. Thus a 17.4% rise in the circuit's criminal caseload was primarily responsible for the overall increase. Criminal cases totaled 602 in 1978 and 707 in 1979. An additional 137 felony cases in 1979 accounted for all of the criminal increase since misdemeanors remained constant. Within the circuit, Bristol's caseload was essentially unchanged from 1978 while Smyth County's increased by a modest 5.1%. Most of the circuit's growth in caseload occurred in Washington County where new civil cases rose 12.3% from 488 in 1978 to 548 in 1979, and the criminal caseload more than doubled from 82 cases in 1978 to 173 in 1979. Felony cases more than tripled, numbering 33 in 1978 and increasing by 77 to total 110 in 1979.

The two judges commenced an average of 988 cases each in 1979, well below the state and rural means of 1,214 and 1,185, respectively. The circuit ranked fifteenth among the seventeen rural circuits and twenty-fifth among all thirty-one.

The composition of the 1979 caseload was 20.5% law, 43.7% equity, 24.5% felony, and 11.2% misdemeanor. Consistent with the rising felony caseload, there was a variance from the 1978 composition of 22.1% law, 44.2% equity, 19.4% felony, and 12.4% misdemeanor. The circuit in 1979 had a higher percentage of equity cases when compared with the state's 35.3%, and a lower percentage of misdemeanor cases, 11.2 compared with 17.5.

In 1979, the circuit terminated 1,825 cases which represented a 2.7% increase over 1978's 1,777 cases. At the close of 1979 the pending caseload was 1,562.

There were 76 jury trials in 1977, 117 in 1978, and 92 in 1979. The two judges spent a total of 79 days hearing jury proceedings and averaged 46 jury trials each for the year. This average was consistent with the state mean of 42.

In assigning trial dates for 301 law cases, only 46 or 15.3% could not be set within ninety days. Of the 571 criminal cases set for trial only four were not given dates in the present term. The history of terminated cases revealed that 64.6% or 728 of the 1,127 civil dispositions were concluded within one year. Of the 698 criminal terminations, 81.1% were disposed of within five months of filing.

TWENTY-NINTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Twenty-Ninth Judicial Circuit serves the southwestern Virginia counties of Bland, Buchanan, Dickenson, Giles, Russell, and Tazewell. The circuit had three authorized judgeships. The circuit judges were Nicholas E. Persin, Glyn R. Phillips, and Robert Lee Powell.

The population of the circuit decreased by 10.9% during the 1960's. This trend was reversed during the period from 1970 to 1978. The population grew from 134,661 in 1970 to 157,200 in 1978 as estimated by the Tayloe Murphy Institute. This represented a 16.7% increase. The circuit's population was projected to reach 162,600 by 1980. The population per judge of the circuit based on the 1978 figure was 52,400 compared with a state average of 47,666. This ranked the circuit twelfth among the thirty-one circuits, highest ranked first.

The 1979 commenced caseload was 3,543, essentially unchanged from the previous year's 3,484 cases. Within the circuit, the caseload of Bland and Giles counties increased significantly by 22.8% and 25.7%, respectively. Buchanan's number of commenced cases declined by 6.1% while the caseloads of Dickenson, Russell, and Tazewell remained stable. Caseload per judge in 1979 was 1,181, almost identical to the rural average of 1,185. The circuit ranked eighth among the seventeen rural circuits and seventeenth among all thirty-one.

The composition of the 1979 caseload was 32.0% law, 31.8% equity, 17.4% felony, and 18.8% misdemeanor. This distribution varied considerably from the state's 22.4% law, 35.3% equity, 24.5% felony, and 17.5% misdemeanor. Law cases formed a much higher percentage of commenced cases for the circuit; felony cases were lower, while the equity and misdemeanor percentages were similar to the state figures.

The circuit terminated 3,332 in 1979, 371 more dispositions than in 1978, representing a 12.5% increase. At the close of 1979 the pending caseload was 3,704.

The judges of the circuit heard 149 trials in 1979, an average of 71 per judge, well above the state mean of 42. They spent a total of 186 days hearing those trials.

Trial dates were assigned to 606 law cases, 78 of which were set more than ninety days ahead. Of the 1,240 criminal cases set for trial, 27.1% or 336 could not be given dates within the present term. The history of terminations revealed that half of the civil cases were concluded within one year. On the criminal side, 74.0% of the 1,272 dispositions were terminated within five months of filing.

THIRTIETH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Thirtieth Judicial Circuit consists of the counties of Lee, Scott, and Wise. The Wise County Circuit Court also serves the city of Norton. The circuit was authorized two judgeships. Judges M. M. Long, Jr., and S. W. Coleman, III, serve in the circuit.

The 1960 U. S. Census reported the circuit's population as 100,212. By 1970 the population had fallen to 84,815. In 1978, the Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated that the circuit had a total population of 98,600. The 1978 population per judge for the Thirtieth was 49,300 and ranked the circuit fifteenth in a statewide comparison of all thirty-one circuits.

The circuit commenced 2,799 cases in 1979 compared with 2,245 in 1978. This represented a 24.7% increase. The 1978 caseload had increased over 1977 by 18.7%. Both the civil and criminal caseloads rose significantly. Civil filings were up 13.5% with the largest portion of the increase coming from an additional 169 divorce cases. Criminal cases rose from 738 in 1978 to 1,089 in 1979, an increase of 47.6%. The felony caseload more than doubled in 1979 from 231 to 484. Significant increases occurred in the caseloads of Lee and Scott counties, 11.1% and 14.1%, respectively. The caseload of Wise County rose considerably, 33.2% or by 439 cases. Civil filings in Wise were up by 12.1%, but the largest amount of the increase was the result of an 84.0% rise on the criminal side from 388 to 714. Of the 326 additional cases, 265 were felonies.

The caseload per judge for 1979 was 1,400 which was well above the state and rural averages of 1,214 and 1,185 respectively. The circuit ranked third among the seventeen rural circuits and sixth among all thirty-one.

The composition of the 1979 caseload was 26.2% law, 38.5% equity, 17.3% felony, and 21.4% misdemeanor. Despite the significant increase in the number of felonies, the circuit commenced a significantly lower percentage of felony cases than did the state (24.5%).

Judges Long and Coleman disposed of 2,710 cases in 1979, 976 or 56.3% more than in 1978. Terminations rose 15.9% from 1977 to 1978. However, due to the sharp increases in commenced caseloads, the pending caseload has continued to rise reaching 4,086 at the close of 1979.

In 1979 there were 220 jury trials, an average of 110 for each judge. This figure was the highest among all thirty-one circuits and more than double the state mean of 42 jury trials per judge. Altogether, the judges of the Thirtieth spent a total of 196 days hearing those jury trials.

Trial dates were assigned for 857 law actions. Of these, 354 or 41.3% had to be set more than ninety days ahead. In criminal cases, 1,698 trial dates were set. Of this number, only 9.6% or 154 were not set for the present term. The history of terminations revealed that 44.4% of the 1,699 civil cases were concluded within one year. On the criminal side, 61.4% were disposed of within five months of filing. An additional 22.8% were terminated within six to nine months.

THIRTY-FIRST JUDICIAL CIRCUIT

The Thirty-First Judicial Circuit was formed July 1, 1977, by separating Prince William County and the cities of Manassas and Manassas Park from the Nineteenth Circuit. The 1977 Legislature redesignated the circuit and provided for an authorization of the two judgeships for the Thirty-First Circuit. Judges Arthur W. Sinclair and Percy Thornton, Jr. were the resident judges for 1979. The 1980 General Assembly created an additional judgeship to handle the workload of the Thirty-First and elected H. Selwyn Smith to fill the new position. Judge Sinclair announced his intention to retire August 1, 1980, and Judge Herman Whisenant, Jr. Will transfer from the J&DR court to fill the vacancy.

The population of the circuit was estimated at 156,000 in 1978 by the Tayloe Murphy Institute. The 1960 census gave the population as 50,164; thus the area has more than tripled its population in the last two decades. It is projected to reach 169,100 by 1980. The population per judge was 78,000, ranking Prince William first among the thirty-one circuits in that comparison. The state mean was 47,666.

In 1979, the Thirty-First Circuit commenced 2,970 cases, up 5.4% since the previous year. Over the past ten years, the circuit has experienced a significantly rising caseload with 1978's increase equal to 16.8%. The criminal caseload actually dropped 3.9% in 1979. Civil filings, however, rose by 9.3% to account for the overall increase. The 1979 caseload per judge of 1,485 was well above both the urban and state figures of 1,235 and 1,214, respectively. Prince William ranked third among the urban circuits and fourth in the state on this comparison.

The composition of the 1979 caseload was 29.2% law, 43.9% equity, 18.3% felony, and 8.6% misdemeanor. The circuit's distribution was predominantly civil, 73.1%, compared with the state percentage of 57.8%.

The two judges of the Thirty-First terminated 2,398 cases in 1979, 6.4% less than in 1978. Since dispositions again were less than the number of commenced cases, the pending caseload rose to 3,439 at the close of 1979.

Jury trials totaled 56 in 1979, nineteen less than in 1978. The judges averaged 28 each which was well below the state mean of 42. They occupied a total of 82 days hearing those trials.

Trial dates were assigned to 300 law actions and 710 criminal cases. Almost all (292 or 97.0%) of the civil cases were given dates more than ninety days ahead. Well over half of the criminal cases (487 or 68.6%) could not be set within the present term. The history of terminations revealed 793 or 47.2% of the 1,682 civil cases were concluded within one year of filing. On the criminal side, 65.9% of the 716 dispositions were cases disposed of within five months. An additional 21.1% were terminated from six to nine months of filing.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF VIRGINIA DISTRICT COURT SYSTEM

In 1973, the courts not of record were reorganized to form a unified District Court System of limited jurisdiction. Chapter 546 of the 1973 Virginia Acts of Assembly, which was approved on March 20, 1973, provided for the amendment, addition, and repeal of a number of sections of the Code of Virginia so as to establish a system of general and juvenile and domestic relations district courts within the framework of the unified court structure. County courts, city municipal courts, and county and city juvenile and domestic relations courts were redesignated as district courts. Town municipal courts and other town courts having general civil and criminal jurisdiction were abolished. Section 16.1-69.6 provided for the administration of the new district courts under a system of geographic districts. District lines were drawn on the basis of circuit lines creating thirty-two districts.

As a result of Chapter 546, there are only two types of courts under the present district system: Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Courts which assume the jurisdiction and function of pre-1973 county, city and regional juvenile and domestic relations courts, and General District Courts which perform the work not delegated to the Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Courts.

Section 16.1-69.9 provides for the transition to a full-time judiciary in the district court system, requiring that by June 30, 1980, all judges be full-time and elected to six-year terms by the General Assembly. Until that time, part-time judges are appointed by the circuit judges serving in the respective area. Each full-time district court judge is to be paid a salary equal to ninety percent of a circuit court judge's salary. Full-time district court judges selected for a term commencing on or after July 1, 1973, were prohibited from engaging in the practice of law. In addition, every full-time judge and substitute judge of a district court was required at the time of his appointment, or election, to be licensed to practice law in Virginia and to reside within the boundaries of the district in which he serves. District court judges are permitted to serve more than one local district court of the same type (juvenile and domestic relations or general district court) but not both a juvenile and domestic relations district court and a general district court.

Section 16.1-69.10 set forth procedures for the determination of the number of judges required in each district. The statute provided that the General Assembly would make such determinations based upon recommendations made annually by the Committee on District Courts. Pursuant to that provision, the Committee on District Courts, through the Office of the Executive Secretary of the Supreme Court, conducted similar evaluations of judicial workloads in all judicial districts. Three judgeships were added effective July 1, 1979: one each in the Twelfth and the Twenty-Fourth Juvenile and Domestic Relations Courts and one in the Third General District Court. In 1979, the Committee on District Courts recommended to the General Assembly that additional judgeships be authorized for the following districts: one each for the Second and Nineteenth Juvenile and Domestic Relations Courts and one each for the Fourth, the Twelfth, and the Twenty-Fourth General District Courts. Based upon the Committee's recommendation, the 1980 General Assembly approved the creation of five new judgeships to be effective July 1, 1980.

Sections 16.1-69.30 through 16.1-69.36 were enacted to govern the administration and supervision of the district courts. The major responsibility for the immediate supervision of the district courts was given to the Committee on District Courts. Other aspects of this supervision were made the responsibility of the district court judges themselves. The district judges select their own chief district judge, and Section 16.1-69.35 allowed the chief district judges to assign other judges in their district to handle the work of judges unable to hold court. It also charged the chief judges with the responsibility to determine when the district courts or divisions of such courts should be open for the transaction of business. The statute also permits a chief judge to request the Executive Secretary of the Supreme Court to temporarily assign a general district or juvenile district judge from one district to serve in another.

Section 16.1-69.30 declared the district courts subordinate to the Supreme Court and subject to the administration of the Chief Justice. In section 16.1-69.32 the Supreme Court was directed to formulate uniform rules of practice and procedure in the district courts, these to be the only rules in all the district courts in Virginia. Much of the staffing of the district courts was made the responsibility of the Committee on District Courts. No statutory changes expressly declared that personnel of the district system be state employees. However, Section 16.1-69.46 indicated that salaries of clerks and personnel of the district courts were to be primarily payable by the state, although all district court personnel are appointed by, serve at the pleasure of, and are subject to removal by the chief judge of the district court in which they serve (Section 16.1-69.39). The Committee on District Courts was made responsible for establishing guidelines and determining the necessity for the employment of substitute judges, clerks, deputy clerks, and all other personnel of the district courts and to authorize the employment of substitute judges, clerks, deputy clerks, and all other personnel of the district courts and to authorize the employment of such personnel by the courts. The statute requires that the Executive Secretary assist the Committee in the performance of its duties. The district system is state financed except for the provision of physical court facilities by localities.

YEAR IN SUMMARY

Virginia's District Courts reported a total of 1,699,919 new general district cases and 186,614 new juvenile and domestic relations cases in 1979. The additional 103,265 new general district cases represented an increase of 6.5% and reflected growth in all three categories of cases: criminal (up 4.9%), traffic (up 1.6%), and civil (up 18.4%). The expansion in the juvenile and domestic relations courts of 10,562 more new cases was equivalent to a 6.0% increase. The rise in new cases was accompanied by an increase in the total number of hearings, up 117,966 or 6.3% to reach 1,997,001. The traffic infraction law which allowed for the prepayment of fines and the waiver of hearings was responsible for a slight decline in the 1978 hearings total. Traffic hearings in 1979 remained constant although there was a 5.9% increase in the number of traffic hearings waived. Criminal and civil hearings rose to account for the overall increase in hearings. A 6.3% rise in hearings accompanied the increase in juvenile and domestic relations cases.

The change in the clerical workload of the courts was best represented by the number of transactions handled. Transactions account for the number of times cases are placed on the court's docket, regardless of whether the cases are heard or the hearings are waived. Hearings and waived hearings were counted as well because regardless of whether the case was heard or not, the papers must be pulled for court, the case placed on the docket, the disposition recorded, and the papers refiled. The 2,378,741 general district transactions during 1979 were 149,555 or 6.7% more than the previous year. The number of juvenile and domestic relations transactions, 371,337, also rose by 26,450 or 7.7% over 1978.

THE DISTRICT COURT STATISTICS

The statistics used in this report are derived from the Uniform Docketing and Caseload Reporting System (UDS). The year 1979 was the fourth year this system has been in operation. It utilizes a system of uniform docketing sheets to provide a consistent method of counting cases. Each court uses these standard docket sheets which have a tear-off section. The tear-off section is completed line by line for each case on the docket. The tear-off data is then compiled and used to prepare the court's monthly summary report to the Office of the Executive Secretary. Four major items are tallied: new cases, hearings, hearings waived, and dispositions.

The first time the case is placed on the docket it is counted as a new case. On the second and all subsequent hearings the case is counted as a continuance. Each time the case is heard it is counted as a hearing. If the case is dismissed prior to court or the hearing is waived, the docket tear-off sheet is coded as such and a hearing is not counted. In addition, the coding of the tear-off provides more detailed information about the case, such as the type of hearing and whether or not the case received a final disposition.

It is quite natural to attempt to compare the caseloads of both clerks' offices and judges with others. Caution should be exercised. First, clerks' offices are very different in size and equipment. Larger offices are able to specialize and may have computer assistance. Smaller offices have one or two clerks who must be "experts" in their fields. They are seldom equipped with more than a typewriter and an adding machine. Similar problems occur in attempting to compare judges. Judges who sit in rural districts must often travel to as many as five or six courts. These judges are faced with not only their work on the bench but also the administrative problems of numerous courts. Judges in urban areas, while generally sitting in only one court, must deal with a large number of attorneys and hold court in both the mornings and the afternoons. Because of these differences, courts are grouped as to whether they are urban or rural. The averages and figures given for each district and court provide only a starting point for more detailed comparisons. Case mix is important; some case types are known to take longer than others. The caseload figures contained in this report are primarily used as a planning tool. The figures should not be used in a vacuum with respect to decision making.

STAFFING THE DISTRICT COURT SYSTEM

The District Court System is divided into thirty-two judicial districts composed of two hundred and eight district court clerk's offices. Of these offices, 39% were general district, 35% were juvenile and domestic relations, and 26% were combined offices which provided services to both general district and juvenile and domestic relations courts. At the close of 1979 the district courts were authorized a total of 845 personnel. Of this total, 838 were permanent employee positions. The remaining seven positions were wage employees who were considered part-time. The increase of 22 personnel from 823 at the end of 1978 to 845 represented an increase of 2.7%. The total gain of personnel from 1975 of 753.9 to 845 in 1979 represented an annual growth rate of three percent. The clerk's offices themselves ranged in size from Fairfax County General District Court with 43.5 employess to small rural courts which employ only one person.

In 1979, the District Court System was served by a total of one hundred and sixty-three judges. One hundred and forty-eight were considered full-time while the remaining fifteen were considered part-time. As of July 1, 1980, there will no longer by any part-time judges. Many of those judges now in part-time positions were elected by the 1980 Legislature to fill full-time vacancies. Of the 163 judges, 98 served in the general district courts while the remaining 65 handled juvenile and domestic relations cases.

It should also be noted that the district courts utilized substitute judges for disqualifications and absences. During 1979, the general district courts utilized 2,492.5 substitute judge days while the juvenile courts used 1,515 substitute days. The total, 4,007.5 substitute days, was 2.4% less than 4,106 substitute days used in 1978. At a per diem rate of $133.50 per day, this amounted to $535,001.25 in 1979.

GENERAL DISTRICT COURTS

The general district courts hear three types of cases: criminal, traffic, and civil. During 1979, the general district courts reported a total of 1,699,919 new cases, 1,997,001 hearings, 2,378,741 transactions and 1,629,706 dispositions. The increase of 103,265 new cases was the result of growth in all three categories. Most significant was the 18.4% jump in civil cases which amounted to 74,895 more cases in 1979. Criminal cases rose by 4.9% or 13,979 while the traffic new caseload increased slightly by 1.6% or 14,391 cases. The 6.3% increase in hearings corresponded closely with the increase in new cases. The number of civil hearings increased significantly by 15.1%, accounting for 78,674 of the 117,966 additional hearings. Criminal hearings rose by 7.1% or 34,755 while traffic hearings remained constant, increasing by only 0.5%. The overall ratio of hearings to new cases in 1979 was 1.17 which was consistent with 1978's 1.18.

The composition of the 1979 state general district caseload was 17.6% criminal, 54.0% traffic, and 28.4% civil. When compared with the 1978 distribution of 17.9% criminal, 56.6% traffic, and 25.5% civil, it should be noted that due to large increases, the proportion of civil cases has risen in 1979 as it did from 1977 to 1978. Reciprocally, the criminal and traffic percentages declined. The 1979 distribution of hearings was 26.3% criminal, 43.6% traffic, and 30.1% civil, reflecting the higher ratio of hearings to new cases in the criminal and civil categories.

Three districts, the Thirteenth (Richmond), the Fourth (Norfolk), and the Nineteenth (Fairfax/Falls Church)—accounted for 26.0% of the state's total general district caseload. The top five urban districts which also include Virginia Beach and Newport News made up 34.0% of the state's general district caseload.

Criminal

The total criminal caseload for the state was 299,819, representing a 4.9% increase over the previous year's 285,840 criminal cases. Hearings rose 7.1% to total 524,308 for the year. A 1979 ratio of hearings to new cases of 1.75 was consistent with 1978's 1.71. The number of dispositions, 291,640, was 8.1% higher than the 1978 figure. The ratio of dispositions to new cases, .97, indicated the courts were able to handle the increased caseload. Hearings waived prior to court amounted to 22,371 and were only 7.5% of the new caseload.

The courts reported the following breakdown of criminal hearings: 4.3% review progress hearings; 22.3% bond arraignment, counsel appointment hearings; 7.4% preliminary hearings; 31.5% adjudicatory hearings with testimony; 32.5% adjudicatory hearings without testimony; and 1.8% dispositional hearings. This breakdown has remained stable since 1976.

The state average criminal caseload per judge for 1979 was 3,104 new cases and 5,428 hearings which was above 1978's 3,012 new cases and 5,159 hearings.

Traffic

The general district courts reported a traffic caseload of 918,037 new cases, 871,192 hearings, 1,178,660 transactions, and 886,348 dispositions during 1979. The new caseload reflected an increase of 14,391 additional cases or 1.6% over the 1978 level of 903,646. The slight increase in traffic cases was accompanied by almost no increase in hearings, 0.5% to amount to only 4,537 additional hearings. Under the traffic infraction law passed in 1977, 307,468 hearings were waived, an increase of 17,167 or 5.9% over 1978. As a result of this law, there was a 26.1% savings in total hearings. The ratio of hearings to new cases of 0.95 was indicative of the large number of traffic hearings being waived when compared to the 1977 ratio of 1.14.

The ratio of dispositions to new cases of .97 compared with a 1978 ratio of .96 and 1977's .95.

A percentage distribution of hearings by type revealed 3.0% review progress hearings; 4.5% bond, arraignment, counsel appointment hearings; 0.1% preliminary hearings; 44.6% hearings with testimony; 44.6% hearings without testimony; and 3.1% dispositional hearings.

The state average number of traffic cases and hearings per full-time equivalent judge was 9,503 new cases and 9,019 hearings. These figures were comparable to the previous year, only 0.2% and 1.2% less, respectively.

Civil

The number of new civil cases, 482,063, reported in 1979 was significantly higher than the previous year. The additional 74,895 cases represented a jump of 18.4%. This followed last year's sharp rise in the civil caseload of 14.2%. The trend may be in part attributable to the economy—as the level of prices increase, people tend to rely more heavily on credit. Thus inflation may contribute to the probability of increased delinquent accounts and therefore increased litigation.

Civil hearings in 1979 numbered 601,501, accompanying the increase in new cases by rising 15.1%. Hearings were divided as 47.4% with testimony and 52.6% without testimony. In addition, 51,921 cases were dismissed or withdrawn prior to court, an increase of 11,437 or 28.3% over 1978. This figure was not reflected in the total number of hearings. The ratio of hearings to new cases of 1.25 was somewhat less than 1978's 1.28. The ratio of dispositions to new cases of .94 was also less than 1978's .96 and compared to a criminal and a civil ratio in 1979 of .97.

Civil transactions totaled 653,442. The majority, 62.4% or 407,934 involved suits in debt with garnishments amounting to 13.0% or 17.1%.

The state averages per full-time equivalent judge of 4,990 new cases and 6,227 hearings represented significant increases of 16.3% and 13.0% respectively.

JUVENILE AND DOMESTIC RELATIONS COURTS

During 1979, the juvenile and domestic relations courts reported a total of 186.614 new cases, 361,079 hearings, 371,337 transactions, and 173,388 dispositions. The 6.0% rise in new cases over 1978 was the result of increases in both the juvenile and adult caseloads of 3.7% and 12.0%, respectively. Accompanying an increased number of new cases was a 6.3% rise in hearings or an additional 21,447.

Juvenile new cases for 1979 totaled 131,363 and accounted for 70.4% of the total caseload. Along with the small 3.7% rise in new cases was a 5.0% increase in juvenile hearings to total 245,973 for the year. The distribution of juvenile hearings by type was 7.6% review progress hearings; 15.8% bond, detention, and counsel appointment hearings; 2.0% transfer hearings; 44.0% adjudicatory hearings with testimony; 14.8% adjudicatory hearings without testimony; and 15.8% dispositional hearings. Adjudicatory hearings thus accounted for 58.8% of all juvenile hearings while pre- and post-trial hearings accounted for the remaining 41.2%. The clerk's office also processed 4,843 cases in which hearings were waived. These are counted in with juvenile transactions. The ratio of hearings to new cases was 1.87 which was consistent with 1978's 1.85.

Of the 254,698 juvenile transactions reported in 1979, 49.6% were criminal in nature, while 24.9% involved juvenile traffic infractions. The percentage of status and custody hearings were 5.4% and 20.1%, respectively. This compared to a 1978 percentage distribution of 47.4% criminal, 26.9% traffic, 7.0% status and 18.7% custody. Criminal and custody transactions increased by 12,960 (11.4%) and 6,565

The adult new caseload increased by a significant 12.0% to reach 55,251 accompanied by a 9.3% rise in hearings to total 115,106. The distribution by type of hearing was 20.4% review progress; 12.3% bond, arraignment, and counsel appointment hearings; 3.2% preliminary hearings; 41.0% adjudicatory hearings with testimony; and 18.0% adjudicatory hearings without testimony; and 5.1% dispositional hearings. Thus 5.9% of the adult hearings involved adjudication of cases while 41.0% involved pre- and post-trial hearings. The ratio of adult hearings to new cases was 2.08, somewhat less than 1978's 2.14. In 1979, 1,534 adult hearings were waived, more than triple the number waived in 1978.

Adult transactions which include those hearings waived numbered 116,639 in 1979. Of these, 56,626 or 48.6% were criminal transactions while 60,014 or 51.4% involved non-support. There were 4,253 or 8.1% more criminal transactions than in 1978 and 6,614 or 12.4% more non-support.

The average caseload per full-time equivalent juvenile and domestic relations judge was 2,976 new cases and 5,759 hearings. These figures represented slight increases of 2.3% and 2.6%, respectively, over 1978. The 1979 ratio of dispositions to new cases was .92 which was somewhat higher than 1978's .90.

URBAN VS. RURAL DISTRICTS

The reasons for grouping the districts as to urban and rural were previously stated. Table E provides a comparison of caseloads and hearings per general district judges in urban districts, while Table F list this same information for rural districts. The average caseload for an urban general district judge in 1979 was 19,915 new cases and 24,451 hearings. The urban averages in 1978 were 19,486 new cases and 23,692 hearings. The rural general district judges averaged 15,271 new cases and 16,878 hearings while the 1978 values were 14,191 and 16,878 respectively.

The urban district juvenile and domestic relations judges averaged 3,260 new cases and 6,475 hearings in 1979. Both averages were above the 1978 values of 3,215 new cases and 6,370 hearings. The rural juvenile and domestic relations judges averaged 2,684 new cases and 5,022 hearings in 1979. These values also increased over the previous year's means of 2,589 new cases and 4,819 hearings.

The 1979 composition of the general district caseload between the urban and rural districts is shown on Chart VII. The rural districts had a larger percentage of traffic cases, 58.4%, compared to the urban districts, 50.7%. The urban districts's civil percentages were higher, 32.8%, versus 22.5% for the rural districts. The criminal percentages were fairly close, 16.5% for the urban districts and 19.1% for the rural districts.

COMMITTEE ON DISTRICT COURTS

The organization of a court system should serve the court's basic task of determining cases justly, promptly and economically. To this end, the organizational structure should facilitate sound, financial administration; efficient use of manpower, facilities, and equipment; and continuous planning for the future. The Constitution of Virginia places the responsibility of achieving this goal on the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Virginia. To assist the Chief Justice in carrying out that responsibility relative to the District Court System, the General Assembly created the Committee on District Courts.

The Committee on District Courts was established pursuant to § 16.1-69.33, Code of Virginia, 1950, as amended, and is composed of nine members.

—Chairman of the House Courts of Justice Committee

—Two members from each of the Courts of Justice Committees to be appointed by the Chairmen

—A Circuit Court Judge, a General District Court Judge, and a Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Court Judge, each to be appointed by and serve at the pleasure of the Chief Justice

FIRST JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The city of Chesapeake is the only locality in the First Judicial District. The district was authorized two general district court judgeships in 1979 filled by Judge Forbes and Judge Gibson. The district also had two juvenile and domestic relations judges, Judge Grissom and Judge Leftwich. Judge Leftwich is designated to assist one day each week in the Fifth Judicial District. Thus his time in the First was equivalent to only .8 of a full-time judge and Chesapeake's caseload per judge was calculated by dividing the total by 1.8 FTE judges. The judges in the First used a total of 94 substitute days in 1979, 19 more than the previous year.

The district's total population was estimated at 112,500 while the number of juveniles in Chesapeake was 37,100. The population per general district judge of 56,250 was somewhat higher than the state average of 53,291. The juvenile population per judge of 20,611 was below the state value of 23,818.

The new general district caseload in 1979 of 33,755 represented a 6.6% increase over the 31,664 new cases in 1977. This rise in new caseload was accompanied by a corresponding increase in the number of hearings, up 7.5% to reach 44,122. The hearings per case ratio of 1.31 was consistent with that of 1978 and somewhat higher than the state ratio of 1.17.

While all three categories experienced increases, the most significant change occurred in the criminal caseload where new cases were up 13.7% and hearings by 18.2%. A 9.7% rise in the civil new caseload was responsible for 1,009 additional new cases, almost half of the overall increase. Chesapeake's civil caseload of 11,402 was the tenth highest reported in the state. The traffic category remained fairly stable with new cases up by 1.9% and hearings by 3.4%.

The average caseload per judge was 16,878 new cases and 22,061 hearings, which ranked the district ninth among the fourteen urban districts whose average was 19,915 new cases and 24,451 hearings.

The 1979 general district caseload was composed of 19.5% criminal, 46.7% traffic, and 3.8% civil. Compared with the state's 17.5% criminal, 54.0% traffic, and 28.4% civil, Chesapeake had a significantly higher proportion of civil cases and a correspondingly lower traffic percentage.

The juvenile and domestic relations caseload for 1979 amounted to 4,691 new cases and 11,023 hearings. New cases were up 6.5% over 1978 while hearings remained stable. Responsible for almost the entire overall increase was a 17.7% increase in the adult caseload which resulted in 288 additional new cases. The new caseload was composed of 59.9% juvenile and 40.1% adult cases compared to the state percentage of 70.4% juvenile and 29.6% adult. The hearings per case ratio of 2.35 compared with a state mean of 1.93.

Chesapeake's two judges (with Judge Leftwich equivalent to a .8) averaged 2,606 new cases and 6,124 hearings which ranked the district eighth among the fourteen urban districts. The urban mean was 3,269 new cases and 6,475 hearings. Chesapeake's J&DR caseload of 4,691 was the ninth highest in the state.

SECOND JUDICIAL DISTRICT

Virginia Beach is the only locality designated as the Second Judicial District. The district was authorized three general district and two juvenile and domestic relations judges in 1979. The three general district judges are Robert L. Simpson, Constantine A. Spanoulis, and John B. Preston. Judge Preston replaced P. B. White who retired January 31, 1979. The two juvenile judges are Fred P. Aucamp and J. Davis Reed. Judge Kenneth N. Whitehurst, Jr., was elected to the Circuit Court on February 1, 1979, and Judge Reed's appointment was effective March 1, 1979. The 1980 General Assembly created a third juvenile judgeship to become effective July 1, 1980.

The population of Virginia Beach has continued to grow rapidly. The 1978 estimated population was 242,000 which equaled 80,667 per general district judge. The population per judge was considerably above the state average of 53,291. Virginia Beach ranked second among the thirty-two districts on this measure. The juvenile population of the city was estimated at 78,000. The number of juveniles per judge was 39,000 which ranked third and was again above the state average of 23,818.

After a very sharp rise in the general district caseload between 1976 and 1977, the caseload rose only 3.3% in 1979. The 1979 caseload of 69,661 new cases and 85,858 hearings represented no change in new cases while the number of hearings was up 9.4%. The hearings per case ratio of 1.23 was more than 1978's 1.13 and compared to the state average of 1.17. A 26.5% increase in the civil category accounted for 3,611 additional cases. This sharp gain was offset by declines in both the criminal and traffic categories of 10.4% and 3.9%, respectively. Both traffic and civil hearings were up — traffic by 7.0% and civil by 27.1% while criminal hearings declined by 2.7%.

The mix of new cases for the district in 1979 was 21.9% criminal, 53.4% traffic, and 24.7% civil. Since 1977 there has been a gradual shift each year from traffic to civil. The state distribution of new cases for 1979 was 17.5% criminal, 54.0% traffic, and 28.4% civil. In 1979, Virginia Beach had the fourth highest criminal caseload in the state and the fifth highest caseload in both the traffic and civil categories.

In general district caseload per judge, the Second District ranked fourth among all thirty-two districts, averaging 23,220 new cases and 28,528 hearings per judge. These figures were above the urban mean of 19,915 new cases and 24,451 hearings.

The judges of the juvenile and domestic relations court handled 11,956 new cases and held 19,145 hearings in 1979. The number of cases was the second highest among all Virginia localities. New cases increased 6.6% over 1978 with 511 additional juvenile cases and 228 additional adult cases. Hearings experienced a similar increase of 6.1%. The average caseload per judge of 5,978 new cases and 9,573 hearings ranked the district highest in the state and was well above the 1979 urban mean of 3,260 new cases and 6,475 hearings. A third judgeship was created by the 1980 General Assembly to alleviate the workloads of Judges Aucamp and Reed.

JUDICIAL DISTRICT 2A

District 2A on the Virginia Eastern Shore consists of the counties of Accomack and Northampton. The district was authorized one full-time judge to handle both general and juvenile and domestic relations cases. Judge Wescott B. Northam was appointed by the 1979 General Assembly to replace George Willis, III, who had served the district first as a part-time judge and then as a full-time judge since July 1, 1978. Since Judge Northam handles both types of cases, he is equivalent to .7 of a full-time general district judge and .3 of a full-time J&DR judge. He used 5.5 substitute judge days in 1979.

The Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the 1978 total population of the two counties as 47,300 which was equal to 67,571 per general district F.T.E. judge. This figure was above the state average of 53,291, ranking the district first among all thirty-two districts. The juvenile population of 12,800 with a .3 equivalent judgeship equaled 42,667 persons per full-time J&DR judge, ranking the district second in this comparison.

The two general district courts reported 12,096 new cases, 10,884 hearings, and 12,038 dispositions in 1979. This was a 1,242 or 11.4% increase in new cases. Civil cases increased by 843 or 60.0% from 1978 with Accomack up 404 or 46.1% and Northampton's caseload rising by 439 or 82.8%. Criminal cases rose by 156 or 9.4%, attributable to a 130 case increase (12.7%) in Accomack. Judge Northam's caseload per judge (as a .7 F.T.E. judge) of 17,280 ranked him sixth among the thirty-two districts. This was considerably higher than the 15,271 mean for the eighteen rural districts.

Hearings rose by 1,157 or 11.9% with the largest increase of 938 or 55.2% in civil hearings. Accomack's civil hearings increased 39.6% and Northampton's rose by 78.4%. Hearings per the .7 F.T.E. judgeship of 15,549 was considerably lower than the 1,878 rural mean. The 0.90 hearings per case ratio was also significantly lower than the 1.10 rural ratio and the 1.17 state ratio. An increase of 83.2% or 158 criminal hearings waived contributed to the lower number of hearings and the resulting lower number of hearings per case.

The district's caseload composition of 15.3% criminal, 71.7% traffic, and 13.0% civil varied substantially in the traffic and civil categories from the state's distribution of 54.0% and 28.4%, respectively.

The juvenile and domestic relations courts handled 941 new cases, 1,264 hearings, and 889 dispositions. The new caseload rose by 377 cases or 6.8%. Juvenile cases rose by 314 or 34.2% and adult by 63 or 33.0%. Accomack's juvenile caseload more than doubled from 1978's with 259 additional cases. Northampton's juvenile cases increased by 32.5% (55) and adult cases declined by 17.7% (18). Hearings increased by 207 or 19.6% with a 22.6% or 173 hearings rise in juvenile and a 11.7% increase or 34 hearings in adult categories. Accomack accounted for the overall hearings increase with juvenile hearings up 171 or 40.6% and adult hearings higher by 73 or 53.7%. Northampton's number of juvenile hearings was unchanged while adult hearings decreased by 39 or 25.3% from 1978. The hearings per case ratio of 1.34 was lower than both the rural (1.87) and state (1.93) means.

Judge Northam averaged 3,137 cases as a .3 FTE J&DR judge which was significantly higher than the 2,684 rural mean. This ranked 2A seventh in this measure among rural districts. Hearings per judge were 4,213, correspondingly lower than the 5,022 case rural mean. The hearings per case ratio of 1.34 was also lower than the rural ratio of 1.87. The 66.1% juvenile and 33.9% adult distribution of new cases compared to the state's caseload composition of 70.4% and 29.6%, respectively.

THIRD JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The city of Portsmouth is the only locality in the third district. The district is currently authorized two general district and two juvenile and domestic relations judges. Donald H. Sandie and Gordon F. Marsh were the general district judges. Judge Marsh retired January 31, 1979, and was replaced by Stanley L. Morris. In addition, a third judgeship was created by the 1979 legislature effective July 1, 1979. Archie Elliott, Jr., was appointed to fill this position. Cecil W. Johnson and Von L. Piersall are the juvenile and domestic relations judges. During 1979, the five judges used a total of 45 substitute days, 6 in general and 39 in juvenile.

The Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the population of Portsmouth in 1978 at 107,900. The population per general district judge of 35,967 was significantly less than the state average per judge of 53,291. The city's juvenile population of 32,400 was 16,200 per judge. This was significantly below the state average of 23,818 and ranked the Third District twenty-eighth among the thirty-two districts in the Commonwealth.

The general district court reported 43,556 new cases and 55,136 hearings in 1979 which represented a 16.1% increase in new cases and a 13.8% rise in hearings over 1978. All three case categories experienced significant increases: criminal rose by 21.1%, traffic by 15.3%, and civil by 14.1%. With 10,181 criminal cases, Portsmouth had the seventh highest criminal caseload of all Virginia localities as well as the seventh highest civil caseload.

The new caseload composition of the Third District for 1979 was 23.4% criminal, 38.2% traffic, and 38.4% civil. This distribution varied considerably from the state percentages having a somewhat higher percentage of civil cases, 28.4%. Reciprocally, Portsmouth's proportion of traffic cases was considerably less than the state's 54.0%.

The three general district judges were actually equivalent to only 2.5 full-time judges in 1979, since Judge Elliott did not fill the new position until July 1, 1979. The caseload per judge in 1979 was 14,519 new cases and 18,379 hearings which ranked the district twelfth among the fourteen urban districts and twenty-second among all thirty-two. The urban mean for 1979 was 19,915 new cases and 24,451 hearings. Hearings per case averaged 1.27 which compared to an urban mean of 1.23.

The two judges of Portsmouth's juvenile and domestic relations court handled 3,178 new cases and held 4,757 hearings. These figures represented an 18.8% increase in new cases accommpanied by a 15.4% rise in hearings. A 27.4% jump in the juvenile caseload from 1,575 in 1978 to 2,006 in 1979 was primarily responsible for the overall increase. Juvenile hearings were up 22.8%. The adult caseload rose by 6.6%.

Cases in 1978 were distributed as 58.9% juvenile and 41.1% adult. Because of the sharp increase in the juvenile caseload, the 1979 composition shifted to 63.1% juvenile and 36.9% adult. Despite the higher proportion of juvenile cases, Portsmouth's percentage was still less than the state's 70.4%. In caseload per judge, Portsmouth ranked fourteenth or last among the urban districts with 1,589 new cases and 4,757 hearings per judge. The district's hearings per case ratio of 2.99 was well above the urban mean of 1.99.

FOURTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

Norfolk is the only locality in the Fourth Judicial District. The district was authorized four general district judgeships. The general district judges in 1979 were Vernon D. Hitchings, Jr., Joseph A. Jordan, Jr., Fred E. Martin, Jr., and William L. Shapero. Judge Hitchings retired January 31, 1980, and was replaced by Lawrence C. Lawless. The 1980 General Assembly approved a fifth judgeship for the general district court which will be filled by Leonard B. Sachs on July 1, 1980.

There are three juvenile and domestic relations judges authorized. These positions were held in 1979 by Judges Edwin A. Henry, James G. Martin, IV, and Lester V. Moore, Jr. The four district judges used 126 substitute days while the three juvenile judges used a total of 164 substitute days.

The total population of Norfolk was estimated at 280,200 persons in 1979. The district's population per general district judge of 70,050 ranked fourth among the thirty-two districts. The Tayloe Murphy Institute gave the approximate juvenile population as 71,200 or 23,733 per judge which was similar to the state average number of juveniles per J&DR judge of 23,818.

Norfolk's general district court is divided into three divisions. The Criminal Division reported 34,902 new cases and 52,220 hearings in 1979. These figures represented little change from the previous year. The traffic caseload of 63,045 was 8.4% or 5,743 cases less than in 1978. The Civil Division reported considerable growth with new cases up 27.5% from 39,548 in 1978 to 50,403 in 1979. This growth in the civil caseload more than offset the traffic decline to result in a 4.0% rise in the district's overall caseload. Hearings were up by 5.9%. Norfolk ranked first among Virginia's localities in new criminal cases, second in traffic, civil, and total caseload.

Of the 148,350 total new cases, the Criminal Division handled 23.5%, the Traffic 42.5%, and the Civil 34.0%. Due to the large increase in the number of civil cases and the decline in traffic, there was a shift from 1978's composition which had 48.2% traffic and 27.7% civil.

The average caseload per judge was 37,088 new cases and 43,101 hearings which ranked the Fourth District highest in the state in that comparison. Norfolk's new caseload per judge was more than double the state average of 17,598 and much higher than the urban mean of 19,915.

In 1979, the juvenile and domestic relations court reported 10,779 new cases and 21,532 hearings. The juvenile new caseload was up 5.6% while the adult new cases declined by 26% to result in a modest overall increase of 3.3%. In caseload per judge, Norfolk ranked fifth among the fourteen urban districts with 3,593 new cases and 7,177 hearings. This was above the 3,260 new cases and 6,475 hearings averaged by the urban judges. Norfolk ranked fourth highest among all Virginia localities in J&DR caseload.

FIFTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Fifth Judicial District consists of the counties of Isle of Wight and Southampton and the cities of Franklin and Suffolk. The district is authorized two general district and one juvenile and domestic relations judges. In 1979, the general district courts were served by one full-time judge, William W. Jones, and two part-time judges: Robert B. Edwards and T. B. Kingsbury, III. Effective July 1, 1980, Judge Edwards will fill the second full-time judgeship. Judge R. Baird Cabell handles the district's juvenile courts with some assistance from Judge Leftwich designated from the First District (Chesapeake). The judges of the Fifth District utilized a total of 76 substitute judge days.

The population of the Fifth District was estimated at 94,000 in 1978. The population per full-time equivalent judge (2.0) of 47,000 was below the state average of 53,291. The juvenile population of the area was placed at 29,200. The juvenile population per judge of 24,353 was above the state average of 23,818 and ranked twelfth among the Commonwealth's thirty-two judicial districts.

The general district courts of the Fifth District experienced a 7.7% caseload growth for 1979 with 37,426 new cases, 2,685 more than in 1978. Hearings also rose 3.6% to total 47,862 for 1979. All three case categories experienced increases with criminal up 14.8%, traffic 5.5%, and civil 9.4%. Both counties actually had declining caseloads with Isle of Wight down 12.8% and Southampton down 1.7%. A 12.3% rise in Franklin's new cases and an 8.2% increase in Suffolk's caseload amounted to 1,889 additional new cases and more than offset the other declines.

The new caseload was composed of 13.9% criminal, 59.8% traffic, and 26.3% civil cases. The state's 1979 distribution was 17.5% criminal, 54.0% traffic, and 28.4% civil. Thus the Fifth District had a higher proportion of traffic cases with a correspondingly lower percentage of criminal cases. In caseload per judge, the district ranked third among the eighteen rural districts and ninth in the state with 18,713 new cases and 25,191 hearings. The rural mean for 1979 was 15,271 new cases and 16,878 hearings.

The 1979 caseload for the juvenile and domestic relations courts of the Fifth District amounted to 3,773 new cases and 7,960 hearings. After jumping 30.4% in 1978, the new caseload rose less dramatically in 1979 with a 9.6% increase. All localities within the Fifth District experienced a rising J&DR caseload. Juvenile new cases were up 10.4% while adult rose 8.3%. Identical to the rise in new cases was a 9.6% increase in hearings. The hearings per case ratio of 2.11 was higher than the state's 1.93 and the rural mean of 1.87. In caseload per judge, the district ranked sixth among the eighteen rural districts with 3,144 new cases and 6,633 hearings.

SIXTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Sixth Judicial District is comprised of the counties of Brunswick, Greensville, Prince George, Surry, Sussex, and the cities of Emporia and Hopewell. All the clerk's offices in the district are combined, general with juvenile and domestic relations. The district was authorized two general and two juvenile and domestic relations judges. The district in 1979 had one full-time general district court judge, James A. Luke, and one full-time juvenile and domestic relations judge, P. I. Leadbetter. The district was also served by two part-time judges, C. C. Connelly and C. A. Perkinson, both of whom served in general district and J&DR courts. Effective July 1, 1980, Judge Connelly will fill the second full-time general district judgeship and Judge Perkinson the second full-time J&DR judgeship.

Judge Connelly sat three days per week in Prince George GD and J&DR. Judge Perkinson served two days per week in Brunswick GD and J&DR and one day per week in Emporia GD only. Judge Luke, the general district judge, handled cases in Sussex, Surry, Hopewell, and Greensville. Judge Leadbetter, the juvenile and domestic relations judge, served in Hopewell, Surry, Sussex, Greensville, and Emporia. The 1979 full-time equivalent judge value for general district was 1.8 judges and the value was 1.2 judges for juvenile and domestic relations. The four judges used a total of 69 substitute days in 1979.

The Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the 1978 population for the Sixth District at 93,400. The population per general district judge of 42,455 was less than the state's average of 53,291. The most recent estimate of the juvenile population was 27,700. The juvenile population per juvenile judge in the Sixth District of 21,308 was also less than the state average of 23,818.

The general district courts of the Sixth District reported a total of 47,220 new cases, 50,540 hearings, and 45,620 dispositions in 1979. These figures represent a 21.9% jump in new caseload accompanied by a 19.0% rise in hearings. All three categories of cases experienced sharp increases with criminal new cases up by 21.1% (980), traffic by 19.4% (5,458), and civil by 34.1% (2,031). Within the district, the caseloads of Surry and Prince George actually declined 10.2% and 4.2% respectively. Hopewell and Greensville caseloads increased similarly, 19.5%, amounting in Hopewell to 922 additional cases and to 853 in Greensville. The most dramatic increases occurred in the caseloads of Brunswick, Sussex, and Emporia. A 30.0% rise in new cases for Brunswick County was primarily the result of 3,196 additional traffic cases, up 35.7% over 1978. Similarly, a large increase of 39.8% or 1,805, more traffic cases in Sussex was responsible for a 40.4% rise in the county's overall caseload. Emporia's new caseload was up 65.6%. A small city of 5,300 people, Emporia is located in Brunswick County. In 1978, the court reported 464 civil cases. In 1979, this figure more than tripled to total 1,728. Overall the district's new caseload went up by 8,469 cases, an average of 3,850 per judge.

Despite the large increase in the district's civil caseload, the 1979 caseload was still predominantly traffic, 71.2%. This varied considerably from the state percentage of 54.0%. The 1979 caseload per judge was 21,464 new cases and 22,973 hearings which ranked the district highest among the eighteen rural districts and fifth among all thirty-two. The rural mean was 15,271 new cases and 16,878 hearings.

The juvenile and domestic relations caseload for 1979 was 2,714 new cases and 6,532 hearings. The new caseload represented an increase of 6.7% or 171 cases over 1978. Juvenile new cases were up 5.3% while adult cases rose by 8.9%. Within the Sixth District, Brunswick, Prince George, Surry, Sussex, and Emporia experienced increases in their new caseloads. New cases in Greensville and Hopewell declined by 17 and 111 cases, respectively. The district's caseload per judge of 2,088 new cases was less than the rural mean of 2,684. The 5,025 hearings per judge value was comparable to the rural average of 5,022. The district ranked sixteenth among the eighteen rural districts in caseload per judge.

SEVENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The city Newport News is the only locality designated in the Seventh District. The Seventh District was authorized three general district and two juvenile and domestic relations judges. In 1979 the district had three full-time general district judges, James H. Harvell, W. Robert Phelps, Jr., and Randolph T. West. In addition, the city was served by two juvenile and domestic relations judges, F. Thompson Wheeler, II, and Robert M. Yacobi. The district's five judges used a total of 142.5 substitute days during the year, with the general district judges averaging 28.2 each and the juvenile 29.0. Judge Phelps retired effective January 30, 1980 and was replaced by Robert W. Curran.

The most recent estimate of the Newport News population was 143,700. The population per general district judge of 47,900 was significantly lower than the state's average of 53,291. Newport News had a juvenile population of 41,900 averaging 20,950 per juvenile judge. The state average was 23,818.

The general district caseload in 1979 was 63,464 new cases and 97,106 hearings. New cases were up 6.3% in 1979 following an 18.9% increase in 1978. A 2.6% increase in the criminal caseload was responsible for an additional 264 cases while the traffic caseload remained stable. Thus a 14.5% increase in the civil caseload resulted in 3,301 additional cases and accounted for almost 90.0% of the overall increase of 3,373 new cases. Hearings were up 7.8% in 1979. Newport News had the third highest civil caseload among all Virginia localities, and ranked eighth highest in traffic, sixth in criminal, and fifth in total caseload.

The composition of the district's caseload was 16.5% criminal, 42.5% traffic, and 41.0% civil. Urban courts generally had a larger proportion of civil cases than the state as a whole, 32.8% compared with 28.4%. Newport News civil percentage was well above even the urban mean. The district's traffic percentage was correspondingly lower than the urban 50.7% while the criminal percentage was identical to the urban figure.

The average caseload per general district judge in 1979 was 21,155 new cases and 32,369 hearings. Newport News ranked fifth among the fourteen urban districts and was above their mean caseload of 19,915 and 24,451. The district's hearings per case ratio of 1.53 was also higher than the urban average of 1.23.

The 1979 juvenile and domestic relations caseload was 4,249 new cases and 11,495 hearings. New juvenile cases fell by 102 while adult cases increased by 220 to result in a modest 2.9% overall increase. Hearings rose 4.0% over 1978. The 1979 caseload was distributed as 71.4% juvenile and 28.6% adult which was similar to the state breakdown. The caseload per juvenile judge was 2,125 new cases and 5,748 hearings. In new cases per judge Newport News ranked twelfth among the fourteen urban districts whose average caseload was 3,260 new cases and 6,475 hearings. A hearings per case ratio of 2.71 was higher than the urban average of 1.99.

EIGHTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The city of Hampton is the single locality designated in the Eighth Judicial District. The district was authorized two general district court judges and two juvenile and domestic relations judges. In 1979 the district had four full-time judges, two general district, Henry D. Kashouty, and Thomas H. Wilson, II, and two juvenile and domestic relations judges, Paul Crider, Jr., and Nelson T. Durden. The judges of the Eighth District used a total of 94.5 substitute days in 1979 with the juvenile judges using the remaining 43 days.

Hampton's population was recently estimated at 124,300. The value of 62,150 persons per general district judge was significantly higher than the state average of 53,291. With a juvenile population of 39,400 and two J&DR judges, the district's 19,700 ranked twenty-third in the state which averaged 23,818 juveniles per judge.

Hampton's general district court reported 39,208 new cases and 59,917 hearings in 1979. These figures varied little from 1978's 39,154 new cases and 57,356 hearings. The district's criminal caseload rose 3.8% or 301 cases. A 10.3% drop in the traffic caseload was offset by a 13.6% increase in the civil caseload to result in only 54 additional cases for 1979. Hearings rose 4.5% as a result of significant increases of 12.2% in criminal and 16.4% in civil. Traffic hearings declined 8.1% or 2,013. Among all Virginia localities, Hampton had the eighth highest criminal caseload and the ninth highest civil.

The composition of the 1979 new caseload was 20.9% criminal, 43.1% traffic, and 36.0% civil. As was typical of the urban courts, Hampton had a greater proportion of civil cases than the state as a whole (28.4%) and a correspondingly lower traffic percentage than the state's 54.0%. In caseload per judge, the district ranked sixth among the fourteen urban districts with 19,604 new cases and 29,959 hearings. The urban mean was 19,915 new cases and 24,451 hearings.

The juvenile and domestic relations court reported 4,838 new cases and 13,623 hearings in 1979. With 138 less juvenile cases and only 61 more adult cases, the overall new caseload declined 1.6% from 1978's 4,915. Despite the decline, Hampton's J&DR caseload remained the eighth highest among all Virginia localities. The distribution of the J&DR caseload was 73.2% juvenile and 26.8% adult which was similar to the state's 70.4% juvenile and 29.6% adult. Hampton's caseload per judge of 2,419 new cases and 6,812 hearings was lower than the urban mean of 3,260 new cases and higher than the urban average of 6,475 hearings. It therefore follows that the district's hearings per case ratio of 2.82 in 1979 was significantly higher than the urban mean of 1.99.

NINTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Ninth Judicial District is comprised of the counties of Charles City, Gloucester, James City, King and Queen, King William, Mathews, Middlesex, New Kent and the cities of Williamsburg and Poquoson. The district covers an area of 1,871 square miles east of Richmond and is bounded by the James River in the south and the Rappahannock in the north. The district was authorized two general and two juvenile and domestic relations judgeships. In 1979 the district was served by two full-time general district judges, Joseph R. Zepkin and William T. Bareford. Judge Zepkin sat in the counties of Charles City, York, and James City/Williamsburg. The counties of Gloucester, King and Queen, King William, Mathews, Middlesex, and New Kent were handled by Judge Bareford. The juvenile and domestic relations judges were Herbert I. L. Feild and John G. Sowder, both full time. Judge Feild held court in Gloucester, Mathews, Middlesex, and York while Judge Sowder sat in Charles City, King and Queen, King William, New Kent, and Williamsburg/James City. The four judges of the district used a total of 110 substitute days in 1979.

The Tayloe Murphy Institute in Charlottesville estimated the district's total population at 138,000 and the juvenile population at 39,400. The population per general district judge was 69,000, ranking the district sixth highest in that comparison. The juvenile population per judge of 19,900, however, was significantly lower than the state average of 23,818 juveniles per judge.

The 1979 general district caseload for the Ninth District was 34,753 new cases and 35,025 hearings. A n 11.8% increase in the criminal caseload along with a 6.7% rise in the civil category was responsible for a 3.6% overall increase of 1,212 new cases. The traffic caseload remained stable with the courts reporting 64 more cases than in 1978. An increase in civil hearings was for the most part offset by decline in traffic hearings to result in almost no change in total hearings for 1979.

Within the district, Gloucester, New Kent and York counties experienced significant increases of 23.4% (943 cases), 15.2% (861 cases), and 18.7% (1,189 cases), respectively. Charles City, King and Queen, King William, Mathews, Middlesex, and Williamsburg all had decreasing caseloads in 1979. The most significant decline in terms of the number of cases occurred in King William County, down 463 new cases, and in the city of Williamsburg, down 790 new cases.

The composition of the 1979 caseload was 20.4% criminal, 61.1% traffic, and 18.6% civil. As was typical of the rural districts, the Ninth had a greater percentage of traffic cases than the state's 54.0% and a correspondingly lower percentage of civil cases compared to the state's 28.4%. The caseload per general district judge of 17,377 new cases and 17,513 hearings was above the rural average of 15,271 cases and 16,878 hearings. The case figure placed the district fifth among the eighteen rural districts, highest ranked first.

The juvenile and domestic relations caseload for 1979 was 4,615 new cases and 10,829 hearings. The juvenile and the adult new caseloads grew at a similar rate to amount to a 24.0% increase in the total caseload. This amounted to 893 additional cases in 1979, 648 juvenile and 244 adult. Accompanying the increase in new cases was a 24.2% growth in hearings, accounting for an additional 2,110 hearings in 1979.

Within the district, King and Queen and Mathews together amounted to a decrease of 15 cases. All other courts experienced an increase in their J&DR caseloads. Contributing most heavily to the overall increase was a sharp 76.8% rise in Gloucester's new cases, up 374 over 1978. York, New Kent, and King William also added 177, 110 and 107 new cases, respectively.

The composition of the J&DR caseload was 71.9% juvenile and 28.1% adult which was similar to the statewide distribution. The new caseload per juvenile judge was 2,308 new cases which ranked the Ninth fourteenth among the eighteen rural districts. The rural mean was 2,684 new cases and 5,022 hearings. The district's hearings per case ratio of 2.35 was greater than the rural average of 1.87.

TENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Tenth Judicial District is composed of the counties of Appomattox, Buckingham, Charlotte, Cumberland, Halifax, Lunenburg, Mecklenburg, and Prince Edward. The district was authorized three general district judgeships. Judges Hay, Spencer, and Vaughan were elected by the 1979 Legislature to fill the three authorized general district judgeships. Judge McCormick and Judge Williams were both full-time in 1979 and handled the district's J&DR caseload. Judge McCormick sat in Halifax, Lunenburg, and Mecklenburg while Judge Williams served in the remaining counties.

The Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the district's total population at 138,600 and the juvenile population at 41,100. The population per F.T.E. general district judge in the Tenth District of 46,200 was below the state average of 53,291. The juvenile population per F.T.E. juvenile judge of 20,550 was also less than the state's 23,818. The Tenth District, however, is the largest in terms of area—3,976 square miles.

In 1979, the district's caseload was 50,814 new cases and 48,339 hearings. This was 5,922 or 13.2% more new cases than in 1978. Hearings rose less sharply, increasing 8.7% or 3,859. A 15.3% growth in new traffic cases added 4,395 cases to the overall increase while criminal cases were up 8.0% or 522 and civil were up by 10.4% or 1,015 cases. All courts in the district with the exception of Cumberland experienced increasing general district caseloads. Contributing most heavily to the overall increase were Mecklenburg (up 2,353), Appomattox (up 1,256), and Prince Edward (up 1,187).

The composition of the district's 1979 new caseload was 13.9% criminal, 64.9% traffic, and 21.1% civil. The Tenth District's proportion of traffic cases was considerably higher than the state percentage of 54.0 and was also significantly higher than the rural percentage of 58.4%. In caseload per judge, the district ranked seventh among the eighteen rural districts with 16,938 new cases and 16,113 hearings. The district's new case figure was above the rural mean of 15,271 and below the state average of 17,598. Its hearings per case ratio of 0.95 for 1979 was below both the rural and state figures of 1.10 and 1.17, respectively.

The juvenile and domestic relations courts reported 4,733 new cases and 8,147 hearings in 1979. These values represented a 7.8% increase in new cases and a 6.0% increase in hearings over 1978. Within the district, Appomattox, Buckingham, Charlotte, Mecklenburg, and Prince Edward all experienced rising caseloads. The J&DR caseloads of Cumberland, Halifax, and Lunenburg declined.

The composition of the 1979 new caseload was 63.6% juvenile and 36.4% adult. The judges of the district handled a higher percentage of adult cases compared with the state's 29.6% and a correspondingly lower percentage of juvenile cases. In caseload per judge, they averaged 2,367 new cases and 4,074 hearings. The new case figure ranked the district thirteenth among the eighteen rural districts whose average was 2,684 cases per judge.

ELEVENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Eleventh Judicial District is comprised of the counties of Amelia, Dinwiddie, Nottoway, Powhatan and the city of Petersburg. The district covers an area of 1,460 square miles in the central part of the state. The Eleventh was authorized two full-time general and two juvenile and domestic relations judgeships. In 1979 James F. D'Alton and William I. Moncure served as full-time general district judges. Judge D'Alton sat Monday through Friday in the city of Petersburg while the counties were handled by Judge Moncure. The J&DR judges were Ben L. Campbell and L. L. Mason, Jr., both full-time. Judge Campbell held court in Dinwiddie and Petersburg while Judge Mason sat in Amelia, Nottoway, and Powhatan. The judges of the Eleventh used 88.5 substitute days in 1979.

The district's population was estimated at 99,400 in 1978. This equaled 49,700 persons per general district judge which was less than the state's average of 53,291. The juvenile population per J&DR judge of 14,750 was substantially lower than the state's 23,818, ranking the Eleventh thirtieth among the thirty-two districts in this comparison.

The 1978 general district caseload included 36,849 new cases and 48,694 hearings. New cases were up by 5.7% or 1,982. Most of this growth was the result of an 18.6% civil increase which accounted for 1,669 of the additional cases. There was little change in either the traffic or criminal caseloads. Hearings were up 7.7% again primarily due to a civil increase.

Within the district, Petersburg's criminal and traffic caseloads declined, but a significant increase in the civil caseload produced an overall increase of 3.6% or 705 more cases than in 1978. Powhatan's criminal caseload increase resulted in a 6.5% growth in the total caseload. Both Amelia and Nottoway experienced sharp increases in the civil category to result in 8.4% and 4.8% total increases, respectively. Dinwiddie's caseload increased by 672 new cases or 11.8% with most of the growth occurring in the criminal and traffic categories.

The composition of the Eleventh District's new caseload in 1979 was 23.3% criminal, 41.7% traffic, and 35.0% civil. This was a marked variation from the 1978 distribution of 20.8% criminal, 53.5% traffic, and 25.8% civil. A significant shift in caseload occurred from traffic to civil in 1979. The general district caseload per judge of 18,425 new cases and 24,347 hearings was above both the rural and state means. The new case figure ranked the district fourth among the eighteen rural districts.

The juvenile and domestic relations courts also experienced a rising caseload in 1979, reporting 4,205 new cases and 7,963 hearings. The percentage increase in new cases of 1.9% was the result of a significant 15.5% increase in adult cases, up 216, offset by a decline in juvenile cases of 137 cases. Hearings experienced a greater increase 9.7%, the result of a 2.2% juvenile increase and a 22.3% adult increase. Within the district, the J&DR caseloads of Amelia, Dinwiddie, and Powhatan were up while that of Petersburg declined. Nottoway's remained essentially unchanged. The two judges averaged 2,124 new cases and 3,982 hearings each. In new cases per judge, the district ranked fifteenth among the eighteen rural districts whose mean caseload was 2,684 new cases and 5,022 hearings.

TWELFTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Twelfth Judicial District is composed of Chesterfield County and the city of Colonial Heights. The district was authorized two general district and two juvenile and domestic relations judgeships. In 1979, the general district court was served by three part-time judges, John F. Daffron, William R. Shelton and John A. Snead who were equivalent to 2.4 full-time judges. The 1980 Legislature increased the district's authorization to three judgeships with Judge Shelton becoming full-time March 1, 1980, and July 1, 1980 as the effective date for Judges Daffron and Snead. The juvenile judges were John H. Thomas and Marvin L. Garner, who filled the second judgeship July 1, 1979, created by the 1979 General Assembly. In 1979, the five judges used 106.5 substitute days.

The combined population of Chesterfield and Colonial Heights was estimated at 145,200 in 1978, representing a 9.0% increase over the previous year. The population per general district judge of 60,500 ranked the Twelfth as tenth highest in the state. The estimated juvenile population increased insignificantly to 45,000. The 1979 juvenile population per judge of 22,500 ranked the district seventeenth among the state's thirty-two districts, down from third place in 1978 before the addition of a judgeship.

During 1979, the general district courts reported 35,872 new cases, 43,253 hearings and 35,109 dispositions. New cases increased 9.5% from 1978 largely due to a 1,045 or 29.6% rise in criminal cases. Chesterfield's criminal caseload increased by 984 cases or 35.4% with an 11.2% increase for all new cases. The district's civil caseload also rose by 670 cases or 10.9% and the traffic by 1,410 or 6.1%. Chesterfield's traffic caseload was up 1,692 or 8.2% to rank it ninth highest among all Virginia localities while Colonial Heights' new traffic cases declined by 282 or 12.2%. Hearings rose by 4,029 or 10.3% from 1978, also largely in the criminal area with a 23.6% (1,612 hearings) increase in Chesterfield. A general district hearings per case ratio of 1.21 was slightly higher than the state average of 1.17.

The general district's caseload composition of 12.7% criminal, 68.3% traffic, and 19.0% civil varied significantly from the state's percentages of traffic (54.0) and civil (28.4) and somewhat from the criminal (17.5). Chesterfield's 9.6% criminal, 71.3% traffic, and 19.1% civil distribution accounted for most of this variance.

The 1979 caseload per general district judge of 14,942 cases was significantly lower than the 19,915 mean for the fourteen urban districts and ranked it eleventh among them. The 18,022 hearings per judge was correspondingly lower than the state urban mean of 24,451.

The juvenile and domestic relations caseload rose 986 cases or 23.6% from 1978 and hearings were up 1,905 or 20.6%. Colonial Heights' 136 (33.3%) and Chesterfield's 660 (26.5%) new juvenile case increase contributed to the overall rise. Chesterfield's 20.9% increase in adult cases (229) was partially offset by a 22.2% (39 cases) decline in Colonial Heights. The rise in the number of hearings resulted from Colonial Heights' 29.0% (261) and Chesterfield's 22.2% (1,194) increase in juvenile hearings and Colonial Heights' 17.6% (450) adult hearings increase. The juvenile caseload composition of 71.7% juvenile and 28.3% adult was similar to the state distribution of 70.4% and 29.6%, respectively. The 2.16 hearings per case ratio was higher than the urban mean of 1.99.

THIRTEENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The city of Richmond is designated as the Thirteenth Judicial District. The general district caseload was handled by four divisions: Criminal, Traffic, Civil, and Manchester. There was only one juvenile and domestic relations court. Richmond was authorized seven general district court judgeships in 1979. The Criminal Division was served by Judges Duling and Davila, the Traffic Division by Judges Williams and Schrieberg, and the Civil Division by Judges Roberts and Belcher. Judge Belcher retired December 31, 1979 and was replaced by Edgar L. Turlington, Jr. Judge Nance served in the Manchester Division and heard all types of cases. The juvenile and domestic relations court had three judgeships authorized, filled by Judges Douglas, Bryant, and Ruby. Judge Bryant replaced Max O. Laster who retired July 31, 1979. The ten judges averaged 15.5 substitute days each.

The population of Richmond continued its decline since 1970 and was estimated at 219,600 in 1978. The population per general district court judge of 31,371 was considerably below the state average of 53,291, ranking the Thirteenth last in this comparison. With a juvenile population of 56,000, the 18,667 per J&DP judge figure was also well below the state average of 23,818.

The general district caseload in 1979 was 165,002 new cases, 187,662 hearings, and 147,956 dispositions. Richmond's caseload rose slightly by 4,046 new cases or 2.5% but ranked first among Virginia's localities. However, this increase was considerably smaller than the 17,433 new case increase in 1978. There were 14,314 or 17.1% more new civil cases than in 1978 to account for the overall caseload increase. Richmond had the highest civil caseload of all the state's localities. This preponderance of civil cases was due to Richmond's unique position as a regional business center and the revision of Title VIII allowing change in venue. Civil hearings also increased by 13,832 or 15.7%. Traffic cases declined by 9,390 or 15.5% and criminal by 878 or 5.3% despite a 9.7% or 381 criminal case increase in Manchester. Despite the decreases, Richmond ranked third among all localities in both traffic and criminal cases. Hearings also declined in these areas by a corresponding 14.3% and 4.2%, respectively. The hearings per case ratio of 1.16 corresponded to the state ratio of 1.17.

The general district caseload composition of 9.6% criminal, 31.0% traffic, and 59.4% civil varied significantly from the state percentages of 17.5 criminal, 54.0% traffic, and 28.4% civil. The 1979 cases per judge figure of 23,572 was significantly higher than the urban district mean of 19,915 to rank Richmond third among the fourteen urban districts. The 27,249 hearings per judge was correspondingly higher than the urban district average of 24,451.

The 1979 juvenile and domestic relations caseload was 11,431 new cases and 17,866 hearings. Richmond ranked third among Virginia localities in the number of new cases which were up by 1,909 or 20.1% from 1978. Juvenile cases increased by 1,062 or 18.7% and adult cases rose by 847 or 22.1%. Hearings decreased by 1,598 or 8.2% with a 1,263 juvenile case decline.

The composition of the J&DR caseload in 1979 was 59.0% juvenile and 41.0% adult which varied from the state percentages of 70.4 and 29.6, respectively. The 3,119 new J&DR cases per judge figure was slightly higher than the urban mean of 3,260 to rank Richmond fourth among the fourteen urban districts. The hearings per judge figure of 5,955 was correspondingly lower than the urban mean of 6,475. Thus the hearings per case ratio of 1.56 was significantly lower than the 1.99 urban ratio.

FOURTEENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

Henrico County is the only locality designated as the Fourteenth District. The district was authorized three full-time general district judges, Donald R. Howren, Joseph F. Spinella, and H. Ratcliffe Turner, in 1979. The juvenile and domestic relations court was authorized two judgeships which were filled by Augustus S. Hydrick and J. Mercer White, Jr. The five judges used a total of 145 substitute days during 1979.

The 1978 population of Henrico County was estimated by the Tayloe Murphy Institute at 173,900. The population per full-time equivalent general district judge of 57,967 was higher than the state average of 53,291. This figure ranked the district fourteenth among the state's thirty-two districts, highest ranked first. The juvenile population of Henrico, estimated at 48,500 in 1979, averaged 24,250 per judge and was higher than the state average of 23,818.

Henrico General District Court reported 50,699 new cases and 62,114 hearings in 1979. This was a 5.6% increase in caseload or 2,669 more new cases than 1978. Caseload rose less than one percent between that year and 1977. The 1979 increase was due to a 16.9% (2,443) rise in civil cases while there were only 30 more new traffic cases. Compared to other Virginia localities, Henrico General District Court ranked sixth in number of new civil and seventh in new traffic cases. Criminal new cases were slightly higher by 226 or 4.7%. There were 3,423 or 5.8% more hearings than in 1978. Criminal, traffic, and civil hearings all rose consistently by 6.3% (580), 5.9% (1,639), and 5.5% (1,204), respectively. The hearings per case ratio of 1.23 equaled the urban mean and was slightly higher than the state average of 1.17.

The general district caseload composition for 1979 was 10.0% criminal, 56.6% traffic, and 33.4% civil. The percentage of criminal cases was substantially lower than the state's 17.5 while the civil percentage was significantly higher than the state's 28.4. Traffic cases made up a slightly higher percentage than the state's 54.0.

The average caseload per general district judge in 1979 was 16,900 new cases and 20,705 hearings. This ranked Henrico eighth among the fourteen urban districts whose new cases per judge average of 19,915 new cases and 24,451 hearings were both significantly higher.

The juvenile and domestic relations court caseload was 6,237 new cases and 11,915 hearings, up 663 cases or 11.9% and 1,496 hearings or 14.4% from 1978. The new case increase was due to a 17.8% rise in adult cases compared to a smaller 8.9% juvenile increase although both grew by nearly the same number of cases, 331 and 332 respectively. A 22.0% and a 10.9% rise in adult and juvenile hearings, respectively, accounted for the overall hearings increase.

The caseload was distributed as 64.7% juvenile and 35.3% adult. The proportion of juvenile cases was significantly lower than the state percentage of 70.4. The caseload per juvenile judge was 3,119 new cases, ranking the Fourteenth seventh among urban districts, and 5,958 hearings. The hearings per case ratio of 1.91 was somewhat lower than the urban mean of 1.99.

FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Fifteenth Judicial District is composed of ten counties: Caroline, Essex, Hanover, King George, Lancaster, Northumberland, Richmond, Spotsylvania, Stafford, Westmoreland, and the city of Fredericksburg. The district was authorized four general district court judges and two juvenile and domestic relations judges. The general district courts were served during 1979 by four full-time judges: Andrew G. Conlyn, Horace A. Revercomb, Jr., J. L. Savage, Jr., and Robert R. Gwathmey. The district was also served two days per week in Caroline County by Judge J. P. Farmer. Judge Conlyn sat in the five counties of the Northern Neck: Essex, Lancaster, Northumberland, Richmond, and Westmoreland. Judge Revercomb sat in King George and Stafford. Spotsylvania and Fredericksburg were handled by Judge Savage. Judge Gwathmey sat primarily in Hanover and assisted Judge Revercomb in King George. The general district judges averaged 45.0 substitute days in 1979.

William J. Cox and C. Vincent Hardwick were the two full-time juvenile judges. Judge Hardwick sat in Essex, Hanover, King George, Lancaster, Northumberland, Richmond, and Westmoreland. He retired December 31, 1979, and was replaced by Judge Farmer. Judge Cox held court in Caroline, Spotsylvania, Stafford and the city of Fredericksburg. The juvenile judges used a total of 38 substitute days in 1979.

The population of the Fifteenth District continued its increasing trend, demonstrated by a 1960 population of 135,318, a 1970 figure of 158,351, and a 1978 estimate by the Tayloe Murphy Institute of 211,000. It is projected to reach 220,700 by 1980, with the largest growth expected in Hanover and Stafford counties. The population per general district judge of 47,955 was below the state average of 53,291, ranking the Fifteenth twentieth out of the thirty-two districts, highest ranked first. The juvenile population of the district was estimated at 61,900 per J&DR judge, ranking the district fourth out of the thirty-two districts. The state mean juvenile population per judge was 23,818.

In 1979, the general district court reported 68,004 new cases, 69,546 hearings, and 67,796 dispositions. The caseload rose by 2,485 new cases or 3.8% increase from 1978. Criminal cases increased by 1,816 or 17.5%; civil rose by a modest 4.9% (595 cases), and traffic remained unchanged overall. Frederick's 683 cases (30.8%) and Stafford's 466 (3.0%) increases accounted largely for the overall criminal rise, but Essex exhibited the largest percentage increase, 52.2% (163 cases). Essex also experienced a 55.8% or 378 civil case growth. Spotsylvania's 1,036 and Stafford's 925 traffic case decreases were offset by Caroline's 1,123 and King George's 812 traffic case increases. General district hearings also increased by 3.2% (2,122 hearings) with a 2,034 hearing (11.9%) rise in the criminal area corresponding to the new case increase. Civil hearings also increased by 1,404 (9.8%) while traffic declined slightly by 3.7% (1,316 hearings).

The four general district judges averaged 15,455 new cases each to rank tenth among the eighteen rural districts, highest ranked first. This was similar to the state rural mean of 15,271. The 15,806 hearings per judge was somewhat lower than the 16,878 rural mean. The hearings per case ratio of 1.02 was also lower than the rural mean ratio of 1.10.

The 1979 general district caseload composition of 17.9% criminal, 63.2% traffic, and 18.9% civil compared to the state distribution of 17.5% criminal, 54.0% traffic, and 28.4% civil. Thus the district's traffic percentage was considerably higher and civil correspondingly lower.

During 1979, J&DR Judges Cox and Hardwick handled 6,893 new cases, 11,041 hearings, and 6,455 dispositions. The caseload increased by 335 cases or 5.1% from 1978. Among the localities, Hanover (23.1) and Essex (15.4) experienced the largest percentages of increase while Lancaster (22.8) and Richmond (11.1) revealed the largest decline. The number of hearings showed only a slight increase of 2,820 or 3.9% from 1978. The new cases per J&DR judge averaged 3,447, significantly higher than the 2,684 case mean for the eighteen rural districts to rank the district fourth among them. The 5,521 hearings per judge was higher than the rural mean of 5,022 but lower than the state mean of 5,759. The hearings per case ratio of 1.60 was well below both the rural (1.87) and state (1.93) averages.

The 1979 J&DR caseload composition of 73.0% juvenile and 27.0% adult was weighted slightly more toward juvenile cases than the state distribution of 70.4% and 29.6% respectively.

SIXTEENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Sixteenth Judicial District is composed of eight counties: Albemarle, Culpeper, Fluvanna, Goochland, Greene, Louisa, Madison, Orange, and the city of Charlottesville. The district is currently authorized four general district and two juvenile and domestic relations judgeships. During 1979, the general district courts were served by three full-time judges: Basil C. Burke, Jr., Fletcher W. Harkrader, and D. B. Marshall, and two part-time judges: Brian J. Donato and Joel F. Jenkins. Judge Donato, although considered part-time, sat five days per week in Albemarle County and was equivalent to a full-time judge. Judge Jenkins sat three days per week in Goochland County, handling both general district and juvenile and domestic relations cases.

The remaining J&DR courts of the Sixteenth were served by two full-time judges, William D. Reams, Jr., and Ralph P. Zehler. Judge Burke sat in the counties of Culpeper, Madison and Greene while Judge Harkrader held court in Louisa and Orange. Charlottesville and Fluvanna were served by Judge Marshall. Judge Zehler sat in the juvenile and domestic relations in Charlottesville, Albemarle, and Fluvanna. The J&DR courts in the five counties of Culpeper, Greene, Louisa, Madison, and Orange were handled by Judge Reams. Effective July 1, 1979, Judge Harkrader transferred to the circuit court to replace Harold H. Purcell and Franklin J. Jenkins became the new general district judge.

The 1978 population estimate of the district by the Tayloe Murphy Institute was 183,700. The population based on 4.5 full-time general district court judges of 40,822 was below the state average of 54,104; however, the district contains nine localities and covers an area of 3,075 square miles making it one of the state's largest. The juvenile population in the district of 51,600, based on 2.1 F.T.E. judges, was similar to the state average of 24,571 per judge.

The general district caseload in 1979 was 60,673 new cases, 67,697 hearings, and 59,994 dispositions. The new caseload increased by 5,576 or slightly 10% over the 1978 level. The increase from 1976 to 1977 was 3.5% and was 3.3% from 1977 to 1978. Hearings increased by 5,444 or 8.7% in 1979. The previous year had a decline of less than one percent. There were 16,232 hearings waived. This was up 3,396 over 1978.

The Sixteenth's criminal caseload increased by 1,174 cases (9.1%) and 2,907 hearings (13.9%). The number of traffic cases rose by 2,567 (8.3%) while traffic hearings climbed by 1,862 or 6.7%. Prepayment of traffic infractions increased by almost seventeen percent. The district's civil caseload experienced a 16.0% increase in cases but only a five percent growth in hearings. Charlottesville showed a decline of 213 civil cases or five percent. During the previous year, the city had a significant increase. Albemarle experienced considerable growth in 1979 with just under one-third more new cases.

The district distribution of new cases was 23.0% criminal, 55.90% traffic, and 22.0% civil. This was very similar to the previous year. However, the caseload contains a higher percentage of criminal cases than the state's percentage of 17.5 and a lower percentage of civil cases than the state level of 28.4. The traffic percentages correspond within one percent. The general district caseload per F.T.E. judge of 13,483 new cases and 15,044 hearings was somewhat below the average for rural districts of 15,272 new cases and 16,878 hearings.

The juvenile and domestic relations caseload for 1979 was 5,559 new cases and 9,548 hearings. During the year, 5,295 cases were disposed. The number of new cases rose 375 or 7.2% over the previous year while hearings increased by only 15. Adult new cases showed the major change with a 16.4% increase. Juvenile cases showed a slight rise of 4.2%. During 1978 the growth occurred in juvenile cases while the number of new adult cases remained stable.

The 1979 distribution of the new caseload was three-fourths juvenile and one-fourth adult which was consistent with 1978 but five percentage points higher than the 1979 state juvenile percentage. Juvenile hearings consisted of 46.0% criminal, 27.0% traffic, 22.0% custody, and 5.0% status. These are similar to those of the entire state. Adult hearings split between 53.0% criminal and 47.0% non-support. The distribution of criminal was higher than the state while non-support was lower. The caseload by F.T.E. judge of 2,647 new cases and 4,547 hearings was consistent with the rural district average of 2,694 new cases but below the 5,022 hearings.

SEVENTEENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

Arlington County in northern Virginia is the only locality designated in the Seventeenth Judicial District. The district is currently authorized three general district and two juvenile and domestic relations judgeships. Arlington was served in 1979 by three full-time general district judges: Richard W. Corman, Joseph C. Gwaltney, and Thomas R. Monroe. The two juvenile and domestic relations judges were Andrew B. Ferrari and Berton V. Kramer.

The 1978 estimate by the Tayloe Murphy Institute of Arlington County's population was 149,400. In 1970, the county's population was 174,284. The 1979 population per general district judge of 49,800 was lower than the state average of 53,291, ranking the district seventeenth among the thirty-two districts in this category. The total population per juvenile and domestic judge of 74,700 was also less than the state average of 82,104 and ranked the district nineteenth among the thirty-two districts. The juvenile population of Arlington of 28,600 averaged 14,300 per J&DR judge while the state averaged 23,818 per judge.

The general district court of the Seventeenth reported a total of 42,502 new cases, 54,114 hearings, and 40,880 dispositions. The new caseload exceeded 1978's caseload by 771 new cases. The number of hearings also experienced an increase of 1,997. During the 1978 year there was an increase in new cases of over ten thousand caused by a tremendous jump in traffic. Traffic decreased by 1,156 new cases or 3.5% in 1979. Hearings also dropped almost 4.0% while the number of prepayments remained stable. Almost 41.0% of the traffic cases were disposed by prepayment. The volume of criminal cases increased by 445 (10.9%) with 1,868 (16.0%) more hearings. The civil caseload also had gains in both new cases, up 1,482, and hearings, up 1,281, for 31.4% and 12.1% increases, respectively. The district's caseload per judge of 14,167 new cases and 18,030 hearings did not compare favorably with the urban means of 19,915 new cases and 24,451 hearings per judge. The overall state figures were 17,598 new cases and 20,673 hearings.

The composition of the 1979 general district caseload was 10.6% criminal, 74.8% traffic, and 14.6% civil. Consistent with Arlington's high volume of traffic cases, the percentage of traffic cases was considerably higher than the state's 54.0%. Correspondingly, the district's criminal and civil percentages were lower than the state's 17.5 and 28.4, respectively.

Arlington's juvenile and domestic relations district court reported a caseload increase of 182 new cases and 1,597 hearings. These gains of 6.0% and 15.0% set the 1979 caseload at 3,217 new cases and 12,161 hearings. The ratio of hearings to new cases of 3.78 was considerably higher than the urban district figure of 1.99 and the state value of 1.93. There were 3.6 hearings for the average juvenile case and 4.6 hearings for the average adult case.

The major increase in new cases occurred in juvenile with 172 or 7.1% additional cases. Adult cases only increased by 10 (1.6%). Juvenile and adult hearings both increased by approximately fifteen percent each. The 2,595 new cases accounted for 80.7% of the total new cases while the adult caseload contributed the remaining 19.3%. These values represented a higher proportion of juvenile cases than the state's 70.4% and a correspondingly lower proportion of adult cases. Arlington's juvenile hearings were distributed as 54.1% criminal, 16.1% traffic, 10.5% status, and 19.4% custody. The state percentages were 48.5% criminal, 24.9% traffic, 5.4% status, and 20.1% custody. The adult hearings in Arlington of 30.9% criminal and 60.1% non-support split in a decidedly different manner from the state which were divided as 48.6% criminal and 51.4% non-support. The district's caseload per juvenile judge of 1,609 cases was one-half the urban mean. The 6,081 hearings per judge was not dramatically below the urban figure of 6,475.

Arlington ranked thirteenth among the fourteen urban areas in cases per judge yet had the highest value of hearings per case in the state.

EIGHTEENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The city of Alexandria was the only locality designated in the Eighteenth District. The general district court was authorized two judgeships and was served by Robert T. S. Colby and D. F. O'Flaherty. The juvenile and domestic relations court was authorized one judgeship, filled by Joseph L. Peters, Jr.

The population of Alexandria was estimated at 104,700 or 52,350 per judge in 1978. This was slightly less than the general district court average of 53,291 and ranked the district fifteenth out of the thirty-two districts. The juvenile population of 22,200 per J&DR judge was below the state average for juvenile judges of 23,818 and ranked the district sixteenth in this category.

Alexandria General District Court reported 31,241 new cases, 41,528 hearings, and 30,289 dispositions in 1979. The number of new cases increased by 503 or 16% from the 1978 level. Hearings increased by 2,576 or 6.6%. The slight increase in caseload was a reversal from the previous year when there were sharp reductions in traffic and civil caseloads. Traffic continued to drop in 1979 as new cases were down by four percent. However, civil cases had a significant growth of 1,061 cases or 15.4% while criminal cases also rose by 242 or 5.6%. Approximately one-third of the new traffic cases were prepayments under the provision of the traffic infraction statute. The caseload per general district judge of 15,621 new cases and 20,764 hearings was less than the urban district average of 19,915 new cases and 24,451 hearings. Of the fourteen urban districts, Alexandria ranked tenth in new cases per judge. Alexandria. also had the tenth largest traffic caseload of all Virginia localities.

Alexandria's 1979 general district caseload was composed of 14.5% criminal, 60.1% traffic, and 25.4% civil cases, containing a higher percentage of traffic than the state's 54.0 and lower percentages of criminal and civil. However, the composition was more similar to the state than in 1978 when 64.0% of the new cases were traffic.

The juvenile and domestic relations court had a total caseload of 2,553 new cases and 8,575 hearings. The number of new cases experienced a slight increase of 177 cases while the number of hearings increased by 639 for an 8.1% change. The number of hearings per case was 3.36. Alexandria trails only Arlington in the average number of hearings associated with each case. The average for urban districts was two hearings per case. The primary reason for the growth in caseload was a jump of 9.7% in the number of new juvenile cases. The court had 12 additional adult cases during 1979. Juvenile hearings rose by 12.6% while adult hearings dropped almost four percent. The caseload consisted of 72.9% juvenile cases and 27.1% adult cases. These figures were similar to 1978 when the composition was 71.3% juvenile and 28.7% adult cases. The 1979 state disposition was distributed 70.4% juvenile and 29.6% adult. The juvenile hearings were distributed as follows: 57.5% criminal, 6.9% status, 17.1% traffic, and 18.4% custody. The percentage of criminal and status hearings was well above the state's 48.5% and 5.4%, respectively. Correspondingly, the district percentages of traffic and custody hearings were lower than the state values of 24.9% and 20.1%, respectively. The adult hearings were split as 41.9% criminal and 58.1% non-support. The state percentages were more equally divided. The caseload per J&DR judge ranked the district tenth among the fourteen urban districts and was well below the urban mean of 3,260. However, the 8,575 hearings per judge was significantly above the urban mean of 6,475 and ranked second among the urban districts.

NINETEENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Nineteenth Judicial District was comprised of Fairfax County and the cities of Fairfax and Falls Church. The district was authorized seven general district judgeships in 1979 and was served by Judges Grove, Hammer, Hurst, Morris, Perry, Rothrock, and Waters. Judge Waters replaced Lewis H. Griffith who was elected to circuit court January 31, 1979. In July, F. Bruce Bach was also elected to the circuit court and his position was filled by Judge Perry. Judges Grove and Morris retired effective February 1, 1980 and were replaced by Barbara M. Keenan and Richard T. Horan. The juvenile and domestic relations court was authorized four judges in 1979 and was served by Philip N. Brophy, Frank L. Deierhoi, Thomas J. Fortkort, and Arnold B. Kassabian. Judge Brophy retired January 2, 1980 and was replaced by Johanna L. Fitzpatrick. The 1980 General Assembly authorized a fifth judgeship for the juvenile and domestic relations court which will be filled by Michael J. Valentine on July 1, 1980. The seven general district court judges used a total of 296 substitute days in 1979 while the four juvenile and domestic relations judges used a total of 105.5.

The most recent estimate of the district's population by the Tayloe Murphy Institute was 574,800 for 1978. The population of the district in 1970 was 487,774. The population per general district judge of 82,114 ranked first out of the thirty-two districts. The state average was 53,291 persons per judge. The juvenile population of the district of 188,100 averaged 47,025 per judge and ranked the district second among the thirty-two districts. The state value of juveniles per judge was 23,818.

The general district courts of the Nineteenth reported 128,563 new cases and 155,867 hearings. While new cases did not change from 1978, hearings were up 4.5%. The criminal and traffic new case levels declined 4.0% and 1.6% respectively. This drop was offset by a 15.6% increase in the civil caseload. Unlike new cases, criminal hearings were up 7.6% as were civil, up 20.4%. Fairfax City's total caseload experienced significant growth while the caseloads of Fairfax County and Falls Church remained unchanged.

In comparison with other Virginia localities, Fairfax County had the largest traffic caseload, the second highest criminal caseload, and the fourth highest civil caseload. The composition of the Nineteenth's general district caseload was 14.1% criminal, 73.4% traffic, and 12.5% civil. Compared with a state traffic pecentage of 54.0%, the district handled a much higher proportion of traffic cases and correspondingly less civil traffic cases than the state average. In caseload per judge, the district ranked seventh among the fourteen urban districts. The seven judges averaged 18,366 new cases and 22,267 hearings which was less than the urban mean of 19,915 new cases and 24,451 hearings.

The juvenile and domestic relations caseload for 1979 was 17,370 new cases and 23,311 hearings. This represented a 7.9% decrease in new cases and a 7.3% drop in hearings from 1978. The juvenile caseload was 1,714 less than 1978 while adult cases actually increased by 224. The 1979 new caseload was 83.3% juvenile and 16.7% adult which was a higher juvenile proportion than the state's 70.4%. The 1979 caseload per judge was 4,343 new cases and 5,828 hearings. Despite the decline in caseload, the district still ranked second among the fourteen urban districts in new cases per judge. The urban mean was 3,260 new cases and 6,475 hearings. The district's hearings per case ratio of 1.34 was well below the urban average of 1.99.

TWENTIETH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Twentieth Judicial District served the three counties of Fauquier, Loudoun, and Rappahannock located in the northern part of the state. The district was authorized two general district judges and one juvenile and domestic relations judge. The two general district judges in 1979 were Archibald M. Aiken and William W. Carson. The juvenile and domestic relations courts were handled by William F. Moffett, Jr. For 1979, the three judges used a total of 95.5 substitute days. The district covers an area of 1,560 square miles.

The population of the Twentieth District was estimated at 68,724 in 1970; however, the most recent estimate by the Tayloe Murphy Institute put the population at 90,400. The growth in population was principally the result of growth in Loudoun County which made up almost 60.0% of the district's population. Loudoun County, because of its proximity to the Washington, D. C. area, has been increasing at almost a 5.5% annual rate since 1970. The population per general district judge of 45,200 was somewhat below the state average of 53,291 and ranked twenty-fifth among the thirty-two districts. The juvenile population of the area estimated at 29,700 for the single judge ranked fifth in this comparison. The state mean was 23,818 juveniles per judge.

The three general district courts in the Twentieth reported a total of 24,081 new cases and 27,655 hearings. The new caseload in 1979 rose 14.1% or 2,971 cases. This significant growth was the result of a 15.6% increase in traffic cases (up 2,313) and a 27.7% increase in civil (up 862). The criminal caseload actually declined by 204 cases or 6.4%. Within the district, the caseloads of Fauquier and Rappahannock changed little with Fauquier up 1.6% and Rappahannock down 3.4%. Thus the rise in the district's caseload was primarily the result of a 25.6% increase in Loudoun County's new cases from 11,277 in 1978 to 14,166 in 1979.

The composition of the district's new caseload was 12.4% criminal, 17.1% traffic, and 16.5% civil. This distribution was more heavily weighted toward traffic than the state's composition of 17.5% criminal, 54.0% traffic, and 28.4% civil. In caseload per judge, the district's values of 12,041 new cases and 13,828 hearings were below the rural mean of 15,271 new cases and 16,878 hearings. The district ranked sixteenth among the eighteen rural districts in this comparison.

Judge Moffett handled 3,299 new cases and held 6,405 hearings in 1979. This represented an 8.5% increase in his workload over 1978. In caseload per judge, the district ranked fifth among the eighteen rural districts and judge Moffett handled more cases than the rural mean of 2,684 and the state mean of 2,976. The caseload composition was 80.2% juvenile and 19.8% adult, thus containing a significantly higher proportion of juvenile cases than the state's 70.4%.

TWENTY-FIRST JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Twenty-First Judicial District consists of Henry and Patrick Counties and the city of Martinsville. The district was authorized two general district judges and one juvenile and domestic relations judge. The district had two general district judges: Kenneth M. Covington and J. Frank Greenwalt, Jr. The juvenile and domestic relations courts were served by J. English Ford. Judge Covington served primarily in Henry County while Judge Greenwalt sat in Martinsville and Patrick County. The three judges used a total of 51 substitute days in 1970.

The population of the district was recently estimated by the Tayloe Murphy Institute at 90,000. The population of Henry County, repesented 62.0% of the district's population. Martinsville and Patrick represented 20.0% and 18.0% respectively. The population per judge of the district, 45,000, ranked twenty-sixth out of the thirty-two districts. The juvenile population for Judge Ford of 26,900 ranked eighth out of the thirty-two districts, highest ranked first, in juvenile population per judge. The state juvenile population per judge was 23,818.

The general district caseload for 1979 was 17,338 new cases and 20,571 hearings. These values represented increases of 8.6% and 13.6%, respectively. Most of this increase was the result of a 23.7% growth in the civil caseload. Henry County's civil caseload was up 21.3% or by 648 cases. Patrick County reported 71.5% or 408 more civil cases in 1979 while Martinsville handled an additional 124 civil cases. Criminal cases for the district also rose by 6.9% while traffic fell 2.7%.

The composition of the district's 1979 new caseload was 22.7% criminal, 37.9% traffic, and 39.4% civil. The state's distribution was 17.5% criminal, 54.0% traffic, and 28.4% civil. The district was much more heavily weighted with civil cases and had a much smaller proportion of traffic cases than the state average. With a caseload per judge of 8,669 new cases and 10,286 hearings, the district ranked last in the state in this comparison. The state mean was 17,598 new cases and 20,673 hearings per judge.

The juvenile and domestic relations caseload for 1979 was 3,783 new cases and 4,897 hearings. New cases were up 19.2% over 1978's 3,174 hearings increased by 12.5% or 542. The caseload was split 60.8% juvenile and 39.2% adult. Adult cases which account for a higher percentage of the district's caseload than the state's 29.6%, rose 20.7% or by 395 cases. Juvenile cases were up 16.7% or by 214. Within the district, Martinsville's J&DR caseload jumped 66.0% to account for the overall district increase. Henry County's caseload remained unchanged while J&DR cases in Patrick County actually fell by 12.9%. In new cases per judge, the district ranked second among the eighteen rural districts and sixth among all thirty-two. Judge Ford handled a significantly greater volume of cases than both the rural and state means of 2,684 and 2,976, respectively.

TWENTY-SECOND JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Twenty-Second Judicial District consists of the counties of Franklin and Pittsylvania and the city of Danville. The district was authorized two general district and two juvenile and domestic relations judges. The two general district judges were F. Nelson Light and T. Ryland Dodson. The juvenile and domestic relations court judges were Spiros B. Skenderis and Robert F. Ward. The two general district judges used a total of 65 substitute judge days, while the two juvenile judges used a total of 35 substitute days.

The population of the district was recently estimated by the Tayloe Murphy Institute at 139,600. Pittsylvania County's population made up 45.0% of the total, while Danville City contributed 32.0% and Franklin County added the remaining 23.0%. The population per general district judge of 69,800 ranked fifth out of the thirty-two districts. The state average was 53,291. The juvenile population of the district was 40,400 and equaled 20,200 per judge which was somewhat below the state average of 23,818.

The district's general district caseload for 1979 was 33,329 new cases and 41,305 hearings. New cases increased by 1,000 or 3.1% while hearings rose 6.2% over 1978. The traffic caseload remained constant while the criminal and civil caseloads increased 6.0% and 6.7% respectively. The caseloads of Franklin and Pittsylvania counties dropped by 14.8% (1,200 cases) and 3.3% (345 cases), respectively. These declines were more than offset by an 18.5% jump in Danville's new cases, up 2,545 over 1978. A large part of this increase was traffic cases which accounted for 1,499 additional cases while criminal amounted to 792 and civil, 254.

The composition of the district's 1979 new caseload was 25.5% criminal, 43.2% traffic, and 31.3% civil. Unlike most rural districts, the Twenty-Second had a lower percentage of traffic cases than the state average of 54.0% with a correspondingly higher percentage of criminal cases than the state's 17.5%. Reflective of the higher criminal caseload, the district had a higher hearings per case ratio than the rural mean, 1.24 compared with 1.10. In caseload per judge, the district ranked eighth among the eighteen rural districts with 16,665 new cases and 20,653 hearings. These values were above the rural average of 15,271 new cases and 16,878 hearings.

During 1979, Judge Skenderis and Judge Ward heard 5,777 new cases, held 11,962 hearings, and disposed of 4,920 cases. The ratio of hearings to new cases of 2.07 was above the rural average of 1.87. New cases were up 3.1% over 1978 while hearings increased by 11.5%. The juvenile new cases actually declined 4.3% or by 158. Thus the additional 329 adult cases which represented an increase of 16.9% were responsible for the modest overall growth. This decline was offset by gains of 93 cases in Pittsylvania and 188 in Danville. The judges of the Twenty-Second averaged 2,889 new cases and 5,981 hearings each. The new case value ranked the district ninth among the eighteen rural districts whose average caseload per judge was 2,684 new cases and 5,022 hearings.

TWENTY-THIRD JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Twenty-Third Judicial District serves the Roanoke Valley. Included in the district are Roanoke County, Roanoke City, and Salem City. The district was authorized five general district and three juvenile and domestic relations judgeships in 1979. The general district courts were served by James P. Brice, Beverly T. Fitzpatrick, W. Byron Gochenour, Edward S. Kidd, Jr., and Norman P. Moore. Judge Gochenour retired August 31, 1979, and was replaced by Gerald O. Clemmens. Judge Fitzpatrick retired January 30, 1980 and was replaced by Charles O. Cornelison. The three juvenile judges were James W. Flippin, Frederick L. Hoback, Jr., and Roy B. Willett. The five general district judges used 108 substitute days during 1979 while the three juvenile judges used 36 days.

The population of the district was recently estimated at 185,200 for 1978. Roanoke City's population represented fifty percent of the district's population while Roanoke County and Salem contributed 36% and 14%, respectively. The population per general district judge of 37,040 was significantly lower than the state average of 53,291. However, the Roanoke area is a business center used by many in the surrounding counties. The juvenile population of the district was estimated at 49,500 or 16,500 per judge which again was below the state average of 23,818.

During 1979, the general district caseload of the Twenty-Third increased by 4.2% to 60,563 new cases. Hearings also rose by 12.1%, totaling 68,533. New criminal cases dropped slightly by 1.1% while traffic and civil cases increased by 5.1% and 7.2%, respectively. All three courts within the district experienced increasing caseloads. Roanoke County's increased by 698 cases or 7.0%. A significant growth in Roanoke City's civil caseload resulted in an overall increase of 738 cases or 1.7% while Salem County handled 1,013 or 24.7% more cases in 1979, most of which were traffic.

The composition of the general district caseload for 1979 was 24.0% criminal, 44.4% traffic, and 31.6% civil. Consistent with the pattern set by the urban districts, the Twenty-Third had a lower percentage of traffic cases than the state's 54.0% and higher percentages of criminal and civil cases. In caseload per judge, the district ranked last among the fourteen urban districts with 12,113 new cases per judge. The urban and state means were 19,915 and 17,598, respectively.

The Twenty-Third's juvenile and domestic relations caseload decreased by 473 cases or 4.4%. Of the 10,282 cases reported in 1979, 7,645 were juvenile and 2,637 were adult. Most of the decrease resulted from a 5.6% decline in juvenile cases, down 457 from the 1978 level. Both Roanoke City and County experienced decreasing J&DR caseloads with the City falling by 548 cases and the County by 168. Only the city of Salem showed growth with its caseload up 27.1% or by 243 cases. The three juvenile judges averaged 3,427 new cases and 5,903 hearings each. The new case value ranked the district sixth among the fourteen urban districts and was above the urban mean of 3,260. The district's hearings per judge figure was below the urban figure of 6,475 and therefore so was the hearings per case ratio of 1.72. The urban ratio was 1.99.

TWENTY-FOURTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Twenty-Fourth Judicial District consists of the counties of Amherst, Bedford, Campbell, Nelson, and the cities of Bedford, Lynchburg, and Waynesboro. The district is one of the state's largest in area, covering 2,248 square miles. The general district courts were authorized three judgeships in 1979 and were served by Leroy E. Glass, J. Samuel Johnston, Jr., and C. M. Kiser. The 1980 General Assembly authorized a fourth judgeship for the district which will be filled by James S. Farmer on July 1, 1980. The juvenile and domestic relations courts' three authorized judges in 1979 were Harold B. Singleton, Earl Wingo, and Lawrence Janow. The third position was authorized by the 1979 Legislature and filled by Judge Janow on July 1, 1979. Judge Singleton retired December 31, 1979 and was replaced by W. Raymond Minnix. In 1979, the three general district judges used 78.5 substitute days while the three juvenile judges used 65.5.

The combined population of the Twenty-Fourth District was 184,622 in 1970 and grew to 201,800 as of 1978. The city of Lynchburg with 32.0% and Campbell County with 22.0% made up the majority of the district's population. Amherst and Bedford Counties contributed an additional 14.0% and 15.0%, respectively. Nelson County, Bedford City and Waynesboro made up the remaining 17.0%. The population per judge for the three general district judges of 67,267 ranked eighth out of the thirty-two districts. The state average was 53,291 per judge. The juvenile population, 55,400, equaled 18,467 per judge, ranking the district twenty-fifth in a statewide comparison. The state average was 23,818 juveniles per judge.

The general district caseload for the Twenty-Fourth during 1979 amounted to 59,101 new cases and 61,903 hearings. Both these totals represented little change from 1978 with new cases down by 182 and hearings up by 260. A 15.1% rise in civil new cases amounted to 1,916 additional cases but this gain was offset by 2.1% and 5.3% losses in the criminal and traffic caseloads, respectively. Both criminal and civil hearings increased, the latter by 13.4% while traffic hearings dropped 7.1% or 2,055. Within the district, Amherst and Nelson experienced rising caseloads while the level of new cases dropped in Bedford and Campbell. The caseloads of the two cities, Lynchburg and Waynesboro, remained essentially unchanged.

The district's new cases were distributed in 1979 as 19.9% criminal, 55.5% traffic, and 24.7% civil. This composition was very similar to the average rural distribution of 19.1% criminal, 58.4% traffic, and 22.5% civil. In 1979, the district's caseload per judge values of 19,700 new cases and 20,634 hearings again ranked second among the eighteen rural districts.

Like the general district caseload, the 1979 juvenile and domestic relations new case value for the Twenty-Fourth changed very little. New cases rose 1.7% to 8,008. Hearings, however, experienced more growth, up 8.3% to reach 17,604 in 1979. Juvenile new cases fell 3.0% or 299. New cases were split as 67.4% juvenile and 32.6% adult. Within the district, Amherst, Campbell, Bedford City, and Waynesboro experienced rising J&DR caseloads while new cases fell in Bedford County, Nelson, and Lynchburg. The three juvenile judges averaged 2,669 new cases and 5,868 hearings each in 1979. The new case value was similar to the rural mean of 2,684 and ranked the district eleventh among the eighteen rural districts. Due to the larger increase in hearings, the 1979 hearings per case ratio of 2.20 was above 1978's 2.06. The rural average was 1.87 for 1979.

TWENTY-FIFTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Twenty-Fifth Judicial District consists of the midwestern counties of Alleghany, Augusta, Bath, Botetourt, Craig, Highland, Rockbridge, and the cities of Buena Vista, Clifton Forge, Covington, Lexington, and Staunton. The district covers 3,898 square miles and is the state's second largest in terms of area. The district was authorized four general district judgeships in 1979 and was served by Duncan M. Byrd, B. C. Goodloe, Joseph E. Hess, and Elmer C. Westerman, Jr. Judge Westerman sat in the southern part of the district in Botetourt and Craig Counties. Judge Byrd, handled the counties of Alleghany, Bath, Highland, and the city of Clifton Forge. Judge Hess served principally in Lexington, Rockbridge, and Buena Vista. In addition, Judge Hess handled the civil cases in Augusta County. Judge Goodloe sat in Staunton and also heard the Augusta County criminal and traffic cases. The 1980 Legislature created a fifth judgeship which will be filled by Robert S. Culpepper on July 1, 1980. The four judges used a total of 78 substitute days in 1979.

The district was also served by three juvenile and domestic relations judges: William S. Goode, A. L. Larkum, and James M. Davidson. Judge Goode sat in Alleghany, Bath, Craig, and Clifton Forge Judge Davidson heard cases in Botetourt, Rockbridge, Lexington, and Buena Vista. Judge Larkum served in Augusta, Staunton, and Highland County. The three juvenile judges used a total of 34.5 substitute days during the year. Judge Goode retired February 1, 1980 and was replaced by John B. Curry, II.

The population of the Twenty-Fifth District was recently estimated at 164,800. Augusta County made up approximately 31.0% of the district's population. Staunton and Botetourt were the second and third largest localities in the district. The population per judge for the district of 41,200 was below the state average of 53,291. The juvenile population of 44,900 averaged 14,967 juveniles per judge. The state average was 28,818 juveniles per judge.

During 1979, the Twenty-Fifth District reported 50,757 new cases and 52,259 hearings. These figures represented increases of 10.1% and 4.1% respectively. All three categories of new cases experienced growth. The most significant in terms of the number of cases was a 9.0% traffic increase which resulted in 2,726 additional cases. Criminal new cases were up 6.0% or 511 while the civil caseload jumped 19.3% or 1,415 cases.

Contributing most heavily to the overall increase in new cases were a 21.4% rise in Augusta County resulting in 2,503 additional cases and a 16.3% gain in Staunton for 914 more cases. The caseloads of Allegheny, Bath, Rockbridge, Buena Vista, and Lexington also experienced growth while Botetourt, Craig, and Clifton Forge had decreased new caseloads. Highland County's caseload remained constant. In caseload per judge, the four judges of the Twenty-Fifth averaged 12,689 new cases and 13,065 hearings. The new case value was below the rural mean of 15,271 new cases and ranked the district fifteenth among the eighteen rural districts. The composition of the 1979 new caseload was 17.9% criminal, 64.9% traffic, and 17.2% civil. As was typical of the rural districts, the Twenty-Fifth had a far greater percentage of traffic cases than the state average of 54.0%. The district's criminal and civil percentages were correspondingly lower than the state's 17.5% and 28.4%, respectively.

During 1979, the three juvenile judges heard a total of 4,893 new cases and held 8,497 hearings. These values represented increases of 4.8% and 5.2%, respectively. Juvenile new cases were split as 72.3% juvenile and 27.7% adult which was similar to the state distribution. In caseload per judge, the district averaged 1,631 new cases and 2,832 hearings which was well below both the state and rural averages and ranked the Twenty-Fifth last among the eighteen rural districts in this comparison.

Consistent with the general district pattern, significant increases in the J&DR caseloads of Augusta and Staunton of 13.3% and 14.5%, respectively, were responsible for the district's overall increase. Craig, Highland, Buena Vista, Clifton Forge and Lexington also experienced some growth. New J&DR cases in 1979 for Alleghany, Bath, Botetourt and Rockbridge were below 1978 levels.

TWENTY-SIXTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Twenty-Sixth Judicial District is comprised of the counties of Clarke, Frederick, Page, Rockingham, Shenandoah, and Warren. The cities of Harrisonburg and Winchester are also located in this district. The district is one of the largest in Virginia, covering 2,522 square miles in the upper Shenandoah Valley. In 1979 the Twenty-Sixth District was authorized three full-time general district and two full-time juvenile and domestic relations judgeships. The general district courts were served by one full-time judge, John A. Paul, and four part-time judges: Robert E. Hayes, Harold G. Potts, Kermit L. Racey, and David G. Simpson. Judges Hayes and Potts will become full-time effective July 1, 1980. The 1980 General Assembly approved a fourth judgeship for the Twenty-Sixth also effective July 1, and this position will be filled by Judge Simpson.

Judges Beverly B. Bowers and Carle F. Germelman, Jr., served on a full-time basis as the J&DR judges. The five judges of the general district courts used 96 substitute judge days in 1979. The juvenile judges had only 17.0 substitute days.

The general district courts of the Twenty-Sixth reported 65,078 new cases and 72,795 hearings in 1979 compared with 60,200 new cases and 67,860 hearings in 1978. In 1978, the civil caseload jumped 20.0%; in 1979, civil cases increased sharply by 32.0% to amount to 3,511 additional new cases. The civil increase was therefore responsible for 72.0% of the total increase of 4,878 new cases or 8.1%. Criminal and traffic also made slight gains of 2.4% and 2.9%, respectively. The composition of the 1979 caseload was 16.1% criminal, 61.6% traffic, and 22.3% civil. As was typical of the rural districts, the Twenty-Sixth had a higher percentage of traffic cases than the state's 54.0%.

Within the district, Frederick County's caseload went up 9.3% or by 1,099 cases and Rockingham also rose 5.6% or by 1,372. Shenandoah experienced a 28.5% increase which resulted in 1,720 additional cases. Warren County and the city of Winchester also increased over 1978 case levels. Only Clarke and Page Counties experienced declining caseloads.

The general district judges averaged 16,270 new cases and 18,199 hearings which was above the rural district average of 15,271 new cases and 16,878 hearings. The new case value ranked the district ninth among the eighteen rural districts. The judges averaged 1.12 hearings per case which was below the state mean of 1.17 and was very similar to the rural mean of 1.10.

The juvenile and domestic relations courts of the Twenty-Sixth reported 6,051 new cases and 9,131 hearings for 1979. Cases were divided as 68.8% juvenile and 31.2% adult which was similar to the state distribution. Juvenile cases totaled 4,165, 8.6% or 330 more than 1978. Adult cases numbered 1,886, an increase of 227 or 13.7% over 1978. The 10.1% rise in new cases was accompanied by an 8.7% increase in the number of hearings. The courts in Clarke, Frederick, Rockingham, Warren, and Winchester experienced increases in the J&DR caseload. Page and Shenandoah counties handled fewer J&DR cases in 1979 than in 1978. The two juvenile judges averaged 3,026 new cases and 4,566 hearings each in 1979. The new case value was above the rural and state means of 2,684 and 3,026, respectively. The district's hearings value was below both the rural and state values. Thus the Twenty-Sixth averaged only 1.51 hearings per case while the rural average was 1.87 and the state mean was 1.93.

TWENTY-SEVENTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Twenty-Seventh Judicial District consists of the counties of Carroll, Floyd, Grayson, Montgomery, Pulaski, Wythe, and the cities of Galax and Radford. The district was authorized three general district court judges and had three full-time judges sitting in 1979: George B. Cooley, James H. Joines, and John C. Snidow. The district was also served by one part-time judge, Richard Davis, who sits two afternoons per week in Radford City. Judge Joines sat in Wythe County, Grayson County, and the city of Galax. Judge Snidow served in Montgomery and Floyd Counties. Judge Cooley handled Pulaski and Carroll Counties. The district is also served by two juvenile and domestic relations judges: William F. Thomas, Jr., and G. Garland Wilson, both full-time. The judges of the Twenty-Seventh used 160.5 substitute days during 1979.

The population of the district was recently estimated by the Tayloe Murphy Institute at 186,200. Montgomery County was the largest locality in terms of population. With the exception of Montgomery County, the district's localities were not expected to experience any significant growth in population up to 1980. The population per general district court judge of 54,765 was above the state value of 53,291. The juvenile population of the district, 47,500, averaged 23,750 per juvenile judge which was consistent with the state mean of 23,818.

The general district courts had 48,706 new cases and 52,271 hearings in 1979. New cases were up sharply over 1978 by 6,945 or 16.6%. Hearings also rose 10.2% or 4,834. The caseload increased significantly in all categories with criminal up 13.4% or 1,302; traffic up 15.1% or 3,442; and civil up 24.1% or 2,201 cases. The composition of the district's caseload for 1979 was 22.7% criminal, 54.0% traffic, and 23.3% civil. Thus the district handled a higher percentage of criminal cases than the state's 17.5% and a correspondingly lower percentage of civil cases than the state's 28.4%. The district's proportion of traffic cases was identical to the state average.

All courts within the district experienced a growth in caseload over 1978 levels. The largest part of the district increase was the result of a 22.1% increase in Montgomery County, amounting to 2,665 additional cases. A 12.9% gain in Pulaski County resulted in 1,227 more cases while new cases in Carroll County were up 23.6% or by 1,068 over 1978. Most of the additional cases in Carroll and Montgomery counties were traffic cases. Significant increases in the civil caseloads of Galax and Radford were primarily responsible for a 35.5% and a 14.6% gain in overall caseload, respectively.

The general district judges averaged 14,325 new cases and 15,374 hearings which was below the rural average of 15,271 new cases and 16,878 hearings. The new case value ranked the district eleventh among the eighteen rural districts. The hearings per case ratio of 1.07 was similar to the rural mean of 1.10.

The juvenile and domestic relations courts handled 6,943 new cases and 12,394 hearings in 1979. The J&DR caseload increased significantly over 1978 by 13.6%. Juvenile cases were up 482 or 12.0% while adult cases rose 349 or 16.6%. The new caseload was distributed as 64.5% juvenile and 35.2% adult. The Twenty-Seventh handled a higher proportion of adult cases than the state mean of 29.6%. The judges averaged 3,472 new cases and 6,197 hearings each which was well above both the state and rural means. The district ranked third among the eighteen rural districts in new cases per judge and eighth among all thirty-two districts.

The juvenile courts, with the exception of Montgomery County whose J&DR caseload declined 6.6%, also experienced growth in 1979. There was a problem, however, with the reporting of new cases in Grayson County. The court reported 392 cases in 1976, 386 cases in 1977, and 381 cases in 1978. In 1979, 738 new cases were reported. Most of the 357 additional cases were cases "continued generally" prior to 1976 and the establishment of the Uniform Docketing System. These were erroneously reported as new cases in 1979 and were dismissed on a motion by the Commonwealth Attorney. Because there is no way of determining the exact number of these cases, they have been included in the totals and may have significantly affected the percentage increase for the district as well as the caseload per judge figures and ranking.

TWENTY-EIGHTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Twenty-Eighth District is comprised of the counties of Smyth, Washington, and the city of Bristol. The district covers an area of 1,017 square miles in the southwestern part of the state. The Twenty-Eighth was authorized two general district judgeships. In 1979, the district was served by two full-time judges, Francis M. Hoge and T. L. Hutton, Jr. Judge Hoge sat in Smyth County and the city of Bristol. Judge Hutton sat principally in Washington County two days per week. He also assisted Judge Hoge in the city of Bristol. One juvenile and domestic relations judgeship was authorized for the Twenty-Eighth District and was held by Charles H. Smith, Jr. The district's three judges used a total of 96.5 substitute days for an average of 32.2 each.

The Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the 1978 population at 94,800. Washington County had the largest population of the three localities, followed by Smyth County and the city of Bristol. The population per general district judge of 47,400 was below the state average of 53,291. The district ranked twenty-second on this measure. The district's juvenile population was 25,300 which ranked ninth among the thirty-two judicial districts.

The 1979 caseload for the general district courts was 23,540 new cases and 22,869 hearings. New cases increased 5.6% over the 1978 levels while hearings rose 3.7%. The civil caseload increased significantly by 18.0% amounting to 566 additional cases. Criminal and traffic cases were also up 6.9% and 2.2% respectively. Within the Twenty-Eighth, Smyth County experienced the most significant growth with new cases up by 618 or 10.0%. Washington County and the city of Bristol also had increasing caseloads in 1979 with new cases up 4.2% and 3.4% respectively.

The composition of the 1979 caseload was 24.3% criminal, 59.9% traffic, and 15.8% civil. The district handled a higher percentage of criminal cases and corresponding lower proportion of civil cases than did the average rural district. The 1979 distribution of new cases in the rural districts was 19.1% criminal, 58.4% traffic, and 22.5% civil.

The two judges of the Twenty-Eighth averaged 11,770 new cases and 11,435 hearings each which ranked the district next to last in a comparison of the eighteen rural districts. The rural average for 1979 was 15,271 new cases and 16,878 hearings. The courts of the district waived 5,148 hearings in 1979 which resulted in a hearings per case ratio of 0.97. The rural mean was 1.10.

Judge Smith heard 3,883 new cases and held 7,049 hearings in 1979. An additional 49 juvenile cases and 169 adult cases resulted in a 6.0% overall increase. The caseload composition was 68.5% juvenile and 31.5% adult. The greatest part of the J&DR increase was the result of a 21.1% growth in Bristol's caseload. Smyth County also experienced a 10.7% increase while Washington County's caseload dropped 5.3%. Judge Smith's caseload ranked highest among the judge averages in the eighteen rural districts and the new case figure of 3,883 ranked third among all thirty-two districts. The rural and state means were 2,784 and 2,976, respectively.

TWENTY-NINTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

The Twenty-Ninth Judicial District includes the counties of Bland, Buchanan, Dickenson, Giles, Russell, and Tazewell. The district covers 2,580 square miles of southwest Virginia. The general district courts were authorized three judges. Judges Pat B. Hale, Thomas J. Bondurant, and Wade S. Coates sat in the general district courts. There were two juvenile and domestic relations judges authorized. Judges Charles B. Andrews and Susan Bundy were resident J&DR judges.

The district had a 1978 population of 157,200 of which an estimated 49,300 were juveniles. The population per general district judge was 52,400 which ranked fourteenth in the state. The juvenile population of 24,650 per judge was above the 23,818 state average and ranked tenth among the thirty-two districts.

The caseload of the general district courts for 1979 consisted of 39,881 new cases and 47,536 hearings. New cases were 5,775 or 16.9% more than the 34,106 reported in 1978. Criminal cases experienced a modest increase of 2.4% while the traffic caseload rose 8.3% or by 1,475. Civil cases accounted for over 70.0% of the overall increase, jumping from 7,888 in 1978 to 11,985 in 1979. This represented a gain of 51.9% or 4,097 additional cases. Hearings for 1979 also increased significantly up 13.9%. Again civil hearings accounted for the greatest part of this increase, up 39.4% over 1978's level.

Within the district, all court caseloads except Russell County were characterized by substantial civil increases. Dickenson County's new civil cases rose 21.3% while Bland, Buchanan, Giles, and Tazewell all experienced civil increases of over fifty percent. Tazewell County's civil caseload actually doubled from 1,817 cases in 1978 to 3,636 cases in 1979. In total cases, only Dickenson and Russell counties did not experience significant growth with Dickenson rising only 1.3% and Russell County declining 12.2%.

The composition of the district's 1979 caseload was 21.7% criminal, 48.2% traffic, and 30.1% civil. This varied considerably from the average rural percentage of 19.1% criminal, 58.4% traffic, and 22.5% civil. The distribution was closer to that of the urban courts which is characterized by lower traffic and higher civil percentages. In caseload per judge, the district ranked thirteenth among the eighteen rural districts with 13,294 new cases and 15,512 hearings. Although these figures were below the rural mean of 15,271 new cases and 16,878, it should be noted that these values contain a higher percentage of the more time-consuming criminal and civil cases than the rural average.

The district's juvenile and domestic relations judges heard 4,117 new cases and held 8,098 hearings in 1978. Juvenile cases rose 14.6% to total 2,605 while adult cases increased 6.9%. Despite the more significant growth in the juvenile caseload, the district's caseload was composed of a lower percentage of juvenile cases, 63.3%, than the state average of 70.4%. Within the district, Buchanan and Giles counties had declining caseloads while the remaining localities all experienced growth. The J&DR caseload of Bland County more than doubled from 76 in 1978 to 155 in 1979. The most significant increase increases in terms of the overall increase was a 44.5% growth in Dickenson (177 cases) and 17.1% in Tazewell (224 cases). In caseload per judge, the Twenty-Ninth averaged 2,059 new cases and 4,049 hearings. This was well below the rural mean of 2,684 new cases and 5,022 hearings, ranking the district next to last among the eighteen rural districts.

THIRTIETH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

Located in the southwestern part of the state, the Thirtieth Judicial District consists of Lee, Scott, and Wise Counties. The Thirtieth was authorized two general and one juvenile and domestic relations judgeships. In 1979, the district was served by two full-time general district judges, Montie S. Meeks and William C. Fugate, who replaced Judge Albert M. Shelton on March 1, 1979. Judge Shelton died on January 30, 1979. Richard E. Smith was appointed to fill the J&DR judgeship left vacant by Judge Fugate. The general district judges averaged 41 substitute days in 1979 and Judge Smith required 23.5.

The Tayloe Murphy Institute estimated the district's 1978 total population at 98,600 which was a population per general district judge of 49,300. This was somewhat less than the state average of 53,291. With a juvenile population of 29,100 for the J&DR judge, the Thirtieth District ranked sixth among the thirty-two districts in this comparison.

In 1979, the general district courts handled 26,441 new cases, 36,775 hearings, and 25,936 dispositions. The new caseload was a small increase of 3.6% or 921 cases over 1978. Civil new cases rose by 730 or 14.8%, criminal increased by a smaller 5.2% (385 cases), and traffic declined 194 or 1.5%. The largest civil case increases occurred in the counties of Wise, 593 or 16.6%, and Lee, 113 or 11.2%. Lee's criminal caseload also increased by 263 or 16.6% from the previous year. Hearings rose slightly by 467 or 2.3% overall. As one of the eighteen rural districts, the Thirtieth's 13,206 new cases per general district judge was much lower than the rural mean of 15,271 to rank fourteenth among them. The hearings per judge figure of 18,388 was between the rural mean of 16,878 and the state mean of 20,673. The hearings per case ratio of 1.39 was the highest among the rural districts and was also higher than the state's ratio of 1.17.

The 1979 caseload composition was 28.9% criminal, 51.7% traffic, and 19.4% civil new cases. The district's criminal caseload was weighted more than the state's 17.5% and the civil less than Virginia's 28.4%.

Judge Smith handled 2,756 new cases, 5,849 hearings, and 2,983 dispositions in 1979. The J&DR caseload increased by 216 or 8.5% from 1978. The increase resulted from a rise in adult cases, 330 or 41.4%, while juvenile cases decreased by 114 or 6.5% overall. A considerable increase of 214 new adult cases doubled the caseload from the previous year and accounted for the overall increase in this category. Wise's adult cases also rose by 111 or 24.7% over 1978. A 17.2% (59 cases) increase in Scott's juvenile caseload was offset by Wise's 14.2% (135 cases) and Lee's 8.4% (38 cases) decreases. J&DR hearings also rose slightly by 582 or 2.5% from the previous year. The 2,756 new cases was slightly higher than the 2,684 case rural mean to rank tenth while the number of hearings by Judge Smith was higher than both the rural mean of 5,022 or the state mean of 5,759. The larger number of hearings resulted in a hearings per case ratio of 2.12 compared to the rural ratio of 1.87.

The distribution of new J&DR cases was 68.6% juvenile and 31.4% adult compared to the overall state caseload composition of 70.4% juvenile and 29.6% adult.

THIRTY-FIRST JUDICIAL DISTRICT

Prince William County and the cities of Manassas and Manassas Park are designated as the Thirty-First Judicial District. Formed on July 1, 1977, the Thirty-First was authorized two general and two juvenile and domestic relations judges in 1979. Prince William was served by two full-time general district judges, William R. Murphy and Frank A. Hoss, Jr. The juvenile and domestic relations judges in 1979 were Raymond O. Kellam and Herman Whisenant, Jr. Judge Whisenant was elected by the 1980 Legislature to fill a circuit court vacancy effective July 1, 1980. The two general district judges each averaged 18.5 substitute days and the J&DR judges 26 each.

The population of the district was estimated by the Tayloe Murphy Institute at 156,000 for 1978. The population per general district judge of 78,000 ranked third among the thirty-two districts and was considerably higher than the state average of 53,291. The juvenile population of the Thirty-First was 59,400. With two J&DR judges, the per judge average of 29,700 was above the state mean of 23,818 and ranked the district fifth in the state on this measure.

The 1979 general district caseload of 51,426 new cases, 53,056 hearings, and 54,614 dispositions. New cases showed a considerable increase of 12,297 or 31.4%. Criminal new cases increased 2,377 or 46.9%, traffic rose 7,803 or 26.6%, and civil cases were up by 2,117 or 45.3%. Among all Virginia localities, this ranked Prince William ninth highest in criminal, fourth in traffic new cases, and sixth overall. Hearings rose by a more modest 6,238 or 13.3% with civil hearings up 3,139 or 40.0%, accounting largely for this increase.

New cases per general district judge averaged 25,713, considerably higher than the state urban mean of 19,915 to rank Prince William second among the fourteen urban districts. Hearings per judge of 26,528 varied less from the urban mean of 24,451. The hearings per case ratio of 1.03 was lower than the state urban ratio of 1.23.

The general district caseload composition was 14.5% criminal, 72.3% traffic, and 13.2% civil which varied significantly from the state's distribution of 54.0% traffic and 28.4% civil and slightly from its 17.5% criminal.

The juvenile and domestic relations judges reported 7,730 new cases, 16,904 hearings, and 6,610 dispositions. The new caseload showed little change from 1978, increasing by 139 cases or 1.8%. This resulted from an additional 159 or 13.6% new adult cases. Prince William ranked fifth among all the localities in new caseload. Hearings decreased by 61 cases, less than 1%, in 1979.

Prince William's 3,865 new cases per judge was slightly higher than the 3,260 urban case mean. The 8,452 hearings per judge figure was considerably higher than the state urban district mean of 6,475. The hearings per case ratio of 2.19 was higher than the urban ratio of 1.99.

The 1979 J&DR caseload composition of 84.6% juvenile and 15.4% adult new cases varied considerably from the state distribution of 68.1% juvenile and 31.9% adult.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF VIRGINIA

FUNCTIONS OF THE OFFICE OF THE MAGISTRATE

One of the principal functions of the magistrates in the Commonwealth is to provide an independant, unbiased review of police officers, sheriffs, deputies and citizens' complaints. These complaints must supply the magistrate with facts sufficient to enable the magistrate to determine whether there is probable cause to believe that an offense has been committed and the person to be arrested committed the offense. After probable cause has been established, magistrates are given the authority to issue arrest warrants. The magistrate may issue a summons in lieu of an arrest warrant when there is reason to believe that the accused, charged with any misdemeanor, will appear in court for trial. Magistrates may issue search warrants, again based upon probable cause. These tasks are difficult, requiring responsible deliberation on the part of the magistrate.

One of the more important functions of a magistrate is to conduct bond hearings to set bail. When a magistrate has brought before him any person held in custody and charged with an offense not punishable by death, the magistrate shall consider the release of the accused upon:

1. the accused's written promise to appear in court;
2. the execution of an unsecured appearance bond (personal recognizance) in an amount specified by the magistrate.

In determining whether or not to release the accused upon his written promise to appear or an unsecured bond, the magistrate must take into consideration such factors as nature of the offense, family ties, employment, length of residence in the community, record of convictions, record of past appearances in court or failure to appear at court proceedings and any other information available which is relevant to the determination of whether the accused is likely to absent himself from court proceedings. Should the magistrate determine that a release upon a written promise to appear or an unsecured bond will not reasonably assure the appearance of the accused, the magistrate may impose one or more of the following conditions:

1. place the accused in the custody of a designated person or organization agreeing to supervise him;
2. place restrictions on the travel, association or place of abode of the accused during the period of release;
3. require the execution of a bail bond with sufficient solvent sureties (real estate bond or professional bonding company) or the deposit of cash in lieu thereof;
4. impose any other conditions deemed reasonably necessary to assure appearance as required and to assure good behavior pending trial, including a condition that the person return to custody after specified hours.

In determining the amount of the bond, the magistrate must exercise good sound discretion remembering that the accused has a right to reasonable bail. As part of the bail process, the magistrate is also given the authority to issue committal and release orders.

Additionally, many magistrates in the Commonwealth currently issue civil warrants and subpoenas. Magistrates may also accept guilty pleas and prepayments of traffic infractions and class 4 misdemeanors.

Another important function of the magistrate is to provide the public with information pertinent to the office and to extend assistance whenever possible 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. In order to perform these and all other tasks, it is necessary that every magistrate be thoroughly trained in all aspects of the job so that there will be no doubt in other peoples' minds that they are being treated fairly by competent officials. To assure continued professionalism and training for all magistrates, a certification and recertification program has been proposed. If adopted, all newly appointed magistrates will be appointed for a 6-month probationary time. In order to be eligible for appointment to a full 4-year term, the new magistrate must receive specific training in designated areas of responsibility and must successfully pass the certification exam within 6 months of appointment date. Successful completion of the recertification exam would be required for the magistrate to be eligible for reappointment to another term of office.

YEAR IN SUMMARY

At the close of 1979 there were four hundred and ten authorized magistrate positions within the Magistrate System. This was one position more than existed in 1978. Two hundred and thirty-nine of these positions, 58.3%, were considered full-time. These are positions classified as Magistrate IV or above. Of the full-time magistrates, 90 were classified Magistrate IV, 30 were Magistrate V, 89 were Magistrate VI, 2 were Administrative Magistrate, and the remaining 28 were Chief Magistrates. The 171 part-time positions were evenly divided among the first three classifications as 48 Magistrate I's, 64 Magistrate II's, and 59 Magistrate III's.

During 1979 the state magistrates reported being available or "on call" 1,428,198 hours. This reflected almost no change from 1978's "available hours." From 1977 to 1978 "on call" hours declined five percent. Thus in 1979 any change in magistrate scheduling did not result in increased availability hours. The magistrates utilized 531,693 activity hours in providing magistrate services to the public. Activity hours represented the actual time used to evaluate requests for processes, answer questions, issue processes, and handle other required activities. The total number of activity hours in 1979 was 3 .2% more than the previous year's 515,450 hours.

Since many of the magistrates work "on call," these magistrates reported the number of miles driven to and from the magistrate office above the first trip per day. Chief magistrates assigned to each district must travel in order to supervise and train their magistrates. This mileage was also reported. During 1979, the magistrates reported traveling 753,254 miles in the performance of their duties, 1.2% more miles than in 1978. This figure becomes increasingly important in light of soaring fuel costs and will effect future budgeting considerations.

The public demand for magistrate services is best represented by the number of transactions or requests for processes along with the number of incoming phone calls and in-person inquiries. In 1979, all magistrates reported a total of 1,129,483 requests for processes, 558,796 phone calls, and 217,723 inquiries. Thus the 410 magistrates responded to almost two million requests for information or service. Transactions were up significantly in 1979, 17.3% or 166,259 more requests for processes. Incoming calls and in-person inquiries were also up, 19.6% and 29.9%, respectively.

Processes which a magistrate may issue include arrest warrants, summonses, bonds, search warrants, subpoenas, civil warrants, committals, and releases. They may also collect prepayments for minor traffic infractions and some class four misdemeanors. During 1979, the magistrates issued 992,723 processes (including prepayments). This total figure represented an increase of 91,723 processes issued or 10.2%. Table B summarizes the total processes issued while Table C provides a breakdown by district.

There were 345,459 requests for arrest warrants in 1979, 3.1% less than the previous year. Magistrates issued 287,175 arrest warrants along with 34,088 summonses. Thus 93.0% of the warrants requested were issued by Virginia magistrates. This percentage was significantly higher than the 88.0% issued in 1978. Of those arrest warrants issued, 36,681 or 12.8% were felony warrants while 250,494 or 87.2% were misdemeanor. While the number of arrest warrants increased 3.0% over the 1978 level, the distribution between felony and misdemeanor remained unchanged. The number of summonses issued, 34,088, decreased 3.7% from 1978's 35,410. Thus while actual requests for arrest warrants declined, the number issued increased 3.0% from 278,859 in 1978 to 287,175 in 1979. Arrest warrants were 28.9% of all processes issued.

Virginia magistrates reported a total of 316,611 bond transactions in 1979. Of these, 196,243 bonds were processed. When compared with 1978, transactions increased 8.9% while actual bonds processed were up 9.7% correspondingly. Of the total number of bonds processed, 21,071 were felony bonds and 175,172 were misdemeanor. This breakdown of 10.7% felony and 89.3% misdemeanor was very similar to 1978's 11.0% felony and 89.0% misdemeanor. Of the 196,243 bonds processed, 88,881 or 45.3% were unsecured while the remaining 107,362 or 54.7% were secured. These figures represented a small shift toward the unsecured bond when compared with 1978's 41.5% unsecured and 58.5% secured. Of the 21,071 felony bonds, 26.3% (compared with 1978's 30.0%) of the defendants were released without security. Of those persons accused of misdemeanors, 47.6% or 83,347 were released on personal recognizance or promise to appear. This compared to a 1978 percentage of 43.0. The magistrates also collected an increased number of prepayments for both traffic infractions and Class IV misdemeanors. Bonds composed 19.8% of the total processes in 1979 which was identical to the 1978 percentage. When combined with arrest warrants, these two types of processes accounted for 48.7% of those issued. In addition, there were 24,710 prepayments of traffic fines and costs, up 3.0%. Class IV misdemeanor prepayments to magistrates jumped significantly, up 39.9% from 8,687 in 1978 to 12,150 in 1979.

A total of 3,384 search warrants were issued by magistrates in 1979. This represented a 5.3% decrease from 3,572 issued in 1978. The increase from 1977 to 1978, however, was 56.2%. In 1979, committal and release orders again made up a significant percentage of the magistrates' workload, 21.4%. Committals numbered 113,840 and release orders were 98,811 in 1979. These figures were up considerably from 1978 when together they accounted for 14.0% of the total processes.

In 1979, the magistrates issued 33,128 subpoenas, up 21.4% over the previous year. Part of this large increase might be explained in that since 1978 was the first year in which magistrates were required to report subpoenas, they may have "underreported." Civil warrants were also issued by many magistrates although in some localities, these warrants may only be issued by the clerk's office. During 1979, magistrates issued 189,062 civil warrants, an increase of 34,466 or 22.3% over the 1978 level. The considerable increase was consistent with the largest civil increases reported by the general district courts and was reflective of a receding economy in 1979.

On the following pages are charts and tables relating to the number of authorized magistrates, expenditures, and processes issued for 1979. Table A provides a detailed comparison of the number of personnel, expenditures, population, number of square miles, and number of processes issued. Table B summarizes magistrate activity by listing the hours worked, miles driven, number of transactions, and types of processes issued. Table D is a detailed listing providing information on magistrate activity by district, by locality, and by individual magistrate.

Note that magistrates work as either "shift" or "availability" magistrates. The large urban areas generally utilize full-time magistrates who work on a shift basis to maintain an office twenty-four hours a day. In contrast, the majority of rural magistrates work on an availability basis and are contacted as needed. In some counties availability magistrates serve a fixed schedule during the day and serve on an "on call" basis at night.

COMPUTER UTILIZATION STUDY

INTRODUCTION

The Office of the Executive Secretary of the Supreme Court has undertaken a project to develop a comprehensive computerization plan for the Virginia Judicial System. Specific problems established the need to conduct the review at this time:

- Operating expenditures are being constrained by inflation and citizens' demands for austerity.
- Caseload activity is increasing due to legislative changes and increasing volumes of cases.
- The potential for backlog and delay in civil actions is rapidly increasing with a more litigious society.
- The destruction of juvenile records is a pressing problem in the courts.
- Other state agencies' workloads are impacted by the increasing submissions of court disposition information.
- The legislature and public interest groups are requesting more easily retrieved analytical information from the court and at an increasing rate.
- The planned statewide Criminal Justice Information System requires more timely and consistently accurate information from the courts.
- More accurate management information is needed to provide a more uniform administration of justice.
- Local courts have begun to automate court systems without uniform standards and requirements applicable to the entire Virginia Judicial System.

The objectives of the project were to identify the extent of current automation within the Virginia Judicial System and to determine the extent of need for computerization. The findings resulted in developing a comprehensive plan for computerization for the judicial system based on an understanding of the needs of the courts and a determination of the role of the Office of the Executive Secretary in implementing the plan. The phases of the study included an analysis of present court operations and systems, definition of potential computer applications, evaluation of alternative processing configurations, and development of the final Systems Plan. This document represents the completion of the Systems Plan for the Judicial System of Virginia.

This section reviews the conclusions from the analysis of present operations and systems, summarizes the findings and conclusions of the other sections of the Systems Plan, and identifies the role of the Office of the Executive Secretary in implementation of the Systems Plan.

Based upon the analysis presented in this Systems Plan, the development and implementation of automated court systems can result in annual recurring savings of approximately $1,045,000 statewide after total implementation. This estimate reflects the difference between the increased recurring costs of staff, hardware maintenance, and communication line costs ($1,769,000) and the savings generated by existing staff made available for reassignment or position reductions ($2,814,100) using current operating volumes. These savings are based upon conservative estimates of the anticipated impact of the systems on court operations and do not reflect the added effects of future inflation and unquantified additional benefits. In addition, other criminal justice systems and court deficiencies may be rectified, thereby producing added savings. Such improvements include:

- Reduced DMV abstract data entry and retrieval activity by the Division of Motor Vehicle personnel.
- Reduced Criminal Case Record Exchange report entry and extraction requirements for the State Police.
- Increased standardization of the information maintained to access and status case records.
- Improved accuracy of statistical data by the uniform collection and evaluation of information.
- Added capacity to index and status case related information without expanding facilities.
- Improved financial controls which expedite the balancing of accounts and allow for the investment of funds.
- Expanded management control information to improve planning on a local and statewide basis.
- Automated capability to interface with a statewide Criminal Justice Information System (CJIS) and improve the accuracy and flow of criminal related data.
- Reduced operating and development costs to local governments currently utilizing or planning automated court systems.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Based upon these anticipated benefits, the objectives of the Computer Utilization Study, our understanding of the needs of the Virginia Judicial System, and a controlled approach to systems development, the following actions are recommended:

- Proceed with the User's Requirements Study, the next step in the systems development process, to define the operating systems in detail and refine the cost estimates for the development of systems and the acquisition of hardware.
- Initiate actions by the Chief Justice and the Executive Secretary to obtain funding to proceed with development of all of the systems and the implementation of a pilot region. The funds should be sufficient to allow for the design and development of the software; the selection, acquisition, and installation of a regional computer and peripheral equipment for each court within the region; and the hiring of highly qualified data processing specialists to operate and maintain the equipment as well as train court personnel. Funding should be sought from all potential sources beginning with Federal funding agencies:
    - Law Enforcement Assistance Administration
    - Division of Justice and Crime Prevention
    - Department of Transportation
    - Department of Health and Human Services

These actions are based upon several preliminary recommendations regarding a statewide court system for the Commonwealth of Virginia. These recommendations are described below and the rationale supporting them is contained in subsequent sections of this Systems Plan.

- Three basic systems should be developed for the Virginia Judicial System:
  - Case Management System to fulfill the basic court operating functions of:
    - — Indexing
    - — Docketing
    - — Basic Reporting
    - — Notice Generation
    - — Management Reporting
  - Financial System to fulfill the basic cash management and accounting requirements.
  - Support Payment System to aid Juvenile and Domestic Relations court personnel in processing support payments.
- These systems should be prioritized and developed in accordance with the priorities established during the Computer Utilization Study to provide the greatest impact in the shortest practicable time. These priorities require that the:
  - Indexing, Docketing, Basic Reporting, and Financial Modules be developed in Priority I development.
  - Notice Generation and Support Payment Modules be developed in Priority II development.
  - Management Reporting module be developed in Priority III development.
- A regional hardware configuration is proposed involving the utilization of ten regional computers and a central development computer linked to the individual courts through telecommunication lines. Each court will have its own data entry and case status accessing capabilities through video display terminals and electronic cash registers, and printers for report and notice preparation. Each court will control and maintain its own data files but will share the regional processing equipment to reduce overall operating costs.
- A phased implementation of the systems will begin with selection of a pilot court region and continue with development and implementation of systems in the pilot project. Statewide implementation, beginning after successful implementation activities in the pilot court region, will be performed on a region-by-region basis, with implementation in two regions per year until all regions are complete. The total effort will require approximately 90 months.

  Although the Systems Plan considers the implication of a stateside system, current automated court systems will continue to operate and be integrated into the state system as need dictates.
- The role of the Office of the Executive Secretary in this plan should be to:
  - Obtain the necessary funding.
  - Select hardware and software vendors.
  - Recruit, train, and manage the necessary personnel to maintain systems, operate the computers, and train court personnel.
  - Manage the systems development effort.
  - Manage the pilot and statewide implementation and the staff necessary to complete these tasks.

ANALYSIS OF PRESENT COURT OPERATIONS

A necessary part of the systems planning process is understanding the present operations and systems currently used by the Virginia courts. This understanding forms the basis for the development of practical systems to meet the user's needs and realistic plans to successfully implement those systems.

A project team comprised of members of the consulting staff and the Office of the Executive Secretary visited a wide variety of courts to obtain an understanding of the court operations. The following information was obtained and documented:

- Organizational and functional flows were gathered to determine similarities and differences among the courts.
- Activity volumes were collected by case type to provide a basis to identify the amount of information to be maintained by the computer system and the amount of current staff performing those tasks.
- Current automated systems were also reviewed to document their capabilities and to assess the transferability of such systems to other courts throughout the state.

- Operations and procedures vary among the courts for indexing, docketing, scheduling, cash management, support payment processing, and bookkeeping.
- Existing procedures require significant manual effort including indexing, statistical reporting, Division of Motor Vehicles (DMV) abstract and Criminal Case Record Exchange (CCRE) preparation, time payment recording, docketing, notice generation, and others.
- Existing computer systems generally have not achieved the full benefits of automation. The basic functions are automated, but other potential advantages may not be timely or fully utilized. In some cases, inquiries may be difficult, notice information may not be prepared upon docketing or disposition updating, cash receipts may not be tied to case disposition, or information required by other agencies may not be automatically produced.
- Interface agencies, including the Office of the Executive Secretary, State Police, DMV, Department of Corrections, Commonwealth Attorney, and Department of Accounts, do not require immediate information transfer. Thus, direct on-line transfer is not required.
- There is no systems development group for courts to use as a resource for new systems development and implementation. As a result, courts have used local development groups with varying amounts of court experience to develop systems and to aid in the implementation functions such as testing, conversion, training, and monitoring. The need continues for a technical resource and implementation task force for the courts which is expert in both court operations and computer systems.

The existing automated systems consist of three basic types:

- General Court Systems which essentially support only court operations, but perform those functions for criminal, civil, and traffic areas.
- Criminal Justice Information systems (CJIS) which interface with other local agencies such as the police, jail, and prosecutor. These systems generally aid only the criminal courts.

- Support Payment Systems which operate in the juvenile and domestic relations courts by maintaining the accounts payable and receivable functions specifically for support payment cases.

In general, these systems were developed locally to meet the needs of specific courts and have been specialized in a manner which may not meet the more generalized requirements for the various types and sizes of courts throughout Virginia. Although the Systems Plan considers the implication of a statewide system, it is fully anticipated that current automated systems will continue to operate and only interface with the statewide court system. The interface requirements of these local court systems will be defined at the conclusion of User Requirements when detailed data requirements are known.

Based on the review of the existing manual and automated systems, and needs of the courts visited, several potential system development opportunities were identified. These opportunities center on case processing and control activities and the need to provide accurate and timely information. The potential systems development opportunities were grouped into four areas:

- Index and Case Control to simplify and improve maintenance of case status information.
- Notice and Process Issuance to aid in the timely preparation of case related notifications and the automatic release of dispositional information to other state agencies.
- Management Reporting to provide both local and state court management with timely information to assess current activity trends and develop strategies to improve operations and service.
- Financial Processing and Control to consolidate the case receipt bookkeeping, and case status functions and thus simplify and improve operational control.

These systems development opportunities are identified in the Analysis of Present Systems, and have been refined through several reviews with the Judicial Systems Advisory Committee to the systems presented in Section II, System Descriptions.

SYSTEMS DESCRIPTIONS

Exhibit 2 depicts the relationship of major functional systems. The systems described in Section II of this document include the Case Management System, Financial System, and the Support Payment System.

The Case Management System is designed to meet the operational needs for index and case control, notice and process issuance, and management reporting. These activities encompass a significant portion of court activity and may cause severe disruptions to court operations if major changes are undertaken at one time. Accordingly, the Case Management System is divided into five distinct modules to minimize the degree of change. The five modules of the Case Management System include:

- Index Module establishes an automated relationship of case names to case numbers. Litigants' names are entered and case numbers are assigned when cases are initiated. The module allows inquiries to the case numbers by all key parties by both exact spelling and approximations of names. A backup alphabetic index to case numbers is also printed.
- Docket Module maintains basic case scheduling and description information used to status cases. This information permits case schedule inquiries, preparation of working and final dockets, and the printing of case summaries of court room related events for the appropriate local court to reference.

- Basic Reporting Module prepares a variety of reports and other documents upon disposition of the case. These reports include extracts of court orders and related informational documents for other agencies such as State Police and DMV, statistical reports for the Office of the Executive Secretary, and exception reports to aid in daily court management such as Past Due Case Status Activity and Case Aging Reports.
- Notice Generation Module automatically prepares the various notices, summonses, and subpoenas on a timely basis using information gathered in the previous three modules.
- Management Reporting Module utilizes the information supplied by other modules to prepare reports which will aid local and state court management in improving overall service and operations. These reports may include Caseflow Analysis, Unsatisfied Judgments, Estate Activity Due, Sentencing Disparities, Continuances, and Case History Summaries.

The Financial System is a stand-alone system which integrates the functions of cash collection, receipt generation, daily cash balancing, funds disbursement and other bookkeeping functions found in all courts. The system uses electronic cash registers to perform these functions. At a later time the cash registers may be modified into Point-of-Sale devices and be linked to the Case Management System. This integration capability allows the automatic update to the status of a case at the time payments are processed by the cashier.

The Support Payment System is specifically oriented to the processing of support payments. The system accepts case and payment information, prepares checks and dunning notices as appropriate, and generates a variety of reports to identify slow and non-payment cases for follow-up action, transmits lists of recipients to the Department of Welfare, and on request provides the court with an individual's payment history as well as prepares a variety of management reports. The system may also be modified to utilize the Financial System to update support payment records as payments are receipted.

Based on the review of these systems by the Judicial System Advisory Committee and members of the Office of the Executive Secretary, the systems are recommended for development in three states of priority.

- Priority I Modules have immediate impact on court operations and provide the foundation for the other systems. The Financial System and the Index, Docket, and Basic Reporting modules of the Case Management System are included in Priority I. These systems have the greatest impact on the daily operations of the court.
- Priority II Modules expand the Priority I capabilities and include the Notice Generation module and the Support Payment System. The Notice Generation module builds upon the Priority I systems without overloading the court with too many changes at one time. The Support Payment System affects only a small portion of the court which is not impacted by the implementation of the Priority I systems.
- Priority III Modules consist of the Management Reporting Module which will be developed only after the users are accustomed to the new systems and can better describe their specific needs for management information.

HARDWARE ALTERNATIVES

Based on the user needs identified in System Descriptions and the volume data gathered in the present systems study, preliminary estimates of caseload volumes, projected growth, and individual case information requirements were made. Overall, approximately two billion characters of data will be required to be maintained in an automated system for use throughout the Virginia courts. The requirement for additional data storage will grow by one-half million characters in the fifth, ninth, and thirteenth years of the system. Although each court's data files will be secured exclusively for its own use, this statewide data storage requirement is not dependent on the type of computer hardware so it may be proportionately divided by court or grouped overall for the state.

In order to maintain and retrieve this information, over 1,400 terminal devices are proposed for use by all of the courts. Three types of devices are considered:

- Video Display Terminals (VDT) permit the instantaneous entry, inquiry, and retrieval of case related information using a television-type display and keyboard.
- Electronic Cash Registers (ECR) process and store financial transactions and generate receipts and reports.
- Printers of varying speeds generate reports and various other documents at the request of each court.

Each court will have at least one of each type of terminal device. The specific requirements will be established by court, based on volume activity and physical constraints. However, the total number of terminals are independent of the computer configuration which the court selects.

The hardware alternatives are defined by the type of processor which will use the terminals and maintain the data base. The three alternatives evaluated are described below.

- Alternative 1 consists of one central computer, with communication lines to each court, which processes all court requirements throughout the state. The central computer requires both a high initial acquisition cost and a high ongoing maintenance cost.
- Alternative 2 consists of court computers located in each court with a small central computer for data analysis and development. Local computers represent the lowest initial and overall hardware cost because of a specifically sized court. However, the alternative requires special technical skills since software must be uniquely developed for each sized computer because of the extreme differences in court sizes. This increases the maintenance cost and the complexity in maintaining control of the system.
- Alternative 3 consists of regional computer centers with communication lines to each court in the region and a small central computer for data analysis and development. Ten regions are proposed. These regions allow for the development of the system at a moderately low initial cost. Software is uniform because the equipment is the same. Additionally, the maintenance of the hardware is lowest because of the standardization of the equipment. Technical personnel are located in each region and supported by control personnel oriented to their unique requirements.

The use of existing computers available through local governments has been specifically excluded as an alternative due to the lack of compatibility of computer hardware equipment throughout the state which effectively increases the difficulty and cost of developing standard computer systems and of interfacing with other state agencies. Additionally, the automated courts visited indicated response time and the storage problems due to the limited capacities of existing equipment and the demands of other local agencies sharing the computer.

IMPLEMENTATION PLAN

Implementation of the court systems can be accomplished in several ways, but the implementation plan recommended for the Virginia Court System involves two basic stages. The first stage is the development and implementation of prototype operating systems in a pilot court region using staff recruited especially for the project and trained in court operations. The second stage, which will be undertaken only after successful operation of the prototype systems in the pilot region, is the implementation of the systems in successive regions of the state on a region-by-region basis with integration of current court systems. Thus, the plan anticipates developing the systems and the staff as necessary, implementing the systems in a pilot region, modifying the systems to meet user requirements or to correct unexpected problems, and then implementing the systems throughout the state region by region.

Development of the systems will be according to the priorities established by the Judicial Systems Advisory Committee for the Computer Utilization Study. Thus, the Priority I system modules of Indexing, Docketing, Basic Reporting, and the Financial System will be developed and implemented first in the pilot region. These systems satisfy the basic operating needs of the court and provide the core systems upon which the later Management Reporting, Notice Generation, and Support Payment Systems may be based. The scope of the systems minimizes the disruption of the courts that result from the change to automated systems.

The actual development and implementation of systems in a pilot court region should also be a sequential process which increases the knowledge of costs and problems at each stage and allows for decision points to determine whether or not to continue. These steps, which include development of user requirements and system specifications, programming, user training, conversion, and systems testing, are estimated to require 30 months to complete for the pilot region at a total cost of $3,058,000.

CURRENT DOLLARS
($000)

	MONTHS
	1-12	13-24	25-30	TOTAL
ONE-TIME COSTS
Systems Development	$346	$ 184	$115	$ 645
Hardware Acquisition	270	858	-	1,128
SUBTOTAL	$616	$1,042	$115	$1,773
ANNUAL RECURRING COSTS
Systems and Operations Personnel	$278	$ 520	$260	$1,058
Leaselines and Maintenance	31	131	65	227
SUBTOTAL	$309	$ 651	$325	$1,285
TOTAL COST	$925	$1,693	$440	$3,058

Following successful development and implementation of all systems in the pilot region, statewide implementation will be undertaken at the rate of two regions per year. Cost of the system and implementation per region is approximately $1 million in one-time costs, maintenance, and operations costs. The total estimated time for statewide implementation is 90 months. Exhibit 4 depicts the implementation plan described above including the estimated timeframe and costs.

COST AVOIDANCE ANALYSIS

There are several benefits which accrue to the implementation of a statewide court system. Some of the benefits improve the long-term service of the courts while others impact other state agencies. The primary benefit of automation to the Virginia Judicial System is the potential reduction or reassignment of staff which may result from automation of certain high volume manual operations. This impact on staff requirements may be addressed by reducing overall staffing by attrition or other means, or by reassigning staff to other functions to improve overall service. The manual operations which are proposed for automation in the Virginia courts and which result in the greatest impact on personnel include:

- Automated Indexing
- Docketing
- Basic Reporting
- Notice Generation
- Management Reporting
- Financial System
- Support Payment System

The total estimated cost savings which are potentially available by automation of these systems is $1,000,000 per year after statewide implementation. These savings are obtained by estimating the number of people performing the functions that could be eliminated by the proposed systems, and multiplying the number of people by the average salary plus fringe benefits. Personnel presently performing these functions will be available to perform other tasks which result in improved service or the courts may decide to phase out these positions by attrition over time. All financial estimates have been stated in current dollars and have not been adjusted for the effects of inflation.

This analysis does not include inflation because it is extremely difficult to accurately estimate the impact of inflation over fifteen years. However, it is reasonable to expect inflation will significantly improve the personnel costs avoided through computerization. That is, as the rate of inflation becomes greater, the difference (the avoided costs) between the estimated costs of operation without computerization and the estimated costs of operation with computerization significantly increases.

SYSTEM FEASIBILITY

Automated statewide court systems have been developed over the past decade in other states. These systems are in varying stages of design, development, and implementation. Many of the systems utilize a design approach similar to that which is proposed for the Virginia Judicial System. These states include Colorado, Florida, Hawaii, Kentucky, Michigan, North Carolina, Oregon, and Washington. These states have found that automated court systems must be designed to meet the unique requirements of the state because of the following reasons:

- Historical differences in the origins and evolution of the courts by state.
- The abilities of current court staff to accept and utilize the automated systems.

Feasibility of the proposed systems requires the system be suitable from technical, user, and economic viewpoints.

— Technical feasibility of the proposed system is indicated by the availability of required hardware, existence of software packages, and the use of similar regional configurations in numerous private and public sector applications.

— User feasibility of the proposed system is indicated by the adaptability of the systems to the user requirements and the availability of adequately trained and supervised staff to operate and maintain the system.

— Economic feasibility of the proposed system is indicated by the cost savings after complete statewide implementation over the recurring systems costs. Cost savings of $2,814,100 per year exceed operating costs of $1,769,000 per year of the statewide implementation.

— Additional benefits which are realized but not quantified in the economic feasibility include:

- Reduced manual data entry and retrieval requirements for DMV and State Police.
- Improved uniformity and accuracy of data maintained within the courts.
- More timely statistical information to aid in long-term court planning and respond to inquiries from the legislature and the public.
- Reduced development and operating costs for currently automated court systems.
- Added capability to interface with an automated statewide Criminal Justice Information System.

TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE
1979

Regional Seminars

Six regional technical assistance seminars were conducted during the two weeks beginning March 15 and concluding March 30, 1979. Judges, clerks and magistrates from each region were canvassed to identify topics for the agenda for each seminar as well as specific problems within the region. The format for the seminars was structured to give each group an opportunity to discuss problems pertaining to that particular group and to also allow general discussion among all groups. Judges, clerks and magistrates met in separate groups from 1:00 p.m. until 2:30 p.m. A general session for everyone began at 2:45 p.m. and lasted until 4:00 p.m.

Court Visits

Technical assistance visits to the courts increased dramatically from 51 visits in 1978 to 197 visits in 1979. This was accomplished by adding a court technical assistant to aid the director of technical assistance. The court technical assistant was able to travel on a regular basis as well as assisting in new clerk's orientation programs, district court clerks' conferences and regional technical assistance seminars. A state vehicle was acquired because of the numerous miles traveled each month by the court technical assistant.

There were 121 visits made for general monitoring, 23 for special monitoring, 23 for personnel surveys and 16 miscellaneous visits. Three special accounting assistance visits were made by the Technical Assistance Department's secretary. Upon the conclusion of each visit a written report is sent to the Committee on District Courts; the chief district court judge; the resident district court judge, if different from the chief judge, and the clerk of the court.

The Technical Assistance Department issued 18 new or corrected updates to the District Court Accounting Manual.

Magistrate Visits

A magistrate technical assistant position was created on January 1, 1979, to assist magistrates in the performance of their duties and to assist chief magistrates in their administrative duties within their judicial districts. The magistrate technical assistant visited 141 magistrates in 17 judicial districts and traveled 14,000 miles during the year. The technical assistance visits include an on location visit with each magistrate as well as coordinating visits with judges, courts and law enforcement units. Upon the conclusion of the visit, a written report is sent to the Committee on District Courts, the supervising judge, the chief magistrate and the district court judges. In addition to the visitations in the field the magistrate technical assistant also conducted or participated in 5 orientation sessions in the Richmond office for new magistrates, 2 four-day training sessions for new magistrates, 4 state conferences and 6 regional technical assistance seminars. A state vehicle was acquired due to the numerous miles traveled each month by the magistrate technical assistant.

Continuing judicial education in the Commonwealth has its roots in Section 17-228 of the Virginia Code, 1950. This section established the Judicial Conference of Virginia to improve the administration of justice in the Commonwealth, and mandated a yearly meeting of the conference. In 1974, after the establishment of the district court system, the Committee on District Courts unanimously voted to support a program of continuing education for the personnel of this system. Funding for both in- and out-of-state training has been provided through a grant from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration and limited administrative leave is given to judiciary members to attend this training.

The Director of Educational Services works closely with the education committees of the circuit and district judges and of the district court clerks and the magistrates to provide the continuing education program. The present program consists of two conferences a year for each of these groups. One conference each year is mandatory for the circuit and district court judges and for the district court clerks. During 1979 two educational conferences were also held for the circuit court clerks, although they are not under the administrative jurisdiction of the Executive Secretary.

Educational Services assumed complete responsibility, for all educational conferences in 1979. Previously, the American Academy of Judicial Education had been responsible for the circuit and district court judges conferences. This take-over resulted in savings of some $14,000.

Out-of-state training continued to grow in 1979. Eighty-eight judges, 15 clerks and one magistrate attended 54 different courses. This was a 35% increase in attendance. Circuit judge attendance increased 15%, general district 53% and juvenile and domestic relations judge attendance remained steady. This resulted in an overall cost increase of 20.6%; however the cost per day of training only increased 3.5%, well below the inflation increase for the year. Actual costs were $89,923.02 total and $91.09 per day of training.

The orientation program for judges and magistrates also grew with the addition of an orientation trip to mental health facilities for juvenile and domestic relations judges. Twenty-one new judges went through the Pre-bench Orientation Program during March and orientation programs for some 30 new magistrates were held in January and August. This magistrate semi-annual orientation has been upgraded to a Training Program for 1980 and a two day orientation program has been initiated by the Magistrates Technical Assistant. Under this new program magistrates are brought to Richmond within a month of their initial appointment and given enough fundamentals to carry them through until they can attend the semi-annual, four day training program. We are in the process of developing a Magistrate Certification Program. Proposed legislation to enable this program was approved by the Committee on District Courts in December 1979 and will be introduced during the 1980 General Assembly. The program will require magistrates selected after its implementation to possess a high school diploma or GED certificate. Additionally, those magistrates will have to successfully complete a six month probationary period, undergo formal training and pass a written exam before being appointed for a complete term. Magistrates presently in the system will have to take the formal training and pass the test before being re-appointed to another term. The planning date for implementing this program is July 1, 1980. Planning is underway for a similar program for district court clerks with a July 1, 1981 implementation date.

MEDICAL MALPRACTICE REVIEW PANELS

The Medical Malpractice Rules of Practice were promulgated by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Virginia on November 1, 1976 and became immediately effective. They were promulgated to carry out the provisions of Chapter 31 of Title 8 of the Code of Virginia as added by Chapter 611 of the Acts of Assembly of 1976.

Since the initial issue of Rules, there have been several revisions, with the latest Rules becoming effective August 15, 1979. The first panel assignment was made on December 16, 1976, and to date 280 panels have been made.

The Panel may be viewed as a blue ribbon jury or a fact-finding body of seven individuals whose decision is advisory and not binding. The composition of the panel is one judge, three attorneys and three health care providers. The health care providers range throughout the specialty of doctors and also include dentists, pharmacists, hospital administrators, psychologists, therapists, nursing home administrators, all of whom serve in particular cases depending on the nature of the claim to be considered.

Initially the panels begin with a group of circuit court judges, the list of whom is maintained in the Executive Secretary's Office in Richmond. Secondly, there is a list of 150 attorneys which is provided by the Virginia State Bar. Next there is a list of 520 health care providers throughout the Commonwealth which was provided by the State Board of Medicine.

The selection of Medical Malpractice Review Panels during the initial year (1977) were made within Congressional Districts solely. As an example, were a cause of action to be brought in the City of Roanoke, which is in the 6th Congressional District, the judge, attorneys and health care providers previously could only be drawn from that Congressional District. This has now been changed. Currently the Rules have been amended to allow for statewide selection. The reason for this is to allow the expertise of every specialty to be provided where needed.

In assigning a panel, there are various procedural matters which should be understood. The first step is the Notice of Claim. A Notice of Claim is a letter from an attorney to a doctor stating that he represents a client who has an alleged cause of action. The Medical Malpractice Rules state that the Notice of Claim shall "adequately state an approximate date (or dates) of the alleged malpractice." The notice shall also contain a "reasonable description of the act or acts of malpractice." At this point the procedure is the same as if the complainant were initiating a medical malpractice court action.

Within 60 days after the filing of the notice of a claim, either the claimint or the health care provider can file a written request for a medical review panel. The request is made to the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Virginia. A request made later than 60 days cannot be honored, and this is strictly enforced. The request is deemed filed if mailed by registered or certified mail.

In order to request a panel, there are certain items of information that the requestor, either claimant or health care provider, has to provide. The contents of a request must include:

(1) The name, address and telephone number of the claimant.

(2) The name, address and telephone number of the attorney of record for the claimant.

(3) The name, address and telephone number of the health care provider.

(4) The name, address and telephone number of the attorney of record for the health care provider.

(5) All courts having proper venue and jurisdiction over a motion for judgment based on such claim.

(6) A copy of the notification of claim, together with a certification of the date of filing of the notice of claim, and a copy of any objection to the adequacy or reasonableness of the notice of claim.

(7) A statement specifying the classification of the health care provider in accordance with Section 8.01-581.1 of the Code and, in the case of a physician, his speciality or sub-specialty.

(8) A certification that a copy of the request for a review panel has been mailed to the opposing party and its counsel, if known.

If a claim arising out of the same incident is asserted against more than one health care provider, the Notice of Claim must name all of them and must be filed with all of them.

Upon receipt of a request for the appointment of a Medical Review Panel, the Office of Executive Secretary begins the work of designating a panel for the Chief Justice. The Rule specifies that three impartial attorneys and three impartial health care providers, licensed and actively practicing their professions in this State, together with one active circuit court judge who serves as Chairman will comprise the panel.

How is the composition of a panel determined? The lists of judges, attorneys and health care providers are used. It is not arbitrarily done. The first look is at the nature of the claim. In any event every attempt is made to determine the medical specialty involved.

With the specialty determined, the Supreme Court seeks to designate a health care provider with the requisite specialty from the area where the cause of action arises. If the only available candidates are already assigned to other panels, the next nearest doctor in terms of geography is selected.

Another problem arises because panel members, whether attorneys or health care providers, know one of the parties and are so situated that they wish to decline from serving. There is nothing binding in the Rules to make a panel member serve. It is voluntary service. Each member of the panel, except the Chairman, is paid at the rate of $25.00 per day for service, plus actual and necessary expenses.

Even though the Medical Malpractice Rules specify that, upon receipt of a request for a panel, the Chief Justice will designate a panel, in actuality this takes several weeks to complete. A letter appointing a panel is sent out soon after a request is received, but all panel members are given 10 days to decide whether or not to serve. In many cases it will take several followup letters or calls to get a panel. Often a doctor will indicate that his schedule is so heavy that he cannot accept an additional assignment. The hardest thing to predict is the exact date when a Medical Malpractice Panel will be held. There are just too many variables.

Once a panel is assigned and all members agree to serve, the Chairman of the panel (the judge) is in charge of finally determining the date, time and place for the hearing. He is the overall coordinator. Once the panel has met and decided, he reports back its opinion. All of the files are ultimately sent to the Supreme Court for storage. The Supreme Court also processes vouchers to pay members of the panel.

Through December 31, 1979, there were 266 panels assigned. Of this number 60 were withdrawn, 15 were dismissed, 122 were concluded and 69 are pending.

Of the 122 panels concluded, the number is analyzed as follows:

(a) The evidence did not support a conclusion that the health care provider failed to comply with the appropriate standard of care in 96 panels. 78.6% reached this decision according to Section 8.01-581.7(1) of the Code;

(b) The evidence supported the conclusion that the health care provider failed to comply with the appropriate standard of care and that such failure was a proximate cause of the alleged damages — 17 such panels of 13.9% reached this decision [Section 8.01-581.7(2)];

(c) Four panels or 3.2% decided that the evidence before them supported a conclusion that the health care provider failed to comply with an appropriate standard of care and that such failure was not a proximate cause in the alleged damages [Section 8.01-581.7(3)]; and

(d) Five of the 110 panels determined that the evidence before them established that there was a material issue of fact, not requiring an expert opinion, bearing on liability for consideration by a court or jury. This constituted 4.0% of the panels [Section 8.01-581.7(4)].

Once a Medical Review Panel is concluded and the opinion is certified to the Supreme Court, this is the end of the Medical Malpractice Review Panel process. However, an opinion of a Medical Review Panel is admissible as evidence in any action subsequently brought by a claimant in a court of law. According to Section 8.01-581.8 of the Code of Virginia, such panel opinion "shall not be conclusive and either party shall have the right to call, at his cost, any member of the panel as a witness." The panelists, if called, do have absolute immunity from civil liability for all communications, findings, opinions and conclusions made in the court and scope of their duties as Medical Review Panel members.

The larger number of panels is requested in the urban areas — populous Northern Virginia, Richmond, Tidewater and in Roanoke. This follows the trend of court cases generally. This probably also reflects the fact that more specialties are represented in the urban areas than in the rural.

What is the future of the Medical Review Panels? So far there has not been in Virginia any serious constitutional challenge to these panels. Many had thought there would be. One real problem continues to revolve around what causes of action can be brought. Section 8.01-581.12:2 states that no cause of action, which arose prior to July 1, 1976, and on which the statute of limitations has run, can be brought via the Medical Review Panel route. Although not addressing this in terms of Medical Review Panels, our Supreme Court has recently ruled that the right to bring a malpractice action for personal injuries accrues at the end of continuously negligent treatment and not after a single treatment.

In a recent editorial in the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot, a reporter indicated that Medical Malpractice Panels have favored health care providers 10 to 1 in their decisions. The headline read: "Review Panels, Doctor's Delight."

Responding to this, Doctor Charles E. Davis, Jr., then President of the Medical Society of Virginia, replied in a letter to the paper's editor that the headline should have more properly read: "Review Panels, Citizen's Delight." Said Dr. Davis, medical panels have proved a reasonable way to reduce unnecessary medical malpractice suits and have kept the cost of frivolous suits down, a cost which ultimately reverts to the patient.

FORMS, RULES AND RECORDS MANAGEMENT STUDY

The need for a standard set of uniform and legally correct case forms for use in district court cases has been recognized since the inception of the district court system. In addition, the need for a general set of procedural rules and the provision of efficient records management procedures became quite apparent. To meet these needs a project was begun in 1977 with the assistance of an outside consultant and selected judges and court personnel to design case forms, draft rules for district courts, and prepare records retention provisions. While the bulk of the project was completed by the end of 1978, further refinements and field testing were carried out in 1979 on all three matters covered by this project.

Case Forms

The Committee on District Courts authorized the printing of the proposed forms for field testing in seven judicial districts containing twenty-two different clerk's offices. These courts were geographically dispersed and range in size from small combined clerk's offices in rural areas to large specialized clerk's offices in urban areas. The participating courts were:

Judicial District	Court
1	Chesapeake General District Court Chesapeake Juvenile & Domestic Relations District Court
3	Portsmouth General District Court Portsmouth Juvenile & Domestic Relations District Court
14	Henrico General District Court Henrico Juvenile & Domestic Relations District Court

31 Prince William General District Court
Prince William Juvenile & Domestic Relations District Court

During the initial test period, all of the judges and clerks of these district courts and the magistrates serving in these districts were surveyed to find out if there were problems with the forms and to obtain suggestions for the improvement of the case forms. All judges and clerks and almost all magistrates responded; a very high percentage of the suggestions were incorporated into revisions of the case forms. Of the 102 forms tested, two were deleted entirely, two were split into two forms each (with two of these new forms incorporating the contents of one other form), one form was split into three forms, and three new forms were created to meet unforeseen needs, thus leaving a total of 108 revised forms.

In September of 1979, the Committee on District Courts approved the use of the revised forms on a statewide basis subject to such further revision as may be necessary. These revised forms were prepared for use in the clerk's fall conference for training purposes. The forms are to be printed and distributed in 1980.

District Court Rules

The original version of the proposed district court rules underwent extensive revision during 1978 and early 1979. The rules were reviewed at length by the Committee on District Courts, which submitted them to the Judicial Council. The Judicial Council decided not to approve these rules as submitted. The Committee on District Courts then submitted the rules to a special committee for further study and revision.

Records Retention

The original records retention and destruction proposals submitted in 1978 underwent lengthy and extensive study and revision. The immediate problem to be addressed concerns the records in juvenile cases. The 1977 revision of the juvenile statutes inadvertently created a severe administrative problem by the manner in which juvenile records were to be destroyed. Implementation of this legislation was set for 1979. To rectify this problem, a selected group of court personnel prepared a statutory revision and administrative procedure which would retain the basic spirit and intent of the original records legislation while significantly reducing the administrative burden on court personnel. This revised legislation was enacted into law in 1979.

After this portion of the problem was addressed, the remaining records retention problems were further studied. Proposals for dealing effectively with these records problems were delivered to the Committee on District Courts at the end of 1979.

District Court Manual

Over the years, specialized user manuals have been prepared through the Office of the Executive Secretary of the Supreme Court to provide instruction to court personnel on specific court procedures. However, many gaps still existed for which no user publications existed.

To remedy this situation, the Office of the Executive Secretary engaged the services of an outside consultant to prepare a manual for use by district court judges and clerks to cover the case processing procedures and general information items not covered elsewhere. This consultant was substantially aided by the staff of the Office of the Executive Secretary. The first draft was reviewed by several judges and clerks, with revisions made based on their comments. This second version was sent out to several other clerks and judges for review, with further revisions being based on their comments. This manual will be printed and distributed in 1980.

Purchasing Manual

The mission of the Office of the Executive Secretary of the Supreme Court is to support the judicial system of Virginia in the delivery of court services in the furtherance of justice. One goal of that mission is to provide administrative support services to the judicial system. One objective toward meeting that goal is to establish and maintain a purchasing and supply system for the judicial branch.

The purchasing and supply system has been established and is being maintained. Part of the maintenance effort is provision of a guide to court personnel in acquiring consumable supplies necessary for the efficient operation of the court. In March 1979 such a guide was published in notebook format; it is entitled the Ordering and Purchasing Manual for the District Court System.

Included in the manual are sections outlining authority and policy; specific details for ordering, purchasing, and paying; and sections for retaining information about standard forms available as well as items on state contract and price agreement.

Before being distributed statewide, preliminary copies of the manual were reviewed by approximately a dozen court clerks. Comments were evaluated and incorporated into the manual as appropriate. The final published version was well-received by clerks.

In October 1979 a revision was made to reflect policy and procedural changes. Future revisions are anticipated as policies and procedures are updated.

SUMMARY OF GRANTS
1979

GRANT NUMBER: 77-A4374

TITLE: E-1 Improvement of Prosecution and Court Activities and Law Reform

PURPOSE: To provide support for the Judicial Institute; In-State semi-annual conferences; Out-of-State Training; Criminal Law Reporter Subscriptions; Video Tape Library Maintenance; Orientation Programs; Correctional Center Visits; Technical Assistance Visits; Model Judiciary Program and Evening College for Judges

DURATION: 7/1/78-6/30/79

APPROVED: 6/5/78

AUTOMATED BUDGET TRACKING SYSTEM

July 1978 began a new biennial budget cycle for the Commonwealth of Virginia. This budget marked the first time since the 1973 reorganization of the court system that all departments of the Judicial Branch were on a fixed dollar budget. Previously, the district courts were carried as sum-sufficient. Preparation for the conversion from sum-sufficient to fixed budget began in early 1975 with development of the Automated Budget Tracking System (ABTS). At that time, ABTS provided information necessary for the preparation of the 1976-78 budget, and tracked expenditures by court against that same budget. With the experience of one complete budget cycle, the Office of the Executive Secretary submitted all fixed budgets for 1978. The 1980-82 biennial budget follows a similar pattern.

The purpose of the ABTS is to lend automated assistance in the analysis of all Commonwealth expenditures versus the fiscal year budget, and to track all district court revenues to both the Commonwealth and the localities. "Commonwealth expenditures" includes monies expended by the State originating from payments made by certain localities and from federal grants awarded to Virginia. All budget, expenditure, and revenue records are maintained by the Budget Tracking System at the individual court level in considerably more detail than is required or provided by the state accounting system. It is interesting to note that under the programmatic budget, another first for the 1978-80 biennial budget, individual courts were the required accounting level for all expenditures and revenues. Thus, the experience gained in 1976 and 1977 under ABTS eased the transition from line-item to program budgeting and accounting.

The Revenue Function

All revenues such as fines, court costs, special program fees, etc. collected by the Virginia district courts are reported monthly by each clerk to the Office of the Executive Secretary. These reports denote which of the monies ultimately are an income to the Commonwealth and which are retained locally. ABTS accumulates these reports for each court, and can provide for any given time period a statement by court of Commonwealth and local revenues. In FY 1978-79, the Virginia district courts and magistrates collected $25,014,117 which remained with the Commonwealth and distributed $15,367,100 to Virginia localities. The statement of Commonwealth revenues also has the capability of presenting the court's expenditures for the same period. For the fiscal year 1978-79, the Commonwealth spent $21,831,048 on the District Court and Magistrate Systems, which is a .87 ratio of expenditures to revenues.

The Expenditures Function

The expenditure function maintains records for each court or other accountable unit (e.g., Judicial Council) of the Judicial Department whose accounting records are maintained by the Office of the Executive Secretary. Payrolls and vouchers are processed to pay the expenses of salaries, fringe benefits, wages and per diem, travel, and other miscellaneous items. Payments are also processed for court appointed attorney fees, and for various other allowances and fees authorized by the courts. The expediture records are analyzed in conjunction with the budget to track actual against planned expenditures.

As stated above, from July 1978 to June 1979, expenditure transactions were processed against the District Courts and Magistrates for a total of $21,831,048. $17,569,027 of the total, or 80%, was spent for personal services, such as salaries, fringe benefits, and wages, $3,549,576 or 16% for other court costs and expenses, and the balance on supplies, equipment, travel, etc.

The Budget Function

The Office of the Executive Secretary prepared mailings to the chief judges and magistrate supervising authorities of each district. They were asked to project any additional positions needed as well as any contemplated upgrading of existing positions and to submit these with approximate effective dates. All budgetary requests returned to the Executive Secretary's Office were reviewed from both a quantitative and qualitative stance. The Committee on District Courts considered information received from the courts and magistrates concerning their needs, projected caseloads, anticipated population or industrial growth in various areas in the state, and subjective knowledge of each area in making its budgetary decisions. Financial impact statements were prepared comparing the costs associated with continuing status quo as of April 30, 1979, with the costs associated with the requested changes. Included in these computations were the results of merit increases, an overall adjustment to the salary scale from the fiscal year ending June 30, 1979, and the additional cost of merit increases resulting from possible salary scale adjustments in the 1980-82 biennium.

Part-time judges were also contacted to make their salary requests known for the coming biennium. A series of mathematical formulas were developed which gave weight to caseload of the court served, the number of years as a judge, and the number of days per week spent in court. These formulas and the legislative requirements for judicial salaries were then applied to each judge's individual salary situation in making budgetary decisions.

Additionally, the Committee considered court requests for wage employees for the 1980-1982 biennium to assist the court during absences. The hours authorized for substitute employees during the absences of the permanent staff were inversely proportional to the number of personnel in each court with the largest offices receiving no substitute hours. The rates to be paid to wage employees were limited by the classifications approved.

For planning purposes, the anticipated expenditures for substitute judges were based on forecasts made from past experience.

In the second phase of the budgeting process, the Office of the Executive Secretary surveyed each court concerning its anticipated needs for operating expenses. Since the magistrates obtain supplies through the clerks' offices, one document reported the projected requirements for the magistrates and the courts. The major categories were travel expenses, postage, and office supplies. Financial impact statements were developed for each court and magisterial subdivision within a district, each district, and for the state as a whole.

The Fiscal Office prepared the budget document with a narrative justification for the amounts requested. These and a computerized listing of all employees and vacancies for each classification as of April 30, 1979, new positions projected for the remainder of the current biennium, new positions requested for the coming biennium, and the costs associated with each were forwarded to the Division of Planning and Budget for presentation to the General Assembly at its 1980 session.

Upon final approval of the 1980-82 budget appropriations by the Governor, differences in monies requested and those received will be noted, and changes reflected accordingly. The net result of this procedure will establish a biennial budget for each court or other accountable unit in the Judicial Branch. In July 1980, each court will be notified of its fiscal year budget and, monthly thereafter, will be apprised of the status of their budget by means of the Financial Analysis Report.

DISTRICT COURTS
COMMONWEALTH EXPENDITURE SUMMARY
JULY 1, 1978–JUNE 30, 1979

The Commonwealth Expenditure Summary contains four sections:

- — Magistrate Expenditures
- — General District Court Expenditures
- — Juvenile and Domestic Relations District Court Expenditures
- — Combined District Court Expenditures

Magistrate expenditures do not include the cost of support for the Special Magistrates in Districts 13, 17, 18 and 19. These expenses are paid by the localities served.

The expenditures shown for the District Courts in the salary column include service awards and supplements. The reimbursement to the State from localities for supplements paid is deducted from the salary amount. Likewise, local payment contributions made by localities in accordance with § 16.1-69.49, Code of Virginia, are deducted from the salary amount. The amount shown is, therefore, the net expense to the State for salaries.

Fringe benefits include employer contributions made by the State for Social Security, retirement, group life insurance and medical/hospitalization insurance.

Expenses shown under the "Other" column are, for the most part, fees and allowances paid to court appointed attorneys, witnesses and jurors. Other miscellaneous expenses are also contained in the amount shown.

The expenditures of the Magistrate and District Court Systems are as follows:

Magistrate System	$ 3,702,030.28
General District Court	8,218,595.30
Juvenile & Domestic Relations District Courts	6,201,807.09
Combined District Courts	3,708,614.99

COMMONWEALTH REVENUE SUMMARY
JULY 1, 1978 - JUNE 30, 1979

The Commonwealth Revenue Summary reflects all monies collected by the District Courts that are paid to the Commonwealth. In addition, the expenditure paid by the state to support the District Courts in each locality is provided, and the relationship of this expenditure to the revenue is calculated.

The total Commonwealth Revenue for each court is listed, as well as a detail breakdown by revenue category. Miscellaneous revenues include confiscated money, liquidated damages, weighing fees, game replacement, blood tests, etc. The total expenditures include both district court and magistrate expenses (see Commonwealth Expenditures Summary). The "% EXP OF REV" column is calculated by dividing the total expenditure by the total revenue; i.e., any court whose expenditures exceed revenues will show a percentage of over 100.

Please note that for the purposes of this report, all dollar figures have been rounded to the nearest whole dollar amount. Therefore, due to rounding in some instances it may appear that figures are not totalled accurately.
